Deceived Husband, Wife Will Retain 'Garbage Can Baby'

TACOMA, Wash., July 27—(AP)—Sergeant William Pelesky, whose wife gave birth unattended to Tacoma's "garbage can baby" Tuesday, described himself last night as just another guy who stayed in one place all the time, living out the war for 37 months on a Pacific island, and added that "I didn't come back a hero."

One person in Pierce county hospital disagreed. His blue-eyed, golden haired wife, who was charged with first degree assault yesterday, said "Bill is going to stand by us." Mrs. Pelesky's bail was set at $5,000 and her attorney said it had been arranged for.

Pelesky said he would leave immediately to return to duty, expecting to go back to that same island. He had been with his wife for a number of days before the birth and never guessed her condition. Percy Gregg, acting captain of detectives, said Mrs. Pelesky related that she went to a bathroom and gave birth to the child, then wrapped it in newspapers and put it in a garbage can. It was found hours later by garbage men making their weekly round.

Pelesky said he spent those more-than-three years at his island post and then was coming home "for what we called 'that glorious 45 days.'" He paused a moment. "Yeah," he said, "that glorious 45 days!" "They said it was my 'friends and neighbors' who drafted me. I've found out about my friends and neighbors!"

As for the "other man," Mrs. Pelesky said "we're going to skip that." The hospital has been swamped. Mrs. Houston reported, with requests from people wishing to adopt the chubby, healthy little girl, but the sergeant said: "We'll keep the baby. What else could I do?"

Sam L. Sloan Named State Conservationist

PORTLAND, July 26—(AP)—Appointment of Sam L. Sloan, Portland, as state conservationist for the U. S. Soil Conservation service, succeeding Leo L. Anderson, resigned, was announced today.

Sloan, who will be stationed at Corvallis, has worked for the Conservation service for 10 years and for the past three has been zone conservationist in Western Oregon and Washington.

As state conservationist he will supervise technicians assigned to assist farmers in the state's 11 soil conservation districts, totaling about 1,700,000 acres.

Croze to Head Oregon Loan Dept. for War Veterans

SALOM, Ore., July 26—(AP)—Appointment of Al J. Croze as head of the loan department of the State Department of Veterans Affairs was announced today by Hugh Rosson, State Veterans Affairs director.

Croze has worked for the state since 1927, having been property manager for the World War Veterans State Aid Commission until it was consolidated with the State Land Board two years ago.

THAT DAM PROBLEM

By Charles V. Stanton

The Rogue river valley is being plagued by "that dam problem." Proponents of more extensive irrigation are deadlocked with wildlife conservationists, and the fever runs high. One grange even threatened to bar members of the Isaak Walton league from crossing farm property to reach fishing water.

The current disagreement of opinion was fomented by a recent report compiled by the Oregon State Game commission, based upon several years of detailed study of the Rogue river, showing beyond question that the stream, world famous for sports fishing, would be reduced virtually to the status of a frog pond, if dams projected for the Rogue river are constructed as outlined.

The report has brought to a head the question of whether recreation or irrigation will provide more productive use of the river. Obviously it is impossible to have both.

This same question eventually must be faced here in the Umpqua Valley. Dams, at least for power and flood control purposes, and possibly for limited irrigation, are under consideration on the Umpqua river, although the detailed program has not been as completely advanced as on the Rogue river. However, it will not be long until we, too, will be faced with the responsibility of a momentous decision.

Concerning the elaborate plans for harnessing West Coast rivers, the editor of the Grants Pass Courier says: "We do know that it is feasible and a lot of good common sense, too, that all gigantic government projects whether they be high dams or something else, should be studied and thoroughly studied, if you please, by the communities they affect before being allowed to be constructed. After the work is finished then it is too late to discover destructive mistakes which before could have been diverted—had a study been made."

Peddling the philosophy that every river in the country must be dammed are thousands of government engineers, all eager to demonstrate their skill in pouring concrete in prodigious quantities, building great dams, digging ditches, and tunnels, and otherwise changing the face of the landscape. A number of these engineers are fresh out of college and they are eager to get on the job if for no other reason than to prove their studies were not entirely in vain.

When these job-hungry engineers connive with local promoters and vote-seeking politicians, all affected with the diseases of "hydromania," "irrigomania," and "navigomania," which blind them to all values in water except kilowatt hours, acre feet of irrigation, or avenues for boats, then it is time for action by public-spirited individuals and interested organizations to determine just what is going on and what the results may hold for the future.

There cannot but be differences of opinion concerning the value of dams proposed for recreationally-famed rivers. It is impossible to maintain natural recreational resources on a stream filled with high dams to block fish migration and raise water temperatures. A different type of recreation has been substituted in some areas, notably under the sponsorship of the Tennessee Valley authority, where bass and various warm-water fish have been substituted for natural species. If we desire to exchange our chinook salmon, steelhead and cutthroat trout for bass, croppies and sunfish, we can maintain a form of recreation, but we can kiss the tourist business goodbye.

The question simmers down to a deliberate weighing of values. We must determine by careful study whether benefits from construction of dams outweigh the potentialities of tourist and local recreational values. These values must be considered as affecting general community welfare rather than one particular group.

More essential, however, is the necessity of eliminating animosity from our deliberation. A show of intolerance, such as demonstrated in attacks upon Isaak Walton league members at Grants Pass, does not aid clarity of thought.

We must recognize that both proponents and opponents are sincere. Prejudice and selfishness cannot be entirely avoided. These influences, however, if recognized and admitted, need not arouse antagonism, but can be made to bring about a more aggressive presentation of issues upon which to base a final decision.

Demoran won his 11th of the season for the Rainiers, limiting the pace-setters to eight hits. The Beavers scored their only run in the sixth when catcher Younker polled one out of the park with the bases empty. The Seattle attack was led by Norbert, with two doubles and a single, and Kats, with three singles. Shortstop O'Neill committed three of the four Portland bobbles, which contributed to Mossor's defeat.

Roseburg Unit in Battle Team Given Special Citation

SALEM, ORE., July 26—A letter of commendation from Maj. Gen. F. C. Sibert, commanding general, 10th corps of the 8th army, citing the 162d infantry regiment combat team for its contribution during a recent operation in the southwest Pacific, was received at the adjutant general's office here Thursday.

The letter will be included among the Oregon national guard war records.

The 162d infantry regiment, part of the famous 41st infantry division, was called into federal service September 16, 1940. Included were units from Portland, McMinnville, Salem, Eugene, Roseburg, Bend, Tillamook, Dallas, Silverton and Corvallis. The units have been overseas since March 4, 1942, and have participated in numerous engagements during the past 31 years.

The citation reads: "I wish to express my sincere gratitude to the 162d regimental combat team and the 3d battalion (reinforced), 43d regimental combat team, for their contribution to the 'Victor Five' operation."

"The manner in which they accomplished all assigned missions, under the most trying conditions, was notable and reflects great credit on the proficiency and experience of your command."

"The commanding general, 8th army, felicitated the 10th corps on the success of the operation. That success was due, in no small measure, to the co-operation and efforts of your personnel."

Rainiers Rebeat Beavers for 2 to 1 Margin in Series

By PAUL WELLS

Associated Press Sports Writer—Those never-say-die Seattle Rainiers, battling to cut Portland's Pacific Coast league lead down to "boy's size," had the Beavers' margin back to six games today after they treated hometown fans to a 7-1 victory last night. The win gave the second-place Rainiers a 2-1 edge in the series.

Sacramento and San Francisco remained neck-and-neck in their race for third position. The Solons held their half-tilt edge by slugging out a 10-7 win over the San Diego Padres while the Seals were downing the Oakland A's, 6-3, in a lower division tangle, the unpredictable Hollywood Stars made it three in a row over Los Angeles, 7-3 to move within four and a half games of the seventh-spot Angels.

Demoran won his 11th of the season for the Rainiers, limiting the pace-setters to eight hits. The Beavers scored their only run in the sixth when catcher Younker polled one out of the park with the bases empty. The Seattle attack was led by Norbert, with two doubles and a single, and Kats, with three singles. Shortstop O'Neill committed three of the four Portland bobbles, which contributed to Mossor's defeat.

DIAL-LOG

By SUSAN

Remember, it's Joe Reichman's music tonight at 6:30, when the Victory Parade of Spotlight Bands takes to the air. Joe Reichman, who was at high school when the doctor gave him just six months to live and who loved to play the piano, closed his law office and organized a band for the remaining months of his life. That happened a good many years ago and Reichman's band and Reichman are still going strong, as you will be able to judge for yourself when you dial 1490 at 6:30. Eight o'clock moves you to the ringside of Madison Square garden. It's a featherweight battle tonight with Freddy Russo meeting Sol Bartolo, National Boxing association featherweight champion, so it looks like Mr. Russo might have a job on his hands for the scheduled tenth round of the fight.

Now for Freedom of Opportunity at 9:30. Pull up your bobby socks because 'The Voice' is being saluted. However, before you swoon, we might mention that the advance dope tells us that his serious and thoughtful work toward tolerance and democracy will get the salute, not the under-nourished appearance and the voice. Anyway, listen in because this is always a good show. Since your interest, like ours, is again centered on the news, we may remind you that KRNR has a very complete news coverage, plus a direct wire, so you'll hear the latest edition hot off the wire.

Katonen, Hager Added to Filed In Wrestling Bill

Paavo Katonen and Tex Hager, two well-known professional wrestlers, have been added to the field for a four-man, single-elimination mat tournament to be staged here at the army arena Saturday night to determine the leading contender for Jack Kiser's Pacific coast light-heavyweight championship.

Buck Davidson and Walter Achiu, victors in bouts here last week, had previously been named for the pre-title test after both had requested championship matches.

All four matmen have made impressive showings here and local railbirds believe that any of the four have a chance to dethrone Kiser. In fact, Davidson, Achiu and Katonen have all scored decisions over Kiser in recent clashes. Hager, No. 1 challenger for the world championship last year, has wrestled a draw with the champion during recent months.

Championship caliber is not lacking in any of the contestants, but Katonen and Achiu are the only members of the quartet who have previously worn the coveted Kiser title. Katonen, the rugged and experienced Finn, lost the title to Kiser, Achiu, the former Dayton university football halfback and the world's greatest exponent of Jiu-jitsu, held the championship many years ago.

Hager, an extremely popular matman with Roseburg fans, proved his ability in past matches and only a year ago nearly lifted the world title in a match against Gorilla Ramos in Mexico City. Davidson is the only out-and-out villain, but he possesses a well founded wrestling technique to combine with his usual kidney-punching attack.

All four men will enter the ring at 8:30 o'clock to draw for opponents. The three bouts, two elimination tilts and the finale, will be for 30 minutes, one fall or the decision of the referee, Elton Owen.

The tournament will be the first such event held in Oregon since Gust Johnson won the coast junior heavyweight title many months ago. The winner has been assured of a title match against Jack Kiser.
