process you fill out and sign a blank (under oath and under penalty for misstatement) telling where you've been every night for 14 nights. The reason: In two weeks you could have come by air from the farthest pest corners of the earth and incubating in your blood stream might be the germs of any conceivable contagious disease.

You go through the customs—a perfunctory procedure, carried out with the most engaging courtesy. No bags are opened. They are extremely liberal about the cigarettes you may be bringing in for personal consumption.

You finally get your passport back, are FED AGAIN, are issued a rail ticket to London, and at a special exchange window you swap any loose dollars you may have left for British money.

THE special Airways train up to London is unbelievably small, according to American railroad standards, unbelievably clean and neat and amazingly comfortable.

The standard British Pullman restaurant cars of which it is made up are about as unfamiliar to an American as could be imagined. Small to begin with, they are divided into compartments that make them seem smaller still.

You are seated in a comfortable arm chair, with a table before you and another chair on the other side. Along about 11 o'clock, a steward lays the table with linen and china—lays it meticulously, instead of slapping the stuff down in front of you and daring you to do anything about it, as is the more or less standard custom in American diners (the steamersiners always excepted) in these perilous days.

A half hour passes, during which, if you choose, you may indulge yourself in stimulant, from beer up. The steward then brings a serving dish, with bread, sliced rather thick. Doing as others do, you take a slice. He then brings in a soup plate, and follows with a tureen of soup, from which he serves you.

He follows that with a salad, vegetables and cold cuts (note the term, please) and finishes up ultimately with a tart and a small cup of black coffee. It is all excellent in quality, and ample without being cloying.

NOWHERE is there a sign of a menu. Nowhere is there any suggestion of choice. You take what comes, and find it good. Nor is there any suggestion of price. You take that on faith. In the course of time he brings around a bill, expressed in shillings and pence, and you lay down a pound note hoping to the Lord it is big enough to cover. It seems to be, for he brings back change—which you shove into your pocket in what you con-

ANOTHER NEW INDUSTRY

By Charles V. Stanton

Douglas county is to have another new industry. We say "another" because industries have been moving in so rapidly that it is difficult to keep pace with them. But we are particularly interested in the announcement of the American Cross Arm company, which is preparing to start construction immediately on a mill at Roseburg, because this plant may be the beginning of a new chapter in our industrial progress.

It is our opinion that the great field for industrial development in Douglas county lies in specialized manufacture. We have the Pacific coast's largest remaining stand of merchantable timber. But a large part of that timber is destined to be placed on a sustained yield basis, which fixes a limit on the amount of raw lumber which may be cut annually. We are approaching very rapidly the sawmill capacity which may be maintained under sustained yield. This does not mean there is not room, at least temporarily, for more mills. In fact, many millions of feet of timber, privately and publicly owned, will not come under the sustained yield program. This volume of uncontrolled timber will supply extensive mill operations for many years. But, eventually, we will reach a point where annual cut will be limited to annual growth. If, in the meantime, we shall have built up a much larger cutting capacity than the eventual sustained yield program will support, the surplus mills—those failing to set up a sustained yield operating unit—will be forced out of business and someone will be hurt financially.

In normal times there is only a small margin of profit in sawmilling, particularly under a transportation handicap such as has existed in Douglas county. When rough lumber goes into construction or finished manufacture, there is a very substantial amount of waste. It becomes quite apparent, therefore, that by producing the manufactured product near the source of raw materials, cost of transportation on waste is eliminated.

Douglas county offers an exceptional opportunity to wood manufacturing industries. There is a field here for several plywood plants. There is room for sash and door factories, plants to manufacture broom handles and dowels, furniture factories, etc. The list is long. In addition, we should have plants for the manufacture of alcohol, adhesives, chemicals, plastics, etc., from sawdust and other wood waste. Thus we could utilize every portion of the tree. Even the bark is being converted now into a very fine synthetic cork.

Douglas county has one outstanding advantage for the companies that come in early. We have an assured lumber production for many years and, if sustained yield policies are continued, as we expect they will be, production is assured indefinitely. Those firms coming into the county in the immediate future and making contracts to obtain a continued supply of raw materials will have a guarantee of continued successful operation, insofar as resources are concerned.

Each new industry which comes into the county arouses interest on the part of other concerns looking for locations. Consequently the coming of the American Cross Arm company means, perhaps, that some other manufacturing group will be led to investigate Douglas county's possibilities. Many firms are building plants today in localities where timber resources are nearing the point of exhaustion, indicating little investigation into the availability of raw materials in future years. For those who are seeking long-time operation in an area where supply is assured for many years to come, and probably perpetually, Douglas county offers the outstanding opportunity.

DIAL-LOG

With the tempo speeding up in the Pacific, we're again watching the teletype like hawks, and can assure you that any hot news that breaks will be relayed to you immediately. It's getting to the place again where we keep the speakers around the studio either turned off completely or timed so low that we can hear the warning bell that precedes a bulletin. We'd like to remind you that we have a very complete network news coverage beginning at 7:00 A. M. which will be extended at any time there is anything special. Likewise, there are three editions of state and local news each day except Sunday. We'll admit that we get a bit tired of hearing each commentator in turn serve up the same news story, but, on the other hand, suppose we turned the radio off and missed one of the news bulletins.

ceive to be a casual manner but later count with intense application to detail and arrive at the not too positive conclusion (the British monetary system throws you for a loss for days before you get the hang of it) that your lunch has stood you up to the extent of about 60 cents American.

Whereupon you relax. "If this is what it's going to be like," you muse, "I won't have to cable home for more dough." As a matter of fact, its a slightly optimistic introduction to London food prices. This writer hasn't yet tackled the provinces, but in London the cost of living out is about on a par with New York or Washington or San Francisco—which is to say that each time you pay a check, at a fairly decent place, you get a perceptible, although not necessarily fatal, wrench in the region of the wallet.

Franco to Battle Olsen in Mat Bill Here Saturday

Young Franco, the Roseburg youngster who made an impressive local wrestling debut here some weeks ago in a match against Paavo Katonen, will be featured in the semi-final match of Don Owen's weekly mat show at the armory Saturday night. On a short leave from Fort Lewis, Franco will engage Milt Olsen.

Headline attraction will be a Pacific coast light-heavyweight championship bout in which Jack Kiser will defend his coveted crown against the challenge of Katonen.

Douglas county grappling followers await with interest Franco's second appearance here. Against Katonen the Roseburg lad was meeting one of the most experienced men in the sport and one who also held a weight advantage. Franco, who has had considerable experience in the Hawaiian circuit as a soldier wrestler, is given a good chance against Olsen, a former coast titleholder.

Regardless of the outcome, the semi-final is expected to be a fast and interesting bout in which modern matwork will be at its best. Finn May Regain Title. The Kiser-Katonen championship skirmish is expected to be a rugged affair in which the Finnish matmaster will be getting one of his infrequent opportunities to regain the championship.

Two specialized holds, Kiser's "skin the cat" and Katonen's "hagman's hold", are expected to have considerable bearing on the eventual outcome.

The swifter Kiser, who has the advantage of youth and agility, has been able to successfully defend his title on three previous occasions against Katonen's challenge, but the Finn points out that he has lost but one decision to Kiser in the title tilt. Katonen will post a $100 forfeit to guarantee that he makes the necessary weight.

Elton Owen will referee both matches. The first one will start at 8:30.

C. of C. Head Backs Plan For Industrial Peace

SPOKANE, Aug. 3—(AP)—U. S. Chamber of Commerce President Eric A. Johnston said yesterday that the national chamber "welcomes" the proposal made by Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, and endorsed by Secretary of Labor Schwelienbach, that industrial peace be promoted by a voluntary conference between management and labor.

"Senator Vandenberg is right," Johnston said. "We cannot bring about industrial cooperation merely by legislation. The voluntary conference between management and labor is in the best American tradition."

Beavers Defeat Stars as Rainiers Nose Out Seals

(By the Associated Press)

Portland and Seattle, continuing their breakneck pace as they neared the Pacific Coast league three-quarter pole, are still separated by six games after both clubs won their third in a row last night.

The loop-leading Beavers, maintaining their jinx over the Hollywood Stars, breezed to an easy 9-3 victory, but the Rainiers had to go 11 innings before they nosed out the San Francisco Seals 4-3.

The battle for the other two first division berths tightened as the Oakland Aorns divided a doubleheader with the San Diego Padres, dropping the curtain valser 3-1 and taking the nightcap 5-6. The split moved the Oaks within half a game of the fourth-berth Seals. Sacramento's Solons remained two tilts ahead of San Francisco after losing to the Los Angeles Angels 4-1.

Pulford Wins His 18th. Righthander Pulford, ace of the Portland pitching staff, chalked up his 18th win of the season against eight losses as he let Hollywood down with eight hits and three tallies. The Beavers drove Marshall, the Stars' starting hurler, off the hill with a six-run outburst. The defeat was Hollywood's 14th straight at the hands of the Beavers.

Seattle had to come from behind to shade the Seals 4-3, with pinch-hitter Matheson playing the hero's role. He drove in the tying run in the first of the ninth with a sharp single, and then repeated in the 11th to send Dobbs scampering home with the winning counter. Matheson did not rejoin the Rainiers until this week, having been anchored in a defense plant, Syl Johnson, who relieved Demoran in the ninth, got credit for the victory.

36-Point Blessing

NEW YORK, Aug. 3—(AP)—Rita Mundt, 28, has just presented her soldier husband with 36 points—two girls and a boy. The healthy triplets were born Wednesday night. Their father, Sgt. Frederick Mundt of the Bronx, was sent to Germany with occupation forces.
