POET'S CORNER

A YOUNG ARCHER IN WARTIME

By Alden Harness

Nevada Nigers, feeding tigers
At a circus in Rangoon,
Got jilted badly by Bell Bradley;
Then his boss discharged him soon.
This disaster tried to master
And bring him grief that would not flee,
But joy and laughter, four days after,
From that tyrant set him free.
Above the ocean, with emotion,
In the blueness far away,
Through softest sky-land to an island
In his plane he flew one day.
Where South Sea daughters walked by waters
Of a deep and long lagoon,
This newcomer did that summer
With nature's beauty grow in tune.
He was selling in his dwelling
Delicious honey with a smile,
When deepest feeling, through him stealing,
Told him war was on that isle.
He heard unceasing and increasing
Tumult, showing on that shore
That foes were meeting and defeating
Island warriors more and more.
Where smoke clouds hovered, he discovered
That the earth was scorched and bare
And that atrocious and ferocious
Foemen tortured victims there.
Two maidens reached him and beseeched him
To assist brave men and wives
In fighting raiders and invaders
Who would terminate their lives.
With packs on shoulders over boulders
In a dried-up river-bed;
Then from a tavern to a cavern
In a distant cliff they sped.
Hid near passes with these lasses,
He fights with arrows and a bow
And sends with ease the Japanese
To burning places down below.

DAILY DEVOTIONS

DR. CHARLES A. EDWARDS

Thanks Be To God

The war is over, everywhere. "Today the quiet of peace is abroad, no guns roar Peace has drop, no guns roar. Peace has come again and now it is peace all over the world. This is a day of thankfulness and solemn joy, not a day for celebration. It has been too dearly bought.

And as you offer thanks to God today, thanks for victory, thanks to the gallant men and women who fought and died to win that victory. We join you in humble thanksgiving.

In those prayers let us remember the homes where victory will not mean joy. Where on this day they know that a white cross somewhere far away was the price of victory. Let us remember, too, the men and women in hospitals who bear the awful scars of that victory. And for them, let us dedicate ourselves to protecting the peace they won. With prayer, with work, with bonds, with consecrated citizenship let us guard that peace and today joyfully and prayerfully, give to Alinight God our hearty thanks."—Amen.

Oregon Butter Exceeds National Average in V-A

CORVALLIS, Ore., Aug. 17 — (AP)— Oregon butter averages 16,535 international units of vitamin A to a pound—compared to the national average of only 15,000 units, Oregon state college experiment station reported today.

Tests were made on creamery butter in different states by the Department of Agriculture. The amount of vitamin A in butter, said the department, depends directly on the amount of green pasture and good quality roughage eaten by the cow.

Farmers were urged to cure hay by methods that retain its green color. In changing color, hay loses its carotine, the substance from which vitamin A is derived.

Billions Worth of Water Jobs Await Green Light

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17. — (AP)— Five billion dollars of flood control and navigational projects await only a congressional starting gun.

The work was authorized before and during the war. What's needed are specific appropriations.

The War department's chief of engineers' office has about $4,000,000,000 and the Bureau of Reclamation has approximately $1,300,000,000 in authorizations — subject to Capitol hill coming through wit happropriations.

The projects include flood control, navigation, irrigation, river and harbor and similar undertaking. How many projects will get under way through congressional grants will depend upon how well private industry absorbs the manpower made idle as a result of war's end.
