

New Building for Agriculture Dept. Added to R. H. S.

Roseburg High school has a new agriculture department building of 2880 square feet of floor space. The lumber from the old Riverside two-room school has been utilized in this new building under the direction of Smith-Hughes agriculture instructor, Homer W. Grow, with actual construction being carried on by Shop Instructors Harry E. Wilson and Alva Laws. This building, long needed by the High school, will greatly aid in an expanding agriculture program for the local community, made possible by the loan of thousands of dollars worth of equipment by the State Vocational department, states Paul S. Elliott, city school superintendent.

The space vacated by the agriculture department in the main High school building is being converted to accommodate general shop classes making possible the continuance of classes in wood working from Junior High school. Classes in sheet metal, plumbing and electrical wiring are to be added to this department.

New dressing and shower rooms for boys are being built under the grandstand since the accommodations in the main building are too small for Coach Ingram's classes and football squad. These rooms are very handy to the new turf football field.

Japan Getting Ready for Surrender, Rehabilitation

at last began to extend to bypassed Mid-Pacific island garrisons and dihard troops in the mountains of the Philippines.

All of this was incident to hurried preparations for allied occupation of Japan and the signing of surrender documents Aug. 31 on the battleship Missouri in Tokyo bay, which the Domei news agency said would naturally be accompanied by "feelings of hate and uneasiness."

Tokyo's tabulation today of reported bomb casualties did nothing to ease this feeling. The government-controlled radio listed 260,000 killed, 412,000 injured, 9,200,000 homeless and 2,200,000 houses demolished.

"Almost the entire Japanese mainland (Honshu island) received heavy damage as the result of enemy air attacks," Tokyo added.

The Japanese will have another display of American air power Sunday by Japanese account or Tuesday (by General MacArthur's report) when the greatest armada of air transports ever assembled begins unloading thousands of U. S. troops in full combat array on Atsugi airdrome, 20 miles from Tokyo.

MacArthur confirmed previously Tokyo reports that he would arrive at the airdrome Tuesday with airborne forces, simultaneous with the landing of marines and sailors at the Yokosuka naval base guarding the entrance to Tokyo bay.

Allied Power Poised
The sea approaches to Tokyo will swarm with the massed naval might of the combined American Third and Fifth fleets and British Pacific fleets. These forces put on a 1,000-plane aerial acrobatics show off the Honshu coast to pass time yesterday.

MacArthur indicated that mine-sweeping allied forces also may promptly be clearing both Japanese and allied mines out of such major Oriental harbors as Osaka, Sasebo, Nagasaki, Shanghai, Canton, Hongkong and Singapore. Japanese shipping and air forces were ordered immobilized, anti-aircraft guns decommissioned, ammunition stored.

Japanese troops were already evacuating the initial occupation area near Tokyo, into which Domei said 50,000 to 60,000 allied soldiers will move.

In a small but significant surrender yesterday, Japanese aboard the U. S. destroyer escort Levy in the Central Pacific Marshall Islands said the garrison of 3,500 on Mili atoll gave up. It was the opening wedge in surrender of 120,000 Japanese troops on by-passed islands, including the once mighty fortresses of Truk and Rabaul.

Peace negotiations were begun in Philippine mountains on Luzon, Mindanao and Cebu Islands. Tokyo said garrisons on Marcus, 1,200 miles southeast of Tokyo, and a number of unnamed southern islands were starving and asked MacArthur for permission to send relief expeditions.

Continued unsettled conditions in China brought new protests from Tokyo. The New China Daily News, Chungking communist newspaper, said communist armies in North China "gathered their strength for an all-out offensive."

It reported communist armies engaged in street fighting in Tientsin, near Peking, Tsingtao and Nanking.

Tokyo warned the communists the Japanese would take "appropriate measures" if they continued the "unlawful occupation" banned by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. In a second protest to MacArthur the Japanese complained about "activities of irregular forces, bandits and disturbances of mobs."

Chiang also faced surrender difficulties in Hongkong and Manchuria. British and Chinese were reported conferring on which nation would occupy Hongkong. Chiang named two generals "to accept the Japanese surrender in Manchuria," almost all of which has already been occupied by Soviet Russian troops.

Red army paratroopers occupied Port Arthur, former Czarist naval base won by the Japanese in 1905. Airborne Soviet troops landed in the Kurile Islands, north of Japan.
