House Committee Cuts Deeper Into Tax Plans

tion, offered the compromise program. It was adopted as a substitute for a proposal by Representative Robertson embodying the administration program and a Republican proposal for a flat 20 per cent cut for everyone.

Surtax Scale Reduced—Under present law the three per cent normal tax is levied against net income over $500 regardless of the number of a taxpayer's dependents.

The adopted Carlson plan stipulates that the surtax exemptions—$500 for the taxpayer and $500 for each dependent—be applied to the normal tax. Then, the surtax schedule would be reduced four points. This would mean that it would start at a 16 instead of 20 per cent assessment on the first $2,000 of taxable income after exemptions. Similarly, the next surtax bracket would be cut from 22 to 18 per cent, and so on up the scale.

Chief reason for the compromise plan is to permit holders of the old government securities to continue to gain some tax exemptions. Interest on these bonds is exempt from the present normal tax but not from the surtaxes. There is no exemption for interest on bonds issued in the last few years.
