immersed in your bath you're likely to be bursting into song. There is more to this morning tea than meets the eye.

THE cabin boy, like all the crew of this ship, is a Mohammedan from India. His store of English is limited.

You ask him if it's a nice day and he answers: "Yesir"—although it may be raining cats and dogs. You inquire if the bath is ready and he says: "Yesir," and you leap from your covers and wrap a towel around your middle and barge down the passageway only to be shooed back by the bath boy who tells you in shocked displeasure: "Bath not ready yet; I call you."

As the days pass you discover that nothing is worse form than booming into the bath room without having been notified officially that the bath is drawn and waiting.

WITH your tea out of the way and your bath out of the way, duly shaved and dressed and to the extent of your resources presentable, you go down to breakfast—where a shock awaits you.

There will be GRAPEFRUIT—which in Europe has been more precious than diamonds and rubies and even scarcer. There will be cereal, even the ready-to-eat American kinds. There will be smoked fish, including kippers, which when done in the English manner are out of this world.

Following that there will be BACON AND EGGS—real eggs, laid by a hen, with a shell, which has been broken and the egg poured out and fried in the manner made dear to us by traditions of our ancestors—not some yellowish powder poured out of a carton, mixed with a little water and steamed up into something unprintable.

AS your eyes become accustomed to all this shining glory, you see BUTTER plates with great slabs of a fabulous golden substance which you are privileged to keep chipping off and applying to your toast until it runs out of your ears. This is certainly a dream life you are living.

There will of course be marmalade to wind up with, for without marmalade no English breakfast would be official. There will be cups filled with a dark brown fluid alleged to be coffee, but at this point it would be kindest to draw the curtain. Our English cousins are trying, and every sporting instinct in our blood calls for applause and encouragement for those who try with all their might.

But after all coffee is an American trick. No other race has yet mastered it. But give the English time. They're an intelligent and persistent people, and they're working at it.

THE truth is that this ship is a little sample of the brave new world. So far as we on board know it is the first to cross the Atlantic in its beautiful white peace paint. Around us, going and coming, as the days wear on are other ships still in their drab war coat of gray, most of them still mounting their guns. Twice neighbor ships have altered their course to approach closer to get a look at us in our peace clothes.

It is a motor ship, its diesel engines purring like the motor of a new car—none of the propeller throb that in the past on shipboard has bent upon your brain until in time it becomes like a dull toothache. Its 12 cabins are as pleasant and cozy as your

LOOP SERVICE NEEDED

By Charles V. Stanton

The announced plan of Pacific Greyhound Lines to inaugurate a Reedsport-Roseburg bus service on a month's trial basis is indeed welcomed by those who will be served, but we fear the venture will not prove as successful as it should, because of the limited area embraced.

The proposed bus line will be of special benefit only to the people of Reedsport and those residing between Reedsport and Drain. The section between Drain and Roseburg is fairly adequately served at present, although a local service doubtless will divide patronage with existing schedules. The new line, as proposed, offers no benefits to Roseburg people who desire transportation to the coast, nor does it provide needed additional schedules between Roseburg and Coos Bay.

Should the Greyhound lines establish a continuous loop service with key points at Roseburg, Coos Bay, Reedsport and Drain we firmly believe a profitable operation would be assured.

The line now being proposed would serve, at best, only about 3,000 to 3,500 total population. The bus would be used principally by lower Umpqua residents travelling to and from inland points. It would not serve inland residents desiring to go to the coast.

On the other hand, a loop service, with schedules each way daily, would draw from a population of from 25,000 to 30,000.

In our opinion, an adequate and profitable service could be maintained by operation of four busses. Two busses would leave Coos Bay for Reedsport each morning at the same time two were dispatched from Roseburg. One of the busses from each terminal point would take the Reedsport-Drain route and the other the Roseburg-Coos Bay highway. The vehicles would return to their respective terminals in the late afternoon. Thus each community would have daily service in each direction, instead of limiting travel from the lower Umpqua valley to inland points only.

There is a vast interchange of business between inland Douglas county and coast points of Douglas and Coos counties. This business will grow as the lumber industry continues to expand. Transportation facilities at present are totally inadequate. One need only check the great volume of passenger automobiles travelling the two connecting roads to realize the potential patronage.

Instead of serving only Reedsport and the small intermediate communities between that city and Drain, a loop service would draw from Roseburg, Camas Valley, Bridge, Myrtle Point, Coquille, Coos Bay and North Bend.

The Reedsport Chamber of Commerce, extremely desirous of better communication with Roseburg, is vigorously drumming up trade for the proposed new Reedsport-Roseburg service, hoping to make the 30-day trial run successful. But chances for profitable operation of a service benefiting only a very limited population, we fear, are extremely slim. On the other hand, there is every opportunity to satisfy a great transportation need, serving ten times as many people, with only a slightly larger investment in equipment and manpower.

We sincerely hope the Greyhound Lines will seriously consider inauguration of continuous loop service, holding far greater opportunity for success. We dislike to have our chances for future bus line service to the coast wrecked through possible failure of a run which has very limited possibilities for profit, when an opportunity for satisfactory operation on a moderately larger scale is obvious.

It has been fitted out regardless—as witness the butter and the bacon and eggs. It is a salesman designed to say to you: "This is the way to travel."

MUCH OF THE HOPE of Britain is bound up in this ship and the others that will come from the ways of British yards as rapidly as possible—for the clear, sharp, diamond-hard truth is that if Britain is to LIVE she must TRADE OVERSEAS, and in SHIPS British heavy-industry commodities must be carried throughout the world, returning with raw materials.

The passenger cabins are a sideline, designed to bring in some income that otherwise would be lost. In the hard years to come, Britain is going to need, in order to balance her exchange, every outside dollar she can lay hands on.

Evil Isms Going Gradually From Japan, Germany

By DeWITT MacKENZIE

AP Foreign Affairs Analyst. It really looks as though we are getting ahead with the colossal task of eliminating despotism, militarism, barbarism and the other forms of evil from Japan and Germany.

Both MacArthur and Eisenhower have made further sensational moves in the reformation of these criminal nations. The two generals, having beaten their swords into plowshares, are digging deep and ripping up the poisonous roots.

Indeed, in the case of medieval Japan, the sudden removal of governmental repression of thought and action from the public has created a situation that may result in rebellion to do away completely with Nippon's ancient autocratic rule. However, MacArthur is busy carrying out the Potsdam proclamation of the Big Four on July 26, calling on Japan to surrender.

"The Japanese government," said this statement, "shall remove all obstacles to the revival and strengthening of the Japanese people. Freedom of speech and religion and of thought, as well as respect for the fundamental human rights, shall be established."

MacArthur Obays Washington. This recently was emphasized in a directive from Washington, and MacArthur was told that if the people resorted to the use of force in seeking political reform, he was to interfere any more than necessary to protect United Nations interests. So when the Jap government still clung to repressive measures, the general struck.

The supreme commander yesterday decreed a Magna Carta for Japan. He ordered the government to remove all bars to freedom of speech, religion and assembly. He further decreed the disbandment of the "thought police," which were the equivalent of Germany's gестапо, and ordered the release of their 3,000 political prisoners who had been locked up—some for many years—for expressing ideas displeasing to the pre-surrender government.

Rebellion May Erupt. Today the Japanese cabinet resigned rather than obey MacArthur's order. The Mikado is said to have remarked, upon receiving the resignations, "That is good and I accept." The retiring premier, Higashikuni, interjected this as meaning that a stronger ministry and one more acceptable to the Americans could be formed.

As the result of this explosion, neutral observers believe that rebellion against the imperial regime is a strong possibility. I don't think we should jump to conclusions at this juncture, but simply recognize that the potentialities of a popular upheaval are there.

Blow at Fascism Seen in Removal of Gen. Patton

BERLIN, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Berlin's Soviet-sponsored newspaper said yesterday that Gen. George S. Patton's removal as administrator of Bavaria for allegedly permitting Nazis to remain in office proves "the American people are on the watch to extinguish the firebrand of Fascism completely."

A front-page editorial in the Berliner Zeitung, signed by Dr. Guenter Kertzschner, asserted: "The American people in their protest against Patton's attitude displayed a sure sense of right. We are convinced other great peoples such as the Russian, English and French have reached a similar decision."

"Democratic peoples do not joke about vital political questions. That is the first lesson of the Patton case. The political instinct of a Democratic people is wiser than a 'wise' politician who would attempt to oppose the force of historical necessity. That is the second lesson."

"The German administration in Bavaria has now decided to root out Nazism. Thus a precedent is created which will be useful in similar cases. That is the third lesson."

"In a sense Gen. Patton has performed a service by raising an important question in clear-cut form. It has been solved in an anti-Fascist way by the weight of democratic public opinion."
