Liberty Must Be Pruned To Aid State, Monty Says

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery declared today that successful conversion from war to peace demands that Britain's leaders "maintain close and strict control on many things which in the past were left to individual enterprise." Montgomery asserted that "today we have all got to sacrifice some part of our personal liberty in the service of the state and we've got to fit our efforts as individuals into the pattern which the state lays down."
"Only in this way," he added, "shall we have any hope of tackling with success the colossal tasks that now lie before us."

Russia Menaces Turkey With Army Aided by Bulgaria

By DE WITT MacKENZIE
(AP Foreign Affairs Analyst) There are the makings of an other dangerous upheaval in the Balkans.
Freshly arrived Russian troops, with tanks and artillery, are "maneuvering" in southern Bulgaria near the Turkish border.
Reliable estimates place the Red military force in Bulgaria at 200,000. The Bulgarian army is being reorganized under the tutelage of Russian training staffs, and has the appearance of being an auxiliary to the Soviet force.
Why all this military activity?
Well, the answer must be a guess, but we don't have to look far for a likely answer.
As I read the signs, the dispute between Moscow and Turkey over (1) control of the Dardanelles and (2) the territorial concessions which the Soviet wants in Turkish Armenia, seems to be coming to a head. The stakes are vast, and both sides are packing guns—precautionary, probably, but none the less suggestive.
The way things now stand, Turkey controls the Dardanelles under the so-called Montreux convention of 1936—signed by Bulgaria, France, Britain, Greece, Japan, Romania, Turkey, Russia and Yugoslavia. This treaty permitted Turkey to remilitarize the strait. Freedom of passage for other nations was recognized, excepting that Turkey could close the Dardanelles if she was at war or was threatened by war.

The Montreux convention didn't trouble Russia at the time of its signing, but it has become a mighty matter now that she is the dominant power of that part of the world and wants free access to the Mediterranean.
Thus it came about that at the last meeting of the Big Three at Potsdam the Soviet asked for a revision of the Montreux convention. President Truman stood for an international commission to control the strait—and there the matter still rests. The Turks naturally don't cotton to the idea much, and hold that the convention would have to be altered by the same countries which established it.
To add fuel to the fire, another question developed between Moscow and Ankara. The Soviet Union claims three districts of Turkish Armenia. These are in the northeast corner of Asiatic Turkey, at the southeastern end of the Black Sea, and lie against the frontiers of the Soviet republics of Georgia and Armenia.

The three districts were ceded to Turkey by Russia in 1921, as a good will gesture. They now have a strategic value which makes them valuable to Russia.
The Turkish press has been blunt in declaring that Ankara will refuse to give up these districts. The Turks are tough and probably mean what they say.
Whether they could back up what they say, or would try to, is quite another question.
In any event, the indications are that Russia is going to demand an early settlement of both these questions. Bulgaria of course will stand solidly with Russia. The Sofia provisional government—which is still unrecognized by the United States and Britain, who maintain that it doesn't represent the whole country—is heavily communistic.

"SAFETY MAN"

"Safety" is every railroader's watchword; maintaining it is his number one duty.

But to many, one trainman particularly symbolizes safety: the passenger train brakeman...the "flagman." Like a football safety man, this S.P. safety man plays far in the backfield. Even during an ordinary station stop, he drops back thirty feet behind the last car. On unscheduled stops, he must immediately go back far enough to insure protection for his train.

He places "torpedoes" on the track and waits on guard—with flag or lamp—until the train is set to go.
When a whistle signal recalls him, he leaves behind a burning "fuse"—a bright red flare that burns for ten minutes (even when wet) to caution following trains.
But all this is just one of our safeguards. There are also amazing mechanical watchdogs (such as automatic block signals, Centralized Traffic Control and Automatic Train Control) and such safety measures as regular track and equipment inspection, physical examination of trainmen, double-checking of train orders, and regular inspection of all trainmen's watches.
With all this backing him up, the brakeman has helped make trains the safest way to travel. You're actually safer on a train than in your own home!

The brakeman is a key man on our Southern Pacific team—one important key man among the thousands of experienced railroaders who guide and guard every train on every mile of its run.

S-P The friendly Southern Pacific
