Frankness Need Seen to Fend Off Third World War

By DeWitt MacKenzie AP Foreign Affairs Analyst. A fellow commuter this morning turned from the headlines in his newspaper and asked me in pre-dawn, sepulchral tones: "Well, when will the next war come—in about five years?"

That pessimistic query put me on the alert. One doesn't for at least a minute talk about world wars in these atomic-bomb days without pausing to think. Anyway, my reply was that while there are very real dangers to be overcome, there is no sound reason why these shouldn't be met successfully. I believe that, too.

Certainly there is cause for anxiety, but there's nothing to cause surprise. The international difficulties are mild compared with what might have developed from such a cataclysm as that through which our poor old globe has just passed. Not only is the world physically torn in many places, but its whole politico-economic structure is undergoing vast change.

Spheres of Influence. Great powers—Germany, Italy, Japan—have disappeared and there's an inevitable realignment of spheres of influence which are causing heart-burnings. British Foreign Secretary Bevin, speaking in the House of Commons yesterday, declared that the great difficulty in achieving international cooperation rests in "whether or not you can entirely obliterate what are called spheres of influence and power politics."

"Sometime in these negotiations—I make the confession—power politics seems to me to be naked and unashamed." The quickest way to overcome this evil is the employment of frankness among nations, and Bevin sounded this note when he appealed to the great powers to "really put the cards on the table face upwards."

While naming no names, the foreign minister hinted that Britain was suspicious of Russia's territorial demands. He put it this way: "You cannot help being a little bit suspicious if a great power wants to go right across the throat of the British commonwealth."

Bloc Tendencies Rapped. That's putting the cards on the table face upwards. And we've faced quite a lot of cards faced so far this week. The Russian Foreign Minister Molotov started it in his Moscow address Tuesday, when he condemned the tendency towards formation of a bloc of western European powers, and asked that all the secrets in connection with the manufacture of the atomic bomb be placed at Russia's disposal.

Former Prime Minister Winston Churchill also turned up some cards in the House of Commons debate on foreign affairs yesterday. The old maestro did a colorful job of blunt talking, especially when he said Russia wouldn't share the secrets of the atomic bomb if she alone had them, and urged Prime Minister Attlee not to press America during the forthcoming conference in Washington to divulge details.

DIAL-LOG

Are you Johnson Family fans, too? We all are around the station and have been getting many a chuckle out of the last episodes. Well, here's a story about what's coming next. Jimmy Scribner, who does all 22 voices on the Johnson family, forgot his wallet the other morning when he was going to work. He stopped in to buy some gas, and had a full tank before he realized he didn't have any money with him.

SPORTSMEN ACTIVE

By Charles V. Stanton

The Roseburg Rod and Gun club, under direction of President John Amacher and an enthusiastic board of directors, is stirring into renewed life. The club has not been overly active during the war period, although it has maintained an aggressive legislative campaign. But its program of trap-shooting, wild life propagation and conservation, and social activities has been allowed to lag, due to the many important wartime responsibilities of the membership in general.

But plans now in process of execution will bring the Rod and Gun club back into prominence. A vigorous membership campaign for the year 1946 already is in progress. The goal is 1,000 members. Rival teams, under leadership of Mert Krell and Paul Caskey, are in the field, the losing side being pledged to supply a feed for the winners.

Consideration is being given a proposal to secure an adequate piece of ground for erection of a clubhouse where the club may hold regular meetings and entertainments. Included also would be a lounge where members could meet to swap fishing and hunting yarns.

Trapshooting is to be resumed, with a turkey shoot already arranged. It is planned to hold shoots at more frequent intervals as soon as ammunition becomes plentiful.

Nor is the club's more important function, conservation and preservation of wildlife and natural resources being overlooked. A committee is at work securing access lanes to fishing streams, dedication to public use of picnic spots, preservation of roadside beauty, elimination of stream pollution, better law enforcement, etc. Much study is being given the legislative program.

Altogether the Rod and Gun club has taken a big bite. But the bite will not be too big to chew if members continue with the same enthusiasm now demonstrated. Success will be assured if the goal of 1,000 members can be reached, for, with that number of persons interested in the program, nothing can stop the constructive work already outlined.

The Roseburg club, after perfecting its organization, should, we believe, set as its next objective closer cooperation with neighboring sportsmen's groups.

The Eugene Sportsmen's club has been showing a great deal of pep, under the leadership of Mert Folts.

Dick Strite, reporting in the Eugene Register-Guard, reproduces letters written to the State Highway department, protesting muddying of rivers by gravel contractors and requesting a "settling sump" clause in contracts for gravel removal; protest to the State Sanitary Engineer against pollution of the Siuslaw and Umpqua rivers by logging operations and mills, and asking that streams be protected by requiring operators to boom waste material so it will be beached, and a proposal to the Oregon State Game commission that it undertake publication of a monthly magazine as a means of uniting sportsmen of the state and carrying out desirable programs of conservation.

Here certainly are projects to which all sports groups could give cooperative support. The Eugene club should not be forced to carry the ball alone.

The Rogue river district has several strong clubs, and closer union with these groups can unite all Southern Oregon sportsmen into an effective force. It would not take long to build up state-wide cooperation in preservation of outdoor resources.

With thousands of veterans returning to Oregon after years away from home in military service, fishing, hunting, trapshooting, and other outdoor sports will receive increasing attention. Oregon is engaged in a most important campaign to promote the tourist industry. A state-wide advertising club is leading the effort. A united sportsmen's organization could be a powerful adjunct in supporting the undertaking and promoting wider use of Oregon's recreational facilities.

Fewer Visitors, More Work Now Truman's Program

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8. (AP)—President Truman is trimming his White House calling list sharply this week to permit him to grapple with grave home front and diplomatic problems. In contrast to the 15 or more separate engagements that normally crowd his calendar each day, Mr. Truman had only four each Monday and yesterday. Associates spoke of this as evidence of a second phase of his administration. They told a reporter it was a further indication of Mr. Truman's determination to assume a more aggressive course of administration and party leadership as contrasted with greater emphasis in the past on delegated authority.

Army to Discharge GIs Who Were Prisoners. WASHINGTON, Nov. 8. (AP)—The War department yesterday authorized immediate discharge from the Army of soldiers who were prisoners of the enemy for at least 60 days. The action, making the Army policy in this matter uniform with that of the Navy and Marine corps, was made to apply to all soldiers who were out of U. S. control in enemy or enemy-occupied territory under honorable conditions for as long as 60 days. Discharge points will not figure at all. The department estimated 25,000 men would be eligible for such discharges.

Taxi, Delivery Services Occupy Same Quarters. Joint offices at 225 N. Jackson street are being occupied by the B. and B. Taxi service and the Bantam Delivery service. The taxi company recently was organized by La Von Baker, following discharge from military service, and the Bantam Delivery service is being managed by Baker's uncle, Clifton Nemeik, who is operating a fleet of Austin panel cabs. Although located in the same quarters, the two business firms will maintain separate phone numbers and identities.
