In the Day's News

All-India Congress along with Hindu and Mahasabha party LEADERS tour the city and appeal to the crowds to be peaceful.

That raises an extremely interesting question: Who has been STIRRING UP THE TROUBLE? (If the leaders are really trying to calm things down.)

The answer that naturally suggests itself is that the ruckus has been promoted by the reckless elements that are present in all populations.

THIS writer is willing to risk a guess that where actual starvation doesn't enter the picture the average run of people throughout the world are more interested in PEACE and the rising standards of comfort and welfare that are possible ONLY in peace-time than in wars and revolutions.

A lot of our troubles are caused by the personal ambitions of outs who want to get in.

If that is true, the three great nations that now hold the reins of power can do more good by POLICING THE WORLD HONESTLY, preventing ambitious and unscrupulous outs from rocking the boat in an effort to get in and thus giving peace a chance to flourish, than in any other way.

An optimist bobs into the news. Philip John Noel-Baker, British minister of state, tells the opening session of the United Nations preparatory commission in London:

"It is grotesque and wicked to believe that any government in the world wants or is preparing for another war."

As it stands, that is probably true enough. But he then adds: "No people, without exception, would ALLOW its government to start another war."

AS of this moment, that may be true—for this is a war-torn world.

But only a super-optimist could hope that in the years immediately ahead the general run of people will become so wise and so clearly conscious of their own best interests that they will no longer permit themselves to be led astray by fire-breathing demagogues with their clever techniques of hatred-stirring and suspicion-breeding.

Until people generally become FAR MORE REALISTIC as to their own best interests, demagogues will continue to flourish. As long as conscienceless demagogues retain the power to fire masses of people with hatred and suspicion, enduring peace will be only a dream.

THE RUSSIAN THREAT

By Charles V. Stanton

General Eisenhower is quoted in news reports as stating that Russia has nothing to gain by war with the United States and "wants to be a friend." It is indeed pleasing to find someone—particularly someone in authority—who does not envision Russia as an immediate military threat to the continued existence of the United States.

We make no pretense of being an authority on foreign affairs and international relationships, but it is our opinion we have much less to fear from Russia than from some nations which seem bent upon creating a rift between us and the Soviet Union.

There appears to be an organized propaganda program in progress to stir up distrust of Russia; to build up a feeling of fear within the United States that Russian power and influence is to be brought against us. Alienation is certain to follow if this program meets with success. War between the United States and Russia can be visualized if the people of this country can be imbued with the idea that our future safety is menaced.

One of the tricks of power politics is to involve in war any nation which threatens to become strong enough to reduce the power and influence of another nation. The United States and Russia are in a favorable position today to dominate world trade and politics. They could combine their influence and reduce to minority places world powers which in past years have held international trade leadership, should they be so inclined. If, on the other hand, enmity can be created between the United States and Russia, rival powers will benefit in trade competition.

Our distrust of Russia can be fanned because of our dislike of her political beliefs and practices. Communism has been made a bogey with which to frighten even little children. Yet, with our advocacy of river valley authority "cells," centralization of government, federal invasion of free enterprise and rights of states, we, too, are traveling down the road to communism although we choose to call it by another name.

Russia has exhibited the greatest friendship for the United States. Her people like Americans and the American way of life. The American standard of living is Russia's goal.

It is true that Russia is capitalizing on her demonstrated military strength. She is extending her political manipulations into territories which heretofore were sacred spheres of influence of other great European powers. Russian political competition promises to interfere most critically in continued exploitation of colonial empires. Russia is grasping at political domination and world power with the proverbial clumsiness of her national symbol, the bear.

Yet, insofar as the United States is concerned, it is a friendly bear—a bear which wants our technical help, which seeks our products, which looks to us for advice and help. We do not believe we need fear any military threat from Russia unless and until a disagreement has been agitated by outside influence. Perhaps we're wrong, for, as we have said, we make no pretense of being an authority on international affairs. But we can see no advantage to the United States in permitting other nations to put a chip on our shoulder and daring Russia to knock it off, when all Russia wants to do is play on our team, even though she isn't too thoroughly experienced in the science of polite international double-crossing and is, therefore, somewhat undiplomatic, blunt, and uncouth in her dealings.

If we have the good sense to retain to ourselves the secret of the atomic bomb and thus stall off another war until the turbulent tides of world strife are calmed, and, at the same time link our power in friendship with that of Russia, we will be enabled, we believe, to produce a better opportunity for continued peace than the world has known for many centuries.

Snow Stalls Auto Of Prospector in Lemola Falls Area

Deep snows in the Umpqua National forest last week caused L. R. Harley, an Arizona prospector, to abandon his car near Lemola Falls, and to walk 15 miles to Roseburg yesterday hoping to find a four-wheel-drive truck with which to pull out his car. Forest service officials have referred him to Pete Gorley, of the Gorley Brothers Logging company, Sutherlin, whose tractor is marooned in deep snow near Diamond Lake.

Harley was bound for Thorn prairie, in the Upper Umpqua country, for prospecting. Caught in a snowstorm, he was forced to abandon his car near Lemola falls, where the snow is still probably three feet deep. Harley walked to Diamond Lake, where he stayed in the lodge two weeks. Last week he hiked for three days on a pair of snowshoes borrowed from the Diamond Lake Improvement company, to Steamboat guard station. From there he caught a ride into Roseburg.

If, in this vicinity, Harley fails to find a four-wheel-drive truck, he plans to go to Medford, where he hopes to employ a "Sno-go" tractor to rescue his automobile from the snow.
