If it is really true that the GREAT MASS of our citizens is concerned only with the interests of the nation as a whole.

It is just possible that Mr. Truman may be appealing to something that doesn't exist.

IT OUGHT to exist, of course. What is good for ALL of us is good in the long run for ANY of us.

THIS thought is put rather cynically by Senator Thomas, of Utah, who says in comment on the Truman speech.

Thomas, you see, is concerned only with the political results of what Truman has done.

IT IS a little hard at the moment to see how we are going to be able to realize to the fullest extent the great opportunities that lie before us unless we can get a larger measure of UNSELFISH leadership backed by a decisive measure of public opinion that UNDERSTANDS and ACCEPTS that what is best for the nation as a whole is best for all its people.

ADMITTEDLY we need relief from the rash of strikes that is delaying production—for full production is the only cure for what ails us right now.

Labor suspects that employers are hoping to make swollen profits out of the seller's market that now exists and will continue to exist for some time to come.

White collar people, who are rather generally unorganized, suspect those elements of the population that ARE organized.

IN THE midst of all this suspicion, with a big political campaign (for control of congress) just getting under way, how are we going to lay out a program for better relations between employers and workers (which, after all, is the only permanent solution of the strike problem) that will be so wise and just that it will endure?

WE OUGHT to have such a solution. The quicker we can get it, the better it will be for all of us. But the prospect of getting it, RIGHT NOW isn't too rosy.

CONSERVATION ESSENTIAL

By Charles V. Stanton

The Federal Fish and Wildlife Service is hoping more people will hunt and fish but that they will temper their recreation with more fun and less kill.

The nation's inventory of fish and game, it is reported indicates that we cannot maintain the present rate of destruction, particularly when we consider the greater range of activity opened by new methods of transportation and the increased number of persons who will be engaged in outdoor sports.

Approximately 16 million people hold hunting and fishing licenses, the Fish and Wildlife Service reports.

Hunting and fishing is big business. Sale of camping equipment, fishing tackle, guns, ammunition, outdoor clothing, amounts to many millions of dollars.

Fortunately, a great many people are aware of current conservation needs, and a widespread program has been developed, and is being enlarged, to protect and conserve wildlife.

We have made scientific studies of game problems. Through research, we have learned feeding habits and by planned control are increasing herds of big game animals.

Much research is being done on the fisheries problem. Trained technicians are studying effects of temperature, chemical changes, food conditions, loss of natural cover, and dozens of related problems, upon fish life.

But, even with all the research, with all the game management, with all the improved hatchery methods, we still will have much difficulty in maintaining fish and game adequate to satisfy the millions of license holders.

The solution, as given by Dr. Ira N. Gabrielson, Fish and Wildlife director, is that "everybody simply will have to learn to get more fun out of a limited take."

What can be accomplished by controlling seasons, bag limits and hunting methods has been demonstrated in connection with migratory fowls. Ducks and geese were being reduced at an alarming rate only a few years ago.

The problem simmers down to one of educating sportsmen to share with others. By using lighter tackle, substituting artificial flies for spinner or bait, using a camera occasionally instead of a gun, a real sportsman can have just as much fun without destroying nearly as much game.

In coming days, when jeeps, airplanes and other methods of transportation will permit wider range of sports activities, a conservation program will be essential.

Sen. Morse Would Operate Colleges Full 12 Months

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Colleges would operate the year around and "much longer hours each day" under a proposal advanced today by Senator Morse of Oregon.

He offered it as one way to meet the problem of over-crowding by veterans, whose Uncle Sam is footing their tuition bill.

Morse made the suggestion in an interview in which he said the administration's handling of veterans' housing at colleges "is a disgraceful record constituting bad faith."

The Oregon senator is a former faculty member of the Universities of Wisconsin and Minnesota and served a term as dean of the University of Oregon's Law School.

But another ex-college professor, Chairman Elbert D. Thomas (D-Utah) of the Senate Military Committee, saw nothing to get alarmed about in the horde of college-bound veterans.

"They'll adjust to it," Thomas told a reporter, referring both to the colleges' efforts to make room, and to the would-be students' plans to map out a course they can handle.

Some students will find they have attempted too much and will drop out," Thomas predicted.

unit of surplus war housing to go unused. However, various agencies of the government issued regulations and rulings which have made it an economic impossibility for most colleges to secure the surplus and empty housing units.

Hoosman Gets Revenge on Savold in Return Battle

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—(AP)—A little over a month ago Manager Jimmy Johnston watched his highly touted Al Hoosman take a lacing from veteran Lee Savold and calmly remarked that his boy was still a little green but would make up for that defeat before long.

Last night, Hoosman, a lanky heavyweight, made Johnston look like a prophet as he handed the 2 to 1 favored Savold a first-class shelling in their return 10-rounder in Madison Square Garden.

The six-foot five-inch Los Angeles Negro, who had been unbeaten in 25 pro fights until he ran up against Savold the first time, piled up points in almost monotonous fashion with a flicking left and a chopping right that had Savold constantly baffled.

Savold dropped his towering rival for two-count with a solid right to the heart in the fifth round. That was his only success of the night and earned him his only round of the fight.

Nazis Planned To Slay 30 Million Slavs, Court Told

NUERNBERG, Jan. 8.—(AP)—waffen SS Lt. Gen. Erich von Dem Bach-Zelewski told the International Military Tribunal yesterday that the Nazis attacked Russia with a goal of wiping out 30,000,000 Slavs.

Calmly and without batting an eye, the 46-year-old ardent Nazi admitted that brutality was directed especially against partisans on the eastern front and asserted that the German high command could not help being fully aware of the methods used.

Bach-Zelewski's testimony caused noticeable fury among the defendants when he told the court he was making this "confession because I have found my conscience."

Leaving the courtroom, he passed within a few feet of former Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering who sneered and uttered a curse which could be heard 30 feet away.

The witness commanded German units which suppressed the Warsaw uprising in 1944 and was awarded the Knights Cross by Hitler for his systematic destruction of the Polish capital in a 61-day siege.

Allied officers said Bach-Zelewski probably had witnessed more atrocities than any other German witness who has appeared at the trial.

Bach-Zelewski testified that Himmler, former Gestapo chief, since a suicide, set the figure of 3,000,000 Slavs to be eliminated. He said there were no written orders on how to deal with partisans but he declared that the methods used "certainly were known" because full reports were made on every operation.

Standing stiffly erect, he disclosed under questioning by the Russian prosecutor that the Nazis formed a special brigade made up of criminals—murderers and robbers—to combat the partisans.
