INCOMPLETE REPORTING

By Charles V. Stanton

Press associations and newspapers, in our opinion, are making a gross error of omission in reporting current labor difficulties. When we read of controversies between Labor and Management the report, invariably, mentions only the wages. But pay increases seldom are the paramount point of disagreement.

The recent lumber strike in the Pacific Northwest is a good example. While A. F. of L. strikers were off the job for several weeks, the C. I. O. negotiated a pay increase without work stoppage. The comparison furnishes proof that it was not a matter of wages which stymied negotiations.

The recent newspaper strike in Seattle concerned form of contract rather than rate of pay, but we saw no mention of that fact in strike reports.

Working conditions, travel time, hours, vacations, by-laws, and numerous other matters, aside from wages, enter into contracts between Labor and Management, but it is seldom the general public ever hears of any subject for debate other than wages.

We are reading a great deal today about the President's proposal for "fact-finding" commissions. Corporations and unions alike have rejected the plan. To the casual observer it would appear that corporations have something to hide in refusing to open their books for inspection.

But the President predicated his fact-finding solution upon the "ability to pay" theory. Application of "ability to pay" to establishment of wage standards is desired neither by Management nor by sober leaders of Labor.

Let's examine into the theory as it would operate, using as an example the steel industry, in which labor controversy now is attracting attention.

The steel industry is firmly established in the East. Here on the West Coast we are endeavoring to break the steel monopoly. We have a small steel industry in the making.

The steel industry of the East, obviously, would, because of its solidly entrenched position, have ability to pay much higher wages than would a new and struggling West Coast industry. Steel workers would gravitate to the East, where higher wages were obtainable.

Following the "ability to pay" theory through to the final result of its operation, it becomes apparent that it would tend to centralize industry and business into a few hands. Monopoly would be encouraged rather than discouraged. Growing public dissatisfaction would crystallize eventually into demand for seizure and socialization of highly centralized business and industry.

Coupling promulgation of the President's proposal with the long-time trend of the administration toward state socialism, it is not difficult to determine the source of the President's inspiration for his fact-finding boards.

We need more complete public understanding of the problems of Labor, industry and business. This process of education is a responsibility of the public press. Newspapers generally are dependent upon their press associations for the news they publish. The responsibility of the press in this connection we believe, has been grossly neglected.

Voluntary Illness Insurance Now Carried by Thirty Million Americans, Statistics Show

By WILLIAM J. CONWAY AP Newsfeatures Writer.

CHICAGO.—Approximately 30 million Americans now have some kind of voluntary, pre-paid protection against the costs of illness. C. Rufus Rorem, director of the American Hospital Association's Blue Cross Plan Commission, supplies statistics on the extent and expansion of voluntary systems at a time when Congress is considering President Truman's proposal for a national health program that includes compulsory insurance against the expenses of sickness.

Rorem, in figuring at least 30 million persons are participating in voluntary health prepayment programs, submits these estimates:

Blue Cross plans for hospital care have an enrollment of more than 20 million, while medical service plans coordinated with them have 2,164,000 members. Group Insurance, Too

Commercial insurance companies cover six million or seven million through group hospitalization policies, and approximately half of these policies include medical or surgical coverage.

Industrial and cooperative medical services—such as railroads and plants with their own doctors or contracts with private physicians—take care of two million or three million workers and their dependents.

Health and accident insurance is carried by additional millions to provide income during disability, and at least three million of the policies include hospital and medical benefits.

System Expands Rapidly The Blue Cross hospital plans—non-profit corporations sponsored by citizens, hospitals and the medical profession—have expanded rapidly.

In 1938, a few years after they began to take root in scattered sections, there were 40 plans with 1,400,000 participants. This year, 96 plans bearing the American Hospital Association's Blue Cross

Butter Seekers' Siege Broken Up By Frisco Police

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 16.—(AP)—Police dispersed a large crowd of would-be butter buyers swarming around a wholesale butter company yesterday after the company had been forced to halt its retail sales as a consequence of OPA orders prohibiting retailing by butter wholesalers.

As early as 6:30 A. M., crowds began to gather at the store, which has been selling butter on Tuesdays and Friday at the rate of 5 pounds to a customer.

There was a sign on the door yesterday morning stating that sales at retail were prohibited by the OPA. The crowd wouldn't leave, so the company called police.

William Haderer, secretary of the California Retail Grocers and Merchants Association, said the OPA order would correct "a disgraceful method of distribution."

Kenneth R. Hammaker, district OPA director, issued the order yesterday. "This," he said, "will put the butter back in the retail stores where it belongs."

The order was the first action of its kind in the country.

Time Deposits Hit New High in Western Banks

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 16.—(AP)—Savings deposits have resumed the sharp rise they were making in Pacific slope banks before reconversion brought a slowdown.

Time deposits, another name for them, hit a new high record of $2,030,000,000 in 31 far western banks last week. That was a 1946 gain of $19 million over the final 1945 figures. Those 31 banks are located in seven cities—Los Angeles, Seattle, Salt Lake City, San Francisco, Portland, Tacoma and Spokane.

Figures compiled by the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco indicated there may be a turn in what the Federal Department of Commerce called a slowdown in savings.
