

AAA Procedures For 1946 Agreed On at Conference

Uniform plans for attacking Oregon's soil conservation problems with a stepped-up agricultural conservation practice program in 1946 were developed by AAA committeemen from all Oregon counties at their state conference in Corvallis, the state committee has announced.

The state handbook contains 36 practices for assisting farmers with the job of building back soil fertility lost during the years of all-out wartime production, checking erosion, and repairing damage already done to soil and water resources.

From this state handbook each county committee in the next few weeks will select the practices most important to their county. A county handbook then will be prepared and sent to every farmer. The next step will be the preparation of farm plans, in which county committee members will assist farmers in planning conservation work for the coming year.

Aid Fund Limited
Because the total amount of conservation payments in a county will again be limited by a definite allocation of funds, a farm allowance will limit the amount of assistance that can be given to each farm. This allowance will be based on the size of the farm's conservation job, however, rather than the size of the farm.

The method of making out farm plans will vary by counties, and will include community meetings, county office calls, and farm visits by community committeemen. When completed, all farm plans will be reviewed by the county committee which will establish a maximum farm allowance for each farm.

This farm allowance will be subject to later reductions in event the county allocation of funds is insufficient to cover all of the practices planned. Notice of such reduction will be given operators soon after May 1, the closing date for making out farm plans.

Mason-Dixon Symbol to Be Erased at Texas U.

AUSTIN, Tex., Jan. 23.—(AP)—University of Texas students have decided to end the Civil War Saturday.

In full view of the bronze statues of Jeff Davis and Robert E. Lee, they're going to dismember hour-by-hour a symbolic Mason-Dixon line in front of the main building, with the last stake coming down at noon.

Acting President T. S. Painter will present the "keys to the university" to James A. Kock, president of the Yankee Club, campus organization which promoted the affair in the interests of "good will between Northerners and Southerners."

Congress Given 9-Point Plan for Self-Streamline

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—(AP)—Congress heard from its own ranks today how it should streamline itself, and the program includes pay raises, pensions and extra assistants.

From a parliamentary viewpoint, one of the key recommendations is that Congress break the tight control which the House Rules Committee now can exercise over pending legislation. The program for modernizing the nation's top law-making machinery was reported by a Senate-House subcommittee which has been making an extensive study of congressional reorganization. Some program points:

1. Give members of Congress a $5,000 raise, increasing their salaries to $15,000 effective the next Congress, and place them under the federal pension system.
2. Allow congressmen more time for important business by permitting each to hire an $8,000-a-year assistant to handle non-legislative matters.
3. Limit sessions to provide an annual recess from the close of the fiscal year, June 30, until September 10 or October 1.

4. Experiment with night sessions, some of which could be broadcast. Also try a weekly schedule providing three full days for committee hearings and three full days for full-dress chamber sessions.

5. Enact laws for the registration of all lobbying groups and their agents, and compel quarterly reports of their expenditures in seeking to influence legislation.

6. Cut the 33 standing committees in the Senate to 16, and trim the 48 in the House to 18, then provide each committee with a staff of four experts to assist it.

7. Discontinue the practice of allowing unconnected legislation to be tacked onto appropriation bills as "riders."

8. Require every committee with pending legislation before it to hold a public hearing once a month in order to keep the measures moving.

9. Delegate to federal courts and the court of claims authority to settle claims against the government which now must be handled by Congress.

Grange to Hold Meeting—Evergreen Grange has announced a meeting for 8 o'clock Monday evening at the hall. All members are requested to be present.
