DAILY DEVOTIONS

DR. CHARLES A. EDWARDS

No man has a velvet cross; but God who allows the cross knows the weight of it and the strength of the back that has to bear it. He understands us better than we understand ourselves. Our very weakness appeals to His compassion. God is no fault-finder, always looking for things to condemn in us. Jesus never ran men down. He was forever seeing the possibility of man, and knowing our weakness, He is ready to find an excuse for us when we fail to do our best. He knows the temptation that assails us, the circumstances that crowd us, the human weakness that crumpled under the strain, and He is able to help us. God is a loving Father, and as the compassionate parent pities the wayward child, so God pities the sinner. "He knoweth that we are dust." His heart is burdened for the child that has gone wrong, and at the first suggestion of sincere repentance he is ready to forgive and receive him into the shelter of His love. God knows all there is to know about us, and yet He keeps on loving us. This should encourage us "to come boldly to the throne of grace that we may obtain help in time of need."—Amen.
