THERE are less pleasing possibilities. The dispatch from Washington announcing the new discovery says it "MIGHT" usher in radio control for super-range jet or rocket projectiles which could be kept hovering ominously above the earth in the stratosphere.

Loaded, perhaps, with atom bombs and kept cruising around until the strategy of an atomic warfare age dictated the point at which they should be directed to earth and exploded.

Then—WHOOOSH! ALL this is terrifying BECAUSE our techniques of personal relationship—that is to say, finding the way to enable people to get along amicably with each other—are not keeping pace with our material scientific techniques.

AT THIS moment, in our blundering JUNGLE thinking, atomic energy is a monster potentially more horrible than any ever conjured up by a disordered mind. We see in it death and total destruction.

In reality, atomic energy contains the elements of a way of life fuller and more satisfying than any we have ever dared to THINK about. It holds the promise of cheap and universally usable power—power to do all the drudgery hitherto done by human backs and arms—power to make possible production so endless and so great as to insure standards of living far beyond anything we have hitherto been able to imagine.

In order to realize these rosy possibilities within a reasonable space of time, human beings need only to learn how to get along with each other peacefully and co-operatively.

MANY of our modern scientific miracles (such as man-made rubber and other synthetics) are made possible by catalyzers. Catalyzers, in rough, layman language, are substances that make things come together and JELL.

Nearly 20 centuries ago a catalyzer of the intangibles involved in human relationships was discovered and announced by Jesus. It is known as the Golden Rule—"Do ye unto others as ye would that others shall do unto you."

This catalyzer of human relationships MAKES DECENT HUMAN ASPIRATIONS JELL.

IT IS a tragic pity that human beings have been unable, or UNWILLING, to employ the Golden Rule as efficiently as they have employed material catalyzers.

Its possibilities for the advancement of mankind are almost limitless.

Firm Pays Penalty The Rose Theater Pop Corn Company, Roseburg, has paid a penalty of $1,079.10 for violation of ceiling prices in connection with pop corn sales. It is reported from the OPA district office at Portland, Oregon, on charges of sales above ceiling prices made through the Roseburg OPA panel. It was announced. The district office reports receipt of a statement pledging future compliance with price ceilings.

GOLD IS WHERE YOU FIND IT

By Charles V. Stanton

The date of January 24 marked the 98th anniversary of James Marshall's discovery of gold at Sutter's Mill in California's Sacramento Valley. That event started westward migration and initiated development of the West Coast. Movement of settlers to Oregon Territory had begun slightly earlier. When news of discovery of gold in California reached the ears of emigrants, wagon trains divided, some parties branching off to California gold fields, while others, untempted by lure of the gleaming, yellow metal, stuck to their original purpose of wresting a home and a living from Oregon's farm lands.

In that division of interest lies explanation of fundamental psychological differences between Oregon and neighboring Pacific Coast states of California and Washington. Washington, too, had its economic beginning in a gold rush. It was trade with Alaska which started Washington's development, just as the discovery of gold at Sutter's Mill was the event which inaugurated the growth of California.

Influence of first settlers still is felt in the three Pacific Coast states and the same motives which guided original settlers still are apparent in current emigration.

California and Washington were settled by adventurous souls seeking quick wealth. Both states were built by men and women in whom the gambling spirit was inherent—people who founded great industries through willingness to risk their all on an idea of wealth procurement.

No less adventuresome were the people who continued the trek to Oregon when wagon trains divided upon the dusty plains. But theirs was a different sort of adventure. They knew they were facing extreme danger—hazards of the trail, unfriendly Indians, settlement in a virgin land, loneliness of isolation, years of hard work to wrest a living from the soil. This they accepted, while rejecting the possibility of quick wealth in California diggins.

The same attributes still are apparent today. The native Oregonian, as in many a newcomer, is a lover of the soil. His interest lies in closeness to nature, in love of the good earth. He values peace and happiness of mind above material riches. He has an intense loyalty and provincial pride. Yet he does not attempt to exploit the advantages surrounding him to produce wealth.

A good example is to be found in recreational habits. The average Oregonian seldom leaves his own state for a vacation, unless it is to visit relatives. He goes to the neighboring mountains, lakes or seashore. The Californian as a rule jumps in his automobile and tries to see how many miles he can cover and how many states he can visit during his allotted vacation period.

The Oregonian knows there is no finer recreation to be found anywhere, so he stays at home and enjoys the natural resources of his state. But does he do anything to invite the world to share with him, to produce a harvest of dollars? It is true that in Oregon we have a few tourist "camps." In California they're not "camps"; they're "resorts." They are fitted up luxuriously, and you pay two or three prices for a night's accommodations.

The Oregonian takes his fun in a quiet, conservative sort of way, and the Californian is all out for "whoopie."

Industrialization of the West Coast promises to remove the psychological barrier. New blood from the neighboring Pacific Coast states is being transfused into the conservative Oregon body. Exploitation of Oregon's natural resources will be led by "outsiders" rather than "natives."

The men who spring from families lured to California, Alaska and Washington by the gamble of digging wealth from the ground are leading out today in finding gold in Oregon's timber, recreational resources, water power and agriculture.

Idaho Trims OSC, Oregon Trounces U. of Washington

Division Standings (By The Associated Press) Table with columns for W, L, Tie, For, Against, Points.

Washington and Oregon State, one-two in the Northern Division, Pacific Coast Conference basketball standings, both tumbled Saturday, leaving Idaho with the best chance of overtaking the leaders.

A last half rally gave Idaho a 43-38 victory over Oregon State at Moscow, while Oregon was taking a 54-52 overtime breath-taker from Washington at Seattle.

Oregon State will attempt to improve its position in a pair of games against the tail-end Washington State Cougars at Pullman tonight and Tuesday night. The Cougars, however, will have the great Gale Bishop in the lineup and will be much tougher to deal with.

The Husky-Webfoot tilt was one of the wildest of the current campaign. Including the overtime session, the score was tied 11 times. Washington led nine times and Oregon 12.

Washington rallied late in the first half and left the floor ahead 25-22. A field goal by Jack Pomfret as the second half opened boosted the Husky lead to five points. Bob Hamilton, Dick Wilkins and Marv Rasmussen, however, found the range for the Webfoots and carried them into a 32-31 advantage.

Seesaw Finales It was anybody's game from then on until with four minutes to go Rasmussen put in two quick ones from the floor to give Oregon a 46-43 lead. Two gift tosses by little Stan Williamson stretched it to 48-43 before Narn Dahlhoff, with a free toss and a goal, and Bob Jorgensen, with a field goal, tied it up seconds before Pomfret countered for Wash-

Pair 'Vagged' Pending Robbery Charge Probe

REEDSPORT — A man and woman giving the names of Joseph and Inez Clafford were arrested here Friday night by City Policeman Lester Hagerty, who was called to a tourist camp by a disturbance created in the apartment of a discharged marine. A fight was in progress, the marine claiming, according to Officer Hagerty, that he had been attacked and robbed. Charges of vagrancy were placed against the couple in Judge Fred Wright's justice court, and they were held in custody while officers continued an investigation into the incident.

Veteran, 98, Didn't Think Much of Gen. Grant

PORTLAND, Jan. 28.—(AP)—Wiley W. Wilcox, who celebrated his 98th birthday in the veterans' hospital here Saturday, told hospital patients at his birthday party he "didn't think much" of Gen. Grant when he saw him. The veteran of the Spanish-American war recalled once seeing President Abraham Lincoln stride up the capitol building steps at Washington. A native Virginian, he said he saw Gen. Robert E. Lee many times.

Hands Across the Table CHELSEA, Mass., Jan. 28.—(AP)—Kenneth L. Knight, USCG, 53, is convinced the hand is quicker than the eye.

He told police he placed his wrist watch, valued at $77, on a restaurant table to wind it. He turned around to look at a clock. He turned back and presto! the watch was gone.

Junior High Quints Split Games With Eugene Opponents

Roseburg Junior High basketballers lost the first game, 29-41, and took the second, 40-33, last week in a contest with Woodrow Wilson Junior High of Eugene. The Woodrow Wilson eighth graders displayed some of the prettiest ball handling I've seen," Coach Hod Turner said. "It was better than many high schools do." he Woodrow Wilson guard play was the factor in their defeat of the Roseburg Papooses.

In the ninth grade contest, Hubbard and Moore earned a remarkable performance for the Papooses. The backboards were controlled "in very good shape" by Blanck, Rodgers and Bibby. The local squads go to Grants Pass today. Then, on Friday, Medford comes to Roseburg.

Score by quarters of the varsity contest was: Roseburg 12 23 33 40 Woodrow Wilson 9 13 24 33

Lynam Decisions LaBelle in Extra Period Mat Battle

If required an overtime session and a decision by three judges chosen at random from the audience, for Joe Lynam to post a victory over "Frenchy" LaBelle in the main event of the weekly wrestling card at the Roseburg armory last Saturday night. After each man had gained a fall within the regular 30-minute time limit, calling for a draw decision from Elton Owen, they choose to battle five minutes extra to splitting the purse. Neither registered a fall, but the judges decreed that Lynam had made the better showing and gave him the nod.

First fall of the bout went to LaBelle in 14:43 with a Hungarian leg clutch. Lynam took the second in 11:31 with a skin-the-cat. Neither was able to register a deciding fall in the remaining 3 minutes 14 seconds of the regular period. The bout was fast and clever, unmarred by a single foul, and drew a big hand from the spectators, numbering around 1,000.

Martinelli Beats Dawson

Lynam and LaBelle were the top survivors of a six-man battle royal that first eliminated Lou Franco, then Bulldog Jackson, the former substituting for Tony Ross, who was unable to appear because of injuries. The semi-final survivors were Angelo Martinelli and Red Dawson, the latter a recent newcomer from Wisconsin, sporting whiskers and displaying a meat technique. Dawson's chief method of assault, after putting his opponent on his back, was to hurl himself knee first onto Martinelli's throat, in violation of rules. Ignoring the referee's warning, Dawson twice repeated the action, leaving Martinelli in a semi-conscious condition. The referee promptly awarded the fall to Martinelli. Time 19:48.

In the second canto, Martinelli started to retaliate in like manner but after one knee-to-throat score, he was forced by Referee Owen to desist. The remainder of the round, exhausting what was left of the 30-minute overall limit, was characterized by one of the most vicious combats ever seen in the arena. There was more slugging and kicking than wrestling and at one juncture the pair fought outside the ring and in front of first-row spectators, giving the referee a tough job in separating them. At times when Martinelli reached for Dawson's red whiskers, he was repulsed with a bitten finger and for this he got even by sinking his teeth in Dawson's ear.

As neither man won a fall in the second round, Martinelli was declared the winner by virtue of the first fall award. Bulldog Jackson's participation in the battle royal was of only 2 minutes 7 seconds duration, but he created a little extra excitement for the spectators after climbing out of the ring. He slugged Martinelli in the neck as the latter stood against the ropes. Angelo immediately leaped out of the ring and swapped punches with Jackson until halted by Referee Owen.
