(Continued from page 1) Washington government. Quite a few of the reconversion officials have been reported to be in favor of a lift in prices as a means of breaking the industrial deadlock.

It looks like a typical New Deal ruckus among the top hired men. EVERY thinking person is of course aware that if a REAL ceiling had been established on EVERYTHING at the START, with no holes for ANYBODY'S friends, it could have worked—although in that event the important reward stimulus would have been eliminated.

After all, our production record during the war WAS amazing—the wonder of the world, probably the big factor that turned the tide of victory AGAINST the Germans and the Japs. It is becoming reasonably apparent that since we've yielded on some points we're going to have to yield on others or be deadlocked in a situation that will seriously delay our entrance into the better times that everybody is hungry for.

(WE'RE primarily interested in what happens in America, but since the U. S. is the only nation left with an unimpaired production plant the whole world is acutely interested—especially those who are starving because of lack of production of things.)

IN WASHINGTON, the House seems to have its neck bowed on the Case labor disputes bill, which provides: 1. A national mediation board with power to step into major labor disputes and forbid strikes or lockouts for 30 days.

LABOR is violently opposed to practically all of these proposals—especially the use of injunctions, which recalls the old and now discredited days of strike breaking by injunction. In the present state of the world, however, ALL these teeth are somewhat more likely to be used against employers.

At any rate, neither employers nor workers are going to LIKE rigid government control of industrial relations. It would be far better if the situation could be handled by mutual agreement, based on tolerance and fair dealing. That, however, seems to be hard to get.

REPRESENTATIVE PACE (a Democrat from Georgia) says the "nation's farmers may go on strike if Congress doesn't pass stiff legislation to regulate labor controversies." He adds: "There is a terrible feeling of restlessness among farmers, and I'm afraid of it."

He's talking tommyrot, of course. A farmer's strike isn't going to be called, and wouldn't work if it were. Still the farmer is caught in the light of the line in the present situation, whose ultimate result will be to raise the price of practically everything he BUYS at the very time when he is leaving behind him the boom markets of wartime and entering the inevitable postwar period of selling his products on a world market

NOT SLEEPING TOO WELL

By Charles V. Stanton

"Some of Oregon's best hotels will have a hard time drawing trade from the travelling fraternity when conditions get back to normal," a salesman asserted recently when forced to drive from Roseburg to Portland because he could not obtain a hotel reservation here or at any intervening city.

We doubt very much that our salesman friend meant what he said. He'll probably be in much the same position as housewives who carried their little "black" books during rationing days, so they wouldn't forget real or fancied insults or grievances, but who tossed the whole matter into the wastepaper basket in their V-J day exuberance and now are willing to let bygones be bygones, particularly if the grocery will hold out a cube of butter.

The salesman's attitude, however, serves to emphasize a predicament facing hotels generally.

It is next to impossible to secure a reservation in a leading hotel without notification several days in advance of occupancy. One Roseburg hotel, for instance, maintained records of its rejections for a period of four days and found it was turning down an average of 140 applications for rooms per day. This situation is not confined exclusively to Roseburg hotels. Eugene, Grants Pass and Medford and many other cities are as hard pressed for hotel accommodations as is Roseburg.

The "resident guest" poses a delicate problem for hotel managements.

Should it refuse indefinite accommodations to persons who through employment propose to become a permanent part of the community, or shall rooms be saved for transients?

For the sake of the community it would appear that priority on accommodations should be given those persons who are to remain as owners, managers or employes in business or industrial activities. But hotels, primarily, are designed for service to the travelling public. The travelling salesman is as essential to business and industry as are any of the permanently located officers or employes.

OPA rent control partially furnished the solution when it froze rental charges on permanent guests as of Jan. 1, 1943. The rental charge permitted by the OPA makes it advisable, from a financial standpoint, for a hotel to refuse permanent tenancy, as the daily rate is so much higher than monthly rental permitted by the OPA regulation. Hotels, quite generally, have agreed upon five-day maximum tenancy.

We have noted on the part of our hotel managements in Roseburg an extreme courtesy toward those persons whom they must, perforce, turn away from their doors. They have attempted, and are attempting, to give every possible service. Hotels have obtained listings on rooms in private homes, but managements complain that as rapidly as they discover sleeping rooms to which guests may be sent, such rooms are taken by permanent tenants. Dozens of rooms previously listed with hotels for surplus overnight guests, are now permanently occupied by persons originally sent to them by hotel clerks.

Hotel managements are not happy over the situation. The habit of service to the travelling public is deeply ingrained in the nature of the experienced hotel operator. He is sincerely pained by the necessity of turning away prospective guests.

Many people seem to think this condition would be extremely profitable to hotel managements, but operators claim profits are not as great as could be expected. A few years ago it was possible to obtain abundant supplies at wholesale. Today a large proportion of supplies must be secured through retail outlets. All operating costs are higher. Guests used to steal towels. Now they carry away bed linen, and any housewife knows the difficulty connected with obtaining sheets.

We can't blame our salesman friend for being somewhat disgruntled because he couldn't find a place to sleep—but our hotel managers aren't sleeping too well these days either.

Bad Driver Fined, Permit Suspended

Howard A. Burke, Roseburg, paid a $20 fine this morning, and his operators license was suspended 60 days by City Recorder A. J. Geddes, when he pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving. Chief of Police Erwin Short said that Burke had driven on the wrong side of Jackson Street yesterday and forced three other cars to the curb.

Another man was to appear this morning to answer charges of speeding, Short said. He is John J. Lichtig, 505 Douglas Street, who is charged, the police chief said, with driving 40 miles an hour in a 20-mile zone, and running a stop sign at the intersection of Winchester Street and Second Avenue South. Ten traffic accidents occurred at this intersection last year, Short said.

Bert Kenneth Lehnher, charged with drunk and disorderly conduct and interfering with an officer, was fined $10 yesterday. Short said Lehnher is serving his fine in jail, a day for each two dollars of the fine.

Ouster of Churchill, British Assent to Nazis' Grabs, Aim of Hess' Flight in '41, Trial Told NUERNBERG, Feb. 7.—(AP)—The British government disclosed to the International Military Tribunal today that Rudolf Hess flew to Scotland in 1941 with proposals to unseat the Churchill government and make peace with a new cabinet which would assure the Nazis a free hand in Europe.

Hess, a scarecrow figure in a second-hand suit, clutched his hands on the prisoner's dock rail as a British army officer demanded his punishment as one of the 22 Nazi defendants here.

Opening the individual prosecution case against the former No. 3 Nazi, the British presented reports of interrogations of Hess that were recorded after he parachuted onto a farm near Glasgow May 10, 1941. In these reports Hess declared he had come to convince Britons that "Hitler would sincerely regret the collapse of the British empire" and that they should make peace before it was too late.

He sought to show the British that "avaricious Americans" had evil designs on the empire and "Canada would certainly be incorporated in the United States."

Act Enrages Hitler. Captured minutes of a conversation between former Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop and Benito Mussolini in Rome three days after the flight said Hess had sent a farewell letter to Hitler, promising to "use Great Britain fascist circles to persuade the British to give in."

Ribbentrop told Mussolini, however, that Hitler became very angry and declared he "would have Hess shot immediately if he returned to Germany."

Bulk of 1945 Oregon Seed Crop Goes to the Trade

To date Oregon producers have sold only slightly more than two million pounds of cover crop seeds to the government under the 1945 seed purchase program. This is the smallest total since the program started in 1940, and only a fraction of the 100 million pounds purchased in 1943.

Committeemen see the small volume of government buying as indicative of the firm demand for Oregon cover crop seed, with the trade handling nearly all of the 1945 crop. The purchase program closes on April 30, giving producers another three months to sell their seed to the government if they desire. The program was established six years ago to guarantee minimum prices to Oregon producers, and to assure supplies of seeds for expanded cover cropping in the southern states.

New Skiffs Bought

REEDSPORT—Twelve new skiffs for rental to sportster fishing on the Umpqua have been purchased by John T. Bronson, owner of BDI's Fish Farm. For the present, the Birchcraft skiffs must be propelled by oars, but an order for delivery as soon as possible are at least half-a-dozen motors which will be for rental use. Johnson has two motors now.

Bids Soon to be Asked on Copco's Power Project

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 8.—(By Daily Journal of Commerce.)—The California-Oregon Power Co., which applied to the State Hydro-Electric Commission Saturday for a license to start construction of a $3,375,000 power development on North Umpqua river in eastern Douglas county, hopes to be able to invite bids for two parts of the development that alone will cost over a million dollars.

Pending approval from the state commission and also from the Federal Power Commission, John C. Boyle, Copco's general manager, Medford, said bids probably would be called "next spring as soon as the weather permits" for construction of: (1) a 500-ft. concrete-lined tunnel at Toketee Falls, 75 miles east of Roseburg on the North Umpqua river, estimated to cost $800,000, and (2) an earthenfill diversion dam, with a 350-ft. long crest and 35 ft. high, $300,000. The invitation for bids, Boyle said, will allow individual quotations on the two projects as well as a combination proposal.

The tunnel and dam invitation will be followed by the letting of a contract for foundation and superstructure for a new concrete powerhouse to use approximately 2 miles below the dam and construction of a 125,000-volt power line, running 47 miles from Toketee Falls to Dixonville. The line, estimated to cost $600,000, will be strung on wooden poles. Copco itself will install equipment in the powerhouse.

Floyd Dover Declares Snell Lacks Leadership

PORTLAND, Feb. 8.—(AP)—Floyd K. Dover, Grants Pass, mentioned as a possible Democratic gubernatorial candidate, criticized Governor Snell in a speech here last night for what he called "lack of leadership."

He declared the governor should have asked aid from representatives of business, labor and veterans to prevent unemployment. Dover said Oregon's Republican administration has not solved veterans' housing and job problems. "For four years," he stated, "you've heard that Oregon veterans are not going to come back without homes and without jobs. Now they're coming back and they are without homes and without jobs." Dover was addressing the Willamette Democratic society.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief. Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most poisons about 3 p.m. a day. Oregon Soil Saving Jobs Reach Into High Figure

Reports from county committees on performance under the 1945 agricultural conservation program indicate that soil and water conservation work costing more than six million dollars was accomplished on Oregon farms under the program. Through practice payments, the government will contribute about $1 million to the cost.

The reports show that in many counties the value of practices performed greatly exceeded the county's allocation of funds. This means that in those counties the practice payment to the farmer will have to be reduced in accordance with farm allowances established on farm plans last spring.
