them. So the invaders, even though they were about to surrender, flooded the happy Eden. The Hitlerites blew two huge dams in the tall dyke—and the little Dutch boy's thumb couldn't come with that. The flood tore through the openings and covered the land to a depth of 15 feet in places. The Germans did not notify the colony a few hours in advance so that there was no loss of human life and only two percent of the cattle were drowned. But the lovely farm houses and the villages with their handsome churches and public buildings largely dissolved in the waters. Even the trees were killed.
