

Smaller Schools May Absorb Overflow From Education Program Mapped for Vets

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—The Veterans Administration, with the help of the Office of Education, is conducting a survey which may go a long way toward solving the critical problem of higher education for veterans under the GI Bill of Rights next fall.

Nearly 2,000 senior and junior colleges will be surveyed for educational and housing facilities for veterans.

The idea is to channel veterans seeking college educations into these smaller schools. More than 40 per cent of the veterans now getting higher education under the bill are attending 48 of the larger and better known colleges and universities. Many smaller schools have so few that they are not even tabulated. Several larger universities are already so overcrowded that they have refused to take any more students until accommodations can be enlarged and facilities increased.

VFW Opens Campaign

At the same time, the Veterans of Foreign Wars are operating a campaign to expand the nation's educational system through federal subsidies. Presumably a large portion of the funds would go to smaller colleges.

The "name" institutions, already crowded to overflowing, are looking forward with some distress to what will happen when the postwar flood ebbs.

Caught with vastly increased facilities and enlarged staffs, they would face bankruptcy. Sixty to 80 students added to each of the 1,500 to 2,000 smaller colleges probably could take care of the additional veterans above normal enrollment next autumn, and even ake some of the load off the big schools.

VFW points out that by the end of this year, 13,000,000 veterans will have been discharged. Certain it is that hundreds of thousands of these have become college-conscious.

The increasing number of unemployed veterans (now estimated at more than 1,000,000) is another factor. Many of these are bound to want to take education grants in the hope that they will lead to security.

The report of the VA survey of smaller colleges will be interesting if it ever is made public. The survey might show just how much of the higher-education system has survived the war to carry on in the emergency ahead.

Beets When Young Excel in Flavor as Well as Nutrition

When beets are young, you eat the entire plant, tops and root; and non-gardening friends will rave about this delicious dish, which those who buy their vegetables in markets can never know.

By sowing a four weeks supply every four weeks, you can enjoy young beets all summer long. There is seldom trouble in growing them; but if you grow too slowly, and have too much red and yellow coloring in their leaves, it is due to soil that is too acid. A little lime spread along the row and washed in will correct this.

Seeds should be sown an inch apart, covered half an inch, and the soil pressed well above them. The tops are at their best when about six inches tall; later they become stringy. For an early harvest, seed is sometimes sown indoors, and plants set out in the garden when six weeks old. They will stand light frosts.

Each beet seed is really a cluster of seed, and where it is sown several plants will usually grow. For the quickest development of the roots, these should be thinned out promptly; but if the tops are to be eaten, thinning may be delayed until the plants are six inches tall, when the leaves are at their best.

stand four inches apart. While of highest quality when young, not much larger than a golf ball, older roots retain their sweetness and are excellent for beet soup and pickles.

Beets can be sown as soon as the ground has been prepared. Germination may take eight to 10 days, and may be delayed by dry weather, as the seeds require more moisture than some to get them started. The government standard germination percentage is 65 and good seed does not often exceed that.

Beet tops are among the richest of vegetables in Vitamin A, and also have a good portion of Vitamins B and C. The roots have Vitamin B in fair amount; with a little Vitamin C. There are many excellent varieties, some maturing in 35 days from the time seed are sown, others taking as long as 80 days. For table quality of both tops and roots, several sowings of an early variety are recommended.

Food Saving for Famine Aid to be Sought in Oregon

Oregon citizens will be asked to eat less of some foods, prevent waste and endure a few shortages to make more wheat and food fats and oils available to save famine ridden countries.

The voluntary support of every man, woman and child in the state will be sought in a comprehensive food conservation program being initiated by county USDA councils, E. Harvey Miller, state director of the USDA Production and Marketing Administration and chairman of the Oregon USDA council, has announced. Miller and county AAA committee chairmen have been named by Secretary of Agriculture Anderson as state and county emergency food program managers.

Voluntary food-for-famine relief committees, made up of representatives of all groups who can help in the program, are proposed for each county in plans adopted by the National Famine Emergency Committee. These measures will include such wheat-and-fat saving steps as substitution of potatoes for bread, serving fewer fried foods, open-face pies, and one slice of bread with restaurant meals.

"The world food situation is exceedingly serious. Millions of our fellow human beings in other lands face the terrible disaster of famine. Every ounce of food we can spare from our abundance will save the lives of starving people," Miller commented.

Young men in the Roseburg area who wish to enlist in the Navy may do so March 22, by contacting T. A. McGinnis, chief gunner's mate, of the U. S. Recruiting Substation at Eugene, who will be at the Roseburg Armory on that day.

Age limits for youths who wish to join the Navy are 17 to 30. McGinnis said. All men less than 21 must have parental consent before enlisting, and all men must be able to present satisfactory evidence or proof of their age.

How to Make Spring Housecleaning Easier

The room-at-a-time method of spring housecleaning leaves most of the house livable during housecleaning and it helps get rid of lots of clutter. I like to do a room a week, then the whole job isn't so tiring and seems much easier.

- HERE'S HOW I DO IT:
- ... Dismantle the room by removing knickknacks, pictures, draperies, curtains, window shades, rugs, and smaller pieces of furniture.
 - ... Move the larger pieces of furniture to the center of the floor and cover with sheets.
 - ... Start at the ceiling and work down, cleaning walls, woodwork, and windows in that order.
 - ... Clean furniture, then the floors and rugs.
 - ... Clean blinds, wash curtains, clean pictures and small furniture. Be sure to cover every inch of exposed space with some sort of cleaner.
 - ... Clean mirrors and picture glass with window cleaner. Use soap and water on knickknacks wherever possible.
 - ... Reassemble the room and move to the next one. In no time the entire house is spick-and-span.
