VETERANS SCORE AGAIN

By CHARLES V. STANTON

World War II veterans who sponsored last Saturday's Easter parade are to be commended for the excellence of the event and the efficiency with which details were handled.

A good deal of work goes into the promotion of a parade. Such events don't materialize upon call. Thousands of details require many man-hours of work in planning, contacts, solicitation, formation, etc., before the drums roll and the parade actually gets under way.

One of the greatest handicaps in a town as busy as Roseburg is to find people willing to give time to civic activities. Recently returned veterans have demonstrated not only willingness but desire to have a part in community life.

But they are critical of many things. Accustomed to keeping quarters clean, painted and polished, they find civilian habits slovenly. They want their home town as neatly kept, as well painted, as free from litter as an army post or a battleship.

What it all sums up to is that they want the homes, the home life, and the home-like conditions they dreamed about for so many months and even years they were away.

And the best part is that they are willing and ready to do something about it.

The veterans should be absorbed into the planning and operational details of community life and permitted to contribute the service they are so anxious to render.

Assignment of Members of Supreme Court to Chore Boy Duties Retarding Decisions

(By JACK STINNETT) WASHINGTON—Very little attention has been paid in recent years to what is happening to the Supreme Court of the United States. A little off-the-record digging among the justices themselves and the legal fraternity in general will immediately raise the question: are the members of the court becoming our No. 1 chore boys?

There are 14 decisions pending now which await the return of Justice Robert H. Jackson from his assignment to the Nazi war crime trials in Nuremberg. These cases will all have to be reheard. With all due respects to the abilities of Justice Jackson, there are probably dozens of legal lights in the country who could have been appointed to the chore in Europe without disrupting the proceedings of the Supreme Court.

In 1942 former Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts was called off the court to head the first Pearl Harbor investigation. Shortly after that Justice James F. Byrnes was called down to become a sort of No. 2 President, operating principally on the home front.

In the meantime, politics, which is never supposed to touch the court, has trod on it rather heavily. Justice Jackson has been discussed freely as a possible candidate for the governorship of New York this fall. He probably won't be but the time was when you didn't dare discuss the politics of a U. S. Supreme Court justice like that.

Even more in the political limelight is Justice William O. Douglas. It's no secret any longer that President Roosevelt would have liked to have had him as a running mate in 1944. It's no secret either that some important Democratic party leaders were putting pressure on him to accept the job of Secretary of the Interior, when Harold L. Ickes resigned. According to best reports, it was Chief Justice Harlan F. Stone who put his foot down on that move.

Although seven of the nine present justices were appointed by President Roosevelt and one by President Truman, there probably is less unanimity on the court than ever before. In the current session, only half of the 70-odd opinions handed down have been unanimous and the total doesn't include the four-four ties, of which there are 14, awaiting the return of Justice Jackson.

This is an unhappy state of affairs so far as the lawyers of the land are concerned. There is no indication now that the situation can be remedied soon. If political trends pull either Douglas or Jackson out of the court, or any other vacancies should result from deaths or retirement, it is considered likely here the President Truman would appoint either Labor Secretary Lewis B. Schwelb or Treasury Secretary Fred M. Vinson to the job.

In neither case would this change the complexion of the court much. Both are considered conservatives. Douglas is considered a liberal and Jackson a conservative, but the lines are no longer well defined. According to Chief Justice Stone, the most important thing now is that the court be left alone to get some work done.
