ment becomes available. The time will come when through planes will whisk you from coast to coast without a stop.

THE copy writers for the advertising agencies become lyric when they write of the comfort of reclining seats. It sounds wonderful in print, but in practice it's a lot of tosh. You sleep sketchily, it is true, but when you awaken you feel like a strand of rusty barbed wire that has been tied into a bow knot.

But all that will change—and soon. Big, swift ships will take off in the morning and drop you on the other coast long before night. As the premium on seats declines, the night planes will have berths like a Pullman. (A sleeper plane carries only HALF as many passengers—so far.)

Sleep on an air Pullman, such as the present overseas Clippers, is as comfortable as in your own downy bed at home—no clicking of the rails, no swaying on the curves—just a gentle rocking motion like the baby in the treetop.

DOWN at Washington. Get to the baggage line. Get a JOLT. My bag somehow missed connections at Chicago. Have only a typewriter—and you can't sleep in a typewriter, or wash your teeth with it, or shave.

But the airline is equal to the emergency. It gets on the teletype, spots the bag out in Chicago, hustles it onto the next plane, whooshes it by taxi from the airport to the hotel, and by bedtime it is right where it will do the most good.

Modern life moves fast.

WASHINGTON is lovely at this season—the spring is as far advanced as in Northern California. The apple blossoms are about gone, but their place is filled amply by the crab-apples. The Pacific Coast has NEARLY everything, but when old Mother Nature was stirring up the recipe for it she had an absent-minded moment and left out the crab-apple—which is a pity.

(We grow crab-apples in captivity, of course, but we miss the eye-filling sweep of them growing wild on the flats and the rolling hills.)

WASHINGTON is a rat race—as it has ben for years. A man who ought to know tells this writer the housing situation is the worst yet.

If you're a lone male, you double up with other lone males in the hotel—and thank your lucky stars for the privilege. The plaintive note in the room clerk's voice when he asks how long you're going to stay is more marked than ever. If you tell him you're in only for the night he leapes ebullientiy over the counter, kisses you on both cheeks and salaams. If you're set for the limit (seven days here, praise the Lord), he reaches under the counter for his trusty baseball bat.

THIS writer nurses one stunning dream—to live far enough into the brave new world to be welcomed IN by a hotel keeper who actually wants business and doesn't hesitate to admit it.

As it is, you're scowled at when you arrive but palavered over when you leave—because when you leave it gets one more impatient customer off the room clerk's neck.

THE hotels now have a new dodge. They're bootlegging conventions, but request the delegates to remove their badges in the lobbies.

You can hardly blame them, for if there's one thing that sets your teeth on edge and turns the hair on the back of your neck straight up it's being turned away from a hotel that is crawling with convention delegates all decked out in badges and greeter smiles.

In justice to the hotel people, it must be added that the mere thought of being stuck with a convention throws them into the screaming meemies—but the American people are the greatest joiners on earth and now that the shooting war is over they just WON'T be denied their conventions any longer.

COURTESY AT HOSPITAL

By CHARLES V. STANTON

Public cooperation and courtesy in return for use of travel facilities through grounds of the Veterans Administration Hospital in Roseburg are requested by Dr. George E. Melvin, manager.

Pointing out that the bridge across the South Umpqua River and roadways through the reservation, together with all surrounding grounds are government property subject to closure at any time, Dr. Melvin states he may be required to bar the public from use of these facilities if abuse of privileges continue.

The hospital manager reports several acts of vandalism, including broken windows in buildings on the site of the former Oregon State Soldiers Home; raids on the hospital's vegetable garden, theft of flowers and shrubs from the nursery, bottles carelessly tossed from automobiles to be broken on the ground or upon the pavement, removed or damaged signs, etc.

It is, indeed, most regrettable that some persons, both juveniles and adults, have no respect for property rights. Too frequently their acts impose hardships upon innocent people. Although only a comparatively few persons commit acts of vandalism, yet it often becomes necessary to deny privileges to the public at large, simply as a matter of protection.

The case at the Veterans Hospital is one in which many persons could be made to suffer for acts of the discourteous few.

Few persons probably would consider tossing a bottle from an automobile, or leaving a bottle in the grove or on the recreational field a reprehensible act.

But it must be remembered that some of the patients at the hospital are recovering from a mental disease which has left them in an unstable nervous condition. Occasionally a patient has suicidal or homicidal impulses. One of the strict rules at the hospital is that nothing which a patient might use to inflict injury upon himself or another person shall be permitted. But a discarded bottle or a piece of broken glass can become an exceedingly dangerous weapon.

A rule with which the public may not be familiar, and one to which small boys should give particular attention, is that no firearms of any kind are permitted upon the reservation. Occasionally boys have been discovered along the river bank carrying .22 rifles. They doubtless were truthful when they professed to be unaware of the prohibition. But it is obvious the practice could be extremely dangerous.

The short cut through the hospital grounds and across the river is a great convenience to the public. The roadway bears a considerable volume of traffic. The hospital management is very appreciative of the fact that the majority of motorists drive at designated speeds. For the safety of the patients it is necessary that the utmost caution be used in operation of motor vehicles through the hospital grounds.

Insofar as deliberate vandalism is concerned, we doubt if any printed or spoken words would be of avail. There is a class of people having absolutely no regard for property rights and to whom normal, decent human behavior apparently is impossible.

But we are certain the general public is desirous of giving every possible encouragement and cooperation to the Veterans Administration in connection with its activities here. Roseburg and the community always have been veteran minded. Any discourtesies, aside from vandalism, we believe have been largely unintentional. It is to be sincerely hoped there will be no further misconduct which might require the hospital management to withdraw privileges so convenient to the public.

Lower Umpqua Districts Seek Better Phone Line

REEDSPORT—Inadequate telephone service for residents of the Loon Lake district and the Ash Valley mail route during and since the war, has resulted in an effort to obtain a better line and better service. Reorganization of the local telephone committee and subscribers is being carried out with cooperation of the local grange.

Working through the management of the West Coast Telephone Co., it is the intention of residents in the area to rebuilt the entire line, establish a switching station at or near the junction of the Loon Lake road and Highway 38, supply new wire for the whole system as well as poles and a number of new receiving instruments.

Mrs. F. H. Grubbe Passes in Seattle

Word has been received here of the death of Mrs. Frances H. Grubbe at her home in Seattle, Wash. Mrs. Grubbe was born February 8, 1856, on the donation claim of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Jefferson Chapman, near Glide, Oregon, shortly after they had crossed the plains from Iowa, and settled there. She received her education at the Wilbur Academy, where she later became a teacher.

In 1879 she was married to George W. Grubbe, a pioneer merchant of that locality. Mr. Grubbe passed away in 1925. Since that time Mrs. Grubbe made her home in Roseburg, and later in Seattle with her niece, Mrs. Vida M. Denton, who, with two brothers, Dr. Walter S. Chapman of Walsenburg, Colorado, and N. N. Chapman of Madera, California, survive her. Mrs. Grubbe was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and Roseburg Chapter, O. E. S.

The body is to be brought to Roseburg for interment.

The Douglas Funeral Home will be in charge of arrangements.
