

850,000 War No. 2 Soldiers Listed as Psychotic Cases

CHICAGO, May 30—(P)—Neuropsychiatric disorders have hospitalized approximately 850,000 World War II soldiers up to the first of this year—some of them more than once—but many will return to duty, the American Psychiatric Association was told here.

Brig. Gen. William C. Menninger, the Army's chief of psychiatry, related this at the association's meeting.

He said also that 500,000 men were discharged from the Army for "personality disturbances" of all types; and that approximately 1,875,000 men were rejected for military service for the same reasons.

Without giving specific figures, he said that the Army's wartime psychiatric program was well advanced and 60 percent of combat psychiatric casualties were returned to duty within a few days after treatment in forward areas. Hospitals further back salvaged an additional 30 percent for non-combat duty in war areas, he said, adding that between 15 and 25 percent of the most resistive cases sent back to this country were later returned to some kind of duty, with a large majority of the remainder being sent to their homes "very much improved."

Fails in Some Ways
Asserting that psychoses—the most serious types of mental disorders—constituted only seven percent of all neuropsychiatric cases hospitalized, Menninger said the Army observed an "unexpectedly high recovery rate for psychotic patients who so often become custodial patients in civilian hospitals."

During 1945, he said, seven of every 10 psychotic hospital admissions were "able to be discharged home."

While he said that "psychiatry in the Army did a reasonably creditable job," Menninger declared that "it (psychiatry) failed in a good many ways and some of these failures were because we in psychiatry failed to select and train new and better men

"We began this war," he said, "with no plan of treatment for combat troops, no unit to provide such no plans for training no psychiatrist in combat divisions, and not even effective leadership in headquarters."

Save One Saw Buck

STRATFORD, S. D., May 30—(P)—A breeze whisked away a $10 bill which O. H. Gerharter, cattle buyer, handed to his son Allen, in a feedlot and a six months old calf picked it up and started chewing.

"That ain't hay!" Gerharter shouted as he took hold of the animal and instructed his son to reach down the calf's throat. Allen retrieved the bill, about shoulder-deep in the calf's interior.

Two 'Drunks' Nabbed
