man. It stands out in his manner, in his ready cordiality and naturalness with small town people.

He talks WITH such people—never DOWN to them.

HIS mistakes are the mistakes of such a man.

It seems to this writer, for example, that he made a mistake in his handling of the critical strike situation week before last. It would have been better if he had stood alone on his war powers, which will EXPIRE when the war officially ends, instead of calling upon congress for a special emergency program of legislation, which stirred up a hornet's nest of opposition in the senate and thus tended to muffle what otherwise would have been sharp, clear-cut action, justified by the emergency itself.

But it was at least understandable in a man who describes himself as a small-town. He must have been extremely lonely at that moment and it must have seemed very desirable indeed to have the co-operation and support of congress in his hour of trial.

Besides, taking action ALONE, on the authority of his war powers, must have seemed to him of one-man rule, whereas calling upon congress for help must have given him a reassuring feeling that he was following the democratic processes, even in time of emergency when delay would have been costly.

THERE is a more cynical explanation, of course.

By calling upon congress for help, he shared the odium, as well as the responsibility. By passing emergency legislation, congress takes its part of the ill will that is inevitable in such situations.

There will be plenty who will believe that buck-passing, rather than sharing of authority in the democratic manner, was responsible for what he did. There are plenty of men in congress, most of whose members face the reelection test next November, who resent the fact that the President thus put the bee on them, instead of carrying the load wholly on his own shoulders.

AS to Truman's preference for a small business rather than big—and possibly small government conducted in the courthouses and statehouses rather than in the capital at Washington—it is probably a nostalgic hope, more or less shared by all of us in the ordinary walks of life, but not too likely to come to pass EVER again in America.

This is a big country, and things have to be done in a big way. In order to hold its own with business throughout the world, American business will have to be big also. In order to deal with big business, labor has to be big.

All the pressures of our modern life are in the direction of more size, more scope, MORE CENTRALIZATION.

It is doubtful if government will ever be brought back from Washington to the courthouses and the statehouses. Instead of getting CLOSER to the masses of the people, government in America will probably get farther away from them year by year.

CVA BILL SLATED TO DIE

Postponement of hearings on Senator Mitchell's Columbia Valley Authority bill, S. 1716, indicates that the proposal to create a vast super-state in the Pacific Northwest will expire with the current session of Congress. There is little doubt, however, that the issue will be revived in the new Congress, which will be formed in January.

There is room for difference of opinion concerning CVA, but, as we are so old-fashioned that we still believe in such things as states' rights, decentralization of authority, democratic processes, and the ability of the American people to better govern themselves through constitutional methods than by Nudal dictatorship, we have been vigorously opposed to Senator Mitchell's proposal to set up a Department of Interior comintern, under paternalistic guidance from Washington, for our Pacific Northwest development.

There might, of course, be a trace of provincial jealousy in our spirit of opposition. We dislike having the Umpqua Basin made a part of the Columbia Valley by the same processes through which California moves Crater Lake into that state. Had it been named the Umpqua Valley Authority, embracing the Columbia region, we might be more amenable—but we still wouldn't like it.

The Roseburg Chamber of Commerce and other civic bodies throughout Douglas County have submitted strong resolutions in opposition to the proposal. If the existing CVA bill is allowed to die a natural death through adjournment of Congress without action upon this bill, the resolutions will not carry over.

It might be a good plan to anticipate revival of the attempt, with renewed organizational strength, in the next Congress. Those who oppose the program could be writing our congressional delegation (the proponents should exercise the same privilege) and give our senators and representatives a cross section of opinion. Civic bodies, by arming our delegation with resolutions, would provide ammunition when a new attempt is made to hand our empire over to Washington-guided experimenters.

Morse, the Publicity Agent

Senator Wayne Morse, who has surprised everyone by his versatility, has received no acclaim, so far as we have learned, for his ability as a press relations man, or publicity agent—for Senator Morse. By regular post, airmail, and off telegraph wires, Oregon newspapers receive direct messages from the Oregon senator, copies of Congressional Record, carrying text of speeches and debates; statements of policy, comment on current issues and other material—agent Morse.

Whether his constituency, individually or collectively, approves or disapproves the Morse policies and actions, no one can say the Oregon senator is receiving any lack of public attention. He is very much in the news.

There is, perhaps, a bit of the shrewdness, which has marked his meteoric political career, in the style of his press contacts. Politicians are prone to charge the press with misquotations of remarks or distortion of stated policies. There is little danger that any statements by Morse can long be misconstrued, for, directly from his Washington office, come telegrams or letters containing official records of his every utterance. And, in addition, he shows good news sense, something not always found in political publicity.

Achiu, Katonen to Clash at Armory in Judo Battle

Douglas County wrestling followers are collecting dividends these days for their faithful support of professional wrestling. Last Saturday a capacity crowd was on hand to watch Ernie Piluso make a successful defense of his world's light-heavyweight championship.

And now Matchmaker Don Owen has booked the first Judo wrestling exhibition in the northwest for five years at the Roseburg Armory arena last Saturday night. Judo wrestling, with both rivals dressed in judo jackets, is the roughest, toughest sport of competition, and to make it doubly colorful will be the heated rivalry between the two opponents—Walter Achiu and Paavo Katonen.

Two weeks ago, when Achiu replaced Elton Owen as referee because of an injury to the latter, the Chinese Judo artist became involved with Katonen in a fistie engagement and eventually disqualified the burly Finn, giving Joe Lynn a straight-fall triumph.

Katonen, who once visited the Orient and became a master of Judo and taught it to the natives for some time during the war, challenged Achiu to a match, which the Chinese mat veteran accepted providing the match was under "winner take all" regulations. Katonen accepted immediately.

Job on the Phillies, 5-0, facing only 27 men. It was a third straight triumph for the six-foot five-inch righthander who lost his first two outings.

Kahut, Fitzpatrick Draw in Their Third Battle

LOS ANGELES, June 5.—(AP)—Hilton (Fitz) Fitzpatrick rallied in the second half of a 10-round bout to pull out a draw verdict in a wild, free-swinging melee with Joe Kahut, Woodburn, Ore., heavyweight, last night.

Kahut had a shade the better of it in early rounds. His key punch, a jolting right uppercut in close, rocked Fitz repeatedly. Fitzpatrick opened a cut over Kahut's right eye in the first round. The Oregon fighter retaliated in the third by opening an ugly gash above Fitzpatrick's left eye.

In two previous meetings Kahut had taken a 10-round decision and a seven-round TKO. Kahut weighed 180, Fitzpatrick, 170.

SEATTLE, Wash., June 5.—(AP)—Al Hostak, returning to the boxing game at the age of 30 and weighing 168 pounds, knocked out Roman Starr, 163, of Oklahoma City, in the fourth round here last night.
