Eating Residue of Bee Hives Cleansed of Honey Studied as Likely Formula for Longevity

AP Newsfeatures.

ATLANTA—Mrs. Helen Dortch Longstreet, widow of the confederate general, believes that eating the residue of bee hives after honey has been cleaned from them is a formula for long life.

Mrs. Longstreet is happy with these hives and is trying to persuade the ranking surviving confederate soldier, who recently celebrated his 100th birthday, to try them and live longer.

The indomitable little Mrs. Longstreet asked the American ambassador to Moscow, W. Averell Harriman, to obtain a reputed Russian formula for prolonging life. Ambassador Harriman wrote that a rumor of a life-prolonging substance had been developed by the Russians was probably traceable to investigations being conducted by Prof. Nikolai V. Tsitsin.

"It seems," said Harriman, "that during the course of studies of the habits of people over 100 years old living in the Soviet Union it was found that many of these people were engaged in producing and selling honey.

Residue Contains Pollen

"After the best grade of honey had been sold, the residue was consumed by these vendors themselves. This residue was found to contain significant quantities of pollen.

'Prof. Tsitsin feels that the pollen was responsible for prolonging the lives of these people, but it has not been established that this is a fact. . . .

"Even if it had been established that eating pollen would prolong life, there would still be the question as to whether longevity results from a whole lifetime of eating pollen or if it is possible to attain the longevity no matter at what age one began eating pollen."

Jones Contradicted on British Loan Assertion

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP)—Assistant Secretary of State William L. Clayton asserted today today Jesse Jones is "100 per cent wrong" in saying the British loan would form an exclusive alliance between the United States and britain.

"I'm afraid," Clayton told the House banking committee, "Mr. Jones fails to see the forest for the trees" in opposing the proposed $3,750,000,000 credit.

Jones, former Secretary of Commerce, wrote the committee two days ago that the loan in its present form "sets a bad precedent. It forms an alliance with the British that we are unwilling to form with other countries . . ."

Clayton, however, countered with this argument:

"This is not an alliance. It is perfectly in the open. There are no bugs under the chips here. Instead of making a world economic bloc it dissolves a bloc and prevents the formation of another one."
