

Rod-Gun Club Financial Plans Are Progressing

The club has pledged first available income to repayment of the Loan Certificates to be issued each subscriber. More than 20 entirely voluntary responses were reported by the Treasurer at Wednesday's meeting, with an equal number immediately in prospect. Plans were made for a personal contact campaign to be launched in the near future in following up the letters.

Fish Count Low

Ross Newcomb, state game department biologist, who is in charge of the fish survey on the Umpqua River, reported the tally made at the Winchester counting station to date to be very disappointing. Steelheads counted over the dam since last December 4 numbered slightly more than 4,000. A few summer steelheads are now beginning to pass the station. The Chinook salmon run, while still in progress, has been exceptionally light, with only about 1600 tallied. This does not include approximately 280 jack salmon.

A favorable and more optimistic condition was reported from the South Umpqua area, where large numbers of steelhead fry, apparently in flourishing condition, were found in small tributaries. Newcomb also reported finding a considerable number of Silverside salmon fry in South Umpqua tributaries, indicating the upriver run of these fall salmon may eventually be restored.

Commercial Take Light

Commercial fishermen at the mouth of the river took only 180 Chinook salmon during three weeks of net fishing, Newcomb said. Approximately 500 salmon have been taken by sports fishermen since the start of the season. Newcomb urged sportsmen to cooperate by returning the voluntary report cards issued by the survey party. Returns to date, he said, have been about 26 per cent of the cards issued. A check of these reports provides most valuable information in determining fish population and habits, Newcomb said, and the larger the percentage of returns, the more accurately the scientists can compile stream data.

The Rod and Gun Club, which, prior to the war, cooperated with the game commission in rearing Chinese pheasants in holding pens on the Veterans Hospital grounds, had applied for birds to be reared during the coming season. Because feed for the birds would deprive chicken and turkey raisers of feed needed for their flocks, the club voted to withdraw its application and refrain from the project for the duration of the feed shortage.

Fred Kuck, chairman of the committee on trapshoots, was authorized to purchase and install an additional trap at the Winchester grounds.

Duck Refuge Sought

The club was invited to send a representative to meet with the State Game Commission at Portland early in July to consider changes in the state laws pertaining to game. Due to construction of new homes along the bank of the North Umpqua River above the Winchester dam, making shooting in that area dangerous, the club voted to recommend to the commission the creation of a duck refuge between the dam and the head of the reservoir it creates.

Considerable discussion was held regarding a proposed change in the bag limit on deer to permit a hunter to kill one deer of either sex rather than confining him to one buck deer as at present. There was divided opinion and the game committee was instructed to procure information from game departments of Maine, Pennsylvania and Idaho, which have deer instead of buck laws in effect, to determine how effectively their systems operate.

formal recognition of the matter. Sumner's position in support of hands-off attitude for the present was echoed in stronger words by his opposite number in the Senate when Chairman McCarran (D-Nev.) of that chamber's judiciary committee pleaded with his colleagues to "reserve judgment in this trying moment."

Election of Director For Schools Scheduled

ings to house activities, such as the band, outside present school structures, and for furniture, repairs, etc.

The balance of the $92,000 increase is made up of increased janitor service, supplies, furnishings and equipment, all necessitated by school growth.

Double OK Required

The proposed consolidation will require an affirmative vote in both the Roseburg and Sylton Valley districts. Sylton Valley adjoins the Roseburg district of the west and now supports a one-room school, which last year served 25 pupils. The growth in that area will demand larger facilities for next year if a local school is to be maintained. The Sylton Valley district now is sending its 7th and 8th grade pupils to Roseburg Junior High, and its high school pupils are coming into the Roseburg schools.

Consolidation would add Sylton Valley's $116,540 valuation to the Roseburg district. One director is to be chosen to fill the place made vacant by expiration of the term of Leon E. McClintock, who has served for the past seven years. Three candidates, W. J. Mess, John C. Piper, and Charles Poirot, have been regularly nominated.

Way Opened for Hoist In Restaurant Prices

food items might go up if ceilings were removed has been the subject of much controversy. Stabilization Director Bowles has estimated that meat prices would jump 40 to 50 per cent.

At present only a few feed items come within the scope of the revised regulation. Ceilings on lobsters and most kinds of fish have been removed, for example. This means menu prices may be based on the cost of these items.

An OPA official who withheld use of his name said the new order provides "the only just way" of handling restaurant prices and at the same time "maintaining any semblance of control."

Commenting on this and other changes in the price regulation covering public eating places, the National Restaurant Association said in a statement that the revisions "will not mean increased menu prices."

However, a spokesman for the organization told a reporter later that this view was based on present circumstances and did not take into consideration the possibility that ceilings may be removed on major foods.

The restaurant changes went into effect as government economists estimated that housewives' costs for major foods have climbed in recent weeks at the rate of $485,000,000 a year.

They broke down their figures this way: A cent a loaf for bread—$125, 000,000; a penny a quart for milk and authorized price hikes for butter and cheese—$250,000,000; general meat price increases which became effective in April—$110,000,000.

PORTLAND, June 13.—(P)—Heads of Oregon Bakery Associations said the one-cent a loaf price increase for bread went into effect in Oregon today.
