Joe Louis Knocks Out Conn in Eighth Round

Negro's fists suddenly went off and left Conn wrapped in darkness on the floor, the great crowd banked in the Yankee ball yard had witnessed as dull a fight as the ring game ever spawned. At $100 a head it must have been horrible.

Afraid to mix it with the grim, determined Louis, Billy had for seven and a fraction rounds done almost nothing except dance around and elude with desperate purpose the blows that he seemed to realize would come sooner or later.

Conn Not Former Self
He was a far different Conn from the cocky, aggressive youngster who just five years ago thrilled a similar crowd by fighting Louis for all he was worth down to the bitter end in the 13th round. Last night the spark was gone. Possibly Billy left his best fight in his training camp.

"I knew I was making a stinking fight," he said apologetically to State Athletic Commissioner Eddie Egan, who visited him in his dressing room. "I thought I could keep away from Joe for 15 rounds," he added with a rueful grin, "but I know better now."

In Conn's defense, probably no fighter living today could have done any better than he did against the Joe Louis who stalked him and finally brought him down last night. Possibly none could have eluded the Negro with the fearsome fists even as long as Billy did.

Louis "More Terrible"
The 45,266 fans who paid $1,925,564 to witness the one-sided spectacle at least can tell their grandchildren they saw a great champion at near to his best. Perhaps it was his best. Conn, at least, said it was a more terrible Louis he faced last night than in 1941.

Trim and sharp as a bushel of razor blades of 207 pounds, the Brown Bomber must have appeared an awesome customer even to Conn when he shed his bathrobe just before the opening bell. And there was no particle of doubt once the gong clanged that Joe was going after his man with a tenacity that would be difficult to deny for long.

Three Blows End Fight
Joe didn't hurry things, exactly. He just shuffled eternally forward, waiting almost patiently for the opening he was certain would come. Billy must have felt the futility of his retreat long before the two terrific rights and a left to the jaw smashed him down after 2:19 of the eighth round.

The early stages were boring. With Louis holding his fire and Billy operating with extreme caution, not a half-dozen blows were exchanged in the opening round, and most of those were light lefts flicked to the champion's emotionless pan. That was the third and the third were the only ones that could have been awarded the Pittsburgh kid.

End Clearly Foreseen
Gradually Louis increased the pressure, until, by the fourth chapter, he was dealing Conn considerable punishment with stinging left jabs, and occasionally was crowding his lighter opponent close to the ropes and whanging him with left and right hooks. At this stage the champ's body blows appeared to be taking a trace of speed out of Billy's nimble feet.

As Louis won the fifth, sixth and seventh rounds by increasingly wider margins the crowd, as well as Conn, must have sensed that the play was approaching its climax. Billy tried fewer and fewer punches. Once, in the sixth, he slipped to one knee after taking a jolting Louis jab on the chin, but he bounced up without a count and tried to grapple cheerfully at his pursuer. But it was a sad effort.

Apparently sensing the kill, Louis went out to finish it in the eighth. For the first time, the men in his corner sent him out with sharp ejaculations of impending victory.
Early in the round Joe caught Billy in a corner and gave him a rough going-over. In the midst of the flurry of punches, Conn gave a little laugh and said something inaudible to Joe. He couldn't recall later what it was he said, but it appeared to have a powerful effect on Joe.

Knockout Comes Suddenly
Seconds later Louis launched a terrific right in mid-ring that caught Billy flush in the face and opened a cut under his left eye that sent blood cascading down to his chin. Then the end came with stunning suddenness.
As they came together in a neutral corner the big Negro whipped a right cross to the head that buckled Conn's knees. Then, the great finisher that he has always been, he whanged another right to the jaw that started Billy down, and brought across a left that dumped him on the canvas.

There was never a chance that he would gain his feet by the count of ten. He struggled as Referee Eddie Joseph took up the count with the official timekeeper, but at the final sweep of the official's right arm the Pittsburgh kid had only succeeded in rapping up on elbow. His eyes were glazed and unseeing as his handlers rushed across and helped him to his stool.

Enough to Pay Debts
For defending his title successfully for the 22nd time, Louis figured to draw approximately $377,700 as his end of the purse. Conn's share was approximately $289,000.

Fortunately for Billy, he is supposed to be sufficiently well fixed financially to quit the ring at 28 if he feels like it—and there is no doubt he was serious in his intention last night. It is said on good authority that he is worth $200,000.

As for Louis, the money he made last night is not expected to do much more than pay off his debts to Promoter Mike Jacobs and the government, to whom he is far in arrears on his income tax. He said he will not fight again this year.

Louis, aside from successfully defending his title for the unprecedented figure of 22 times, also established a new ring record of having earned a total of $2,956,086.

Lookout Stations Personnel Attend Training Course
Eighty fire fighters who will man the lookout stations and lead the fire suppression crews on the Umpqua National Forest this summer are completing today their annual fire school at Wolf Creek Training Camp east of Glide.

Staff members of the forest and its four ranger districts are instructors for the school, which is training fire fighting crews in reading of maps and compasses, locating fires from lookout stations, use of radio and telephone equipment, and in fighting fires on the line.

Ray B. Hampton, in charge of fire control for the Umpqua Forest is director of the three-day school.
Visiting the camp yesterday, and dining in the mess hall, were M. M. Nelson, supervisor of the Umpqua National Forest; V. V. Harpham, retired supervisor; Fred Asam, retired ranger, and Frank Denton and Howard Ott, both of Roseburg. Ott offered as a prize, a compass to be awarded the winner of a compass and pacing course to be held at the camp tonight.

"I'm always glad to get among you fellows and to see so many old faces," Harpham told the men. "We can go into the fire season with a lot more confidence with so many old timers back on the job. And we ought to be glad to have Red (Nelson) and Ray (Hampton) still on the job back in the office."

Among the men at the school this year are many who were wearing Army fatigues or Navy dungarees. A number of the fire fighters are returning to the forest from service in the armed forces, and will provide leadership for younger members of the fire fighting crews.

During the war, the crews included boys as young as 16. Nelson said, but now the age limit is 17. Several of the men students of forestry at Oregon State College who are spending the summer in forest fire suppression work.

Driver Examiner Sets Dates in Roseburg
A state driver's license examiner is scheduled to be in Roseburg next Tuesday and Wednesday, June 25 and 26, at the city hall, between the hours of 10 A. M. and 5 P. M., and 8 A. M. and 4 P. M. respectively.

Examinations will be given on the second floor, in the city council chambers.
Persons wishing licenses or permits to drive motor vehicles, are asked to get in touch with the examiner well ahead of the scheduled closing hour in order to assure completion of their applications with a minimum of delay.

Fire Damages Roof
Slight damage was caused by fire on the roof of Corkrum Motors, N. Rose St., yesterday afternoon, Fire Chief Glenn H. Taylor reported. Cause of the blaze was believed by him to have been due to a cigaret thrown from an upper window of the Grand Hotel.

Clinic Date Changed
The regular afternoon health clinic will be held Wednesday, June 26, instead of Thursday, June 27, according to an announcement made today by the Douglas County Public Health Association.
