War Duty Brings Legion of Merit To Col. Bowker

Col. Morris C. Bowker, former Douglas County judge, has been awarded the Legion of Merit for "meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services in the Southwest Pacific area, and Japan, from October 10, 1941, to October 15, 1945."

War Duty Brings Legion of Merit To Col. Bowker

Col. Bowker is now a patient at Fitzsimmons General Hospital, Denver, Colo., where he is being treated for tuberculosis contracted while in service. He is one of a number of patients receiving treatment with the new drug streptomycin, which holds promise to provide a cure for the disease.

The citation accompanying the award of the Legion of Merit reads: "As assistant chief of staff, G-1, IX Corps, Col. Bowker displayed marked ability in planning and coordinating personnel policies and procedures during climate operations in the war against Japan. He skillfully overcame personnel replacement problems incident to the preparation of the Tenth Army units for second and subsequent shipping echelons from the Hawaiian Islands to Okinawa, and gave material assistance to planning for an operation against the China coast."

Large numbers of people will be converging upon Roseburg from all parts of the county to attend the rodeo Friday and Saturday. Unless extreme caution is observed, we are apt to experience a number of grass and brush fires, and possibly forest fires of serious proportions.

MAINTAIN A GOOD HABIT

By CHARLES V. STANTON

A most timely warning is being issued by Forrest Losse, Douglas County chairman of the Keep Oregon Green committee, who urges extreme care on the part of motorists to prevent roadside fires, particularly over the weekend, as crowds converge upon Roseburg to attend the sheriff's posse rodeo.

The warning, however, should extend further, including everyone, everywhere.

We have amply demonstrated our ability to prevent forest fires by the manner in which we chalked up new records throughout the war years, despite the most serious handicaps.

Realizing the danger to our security through forest fires which would hinder troop movements, screen possible enemy action by a smoke pall, or interfere with effective patrols along our own seacoast, we were conscious of fire hazards and were cooperative in prevention of forest fires. Throughout the entire war period the number and size of forest fires set new low records, while, at the same time, public cooperation was at the highest level.

Contention of forest protective agencies that the majority of forest fires are man-caused and, therefore, preventable was proven beyond doubt.

We know now that we CAN prevent forest fires, if we WILL.

We are now entering the fire season. Many people doubtless hold the opinion that because we have had a considerable amount of late rain, because snow has not melted entirely from higher elevations, and because water level in streams is above seasonal levels, that there is little danger of fire.

But the fact is that it takes only a few hours of high temperature and low humidity to create a fire hazard. Let humidity drop, and a fern patch, which only a few hours before might have been damp, becomes a virtual powder keg, ready to explode if touched by a spark. The layer of dry, dead fern underneath the new growth is a fuse, awaiting only the igniting agent before starting a blaze which could destroy millions of feet of valuable timber.

It remains to be seen whether the habits of caution observed during the war years as a protective and security measure are to be carried over, or whether we are to lapse again into carelessness and negligence as in days before the war.

If we could only understand the values which are to be found in our forests, we would be more cautious than ever. Every board foot of standing timber represents a measure of employment and industrial profit. Multiplied by 70 billion, the approximate timber resource of Douglas County, measured in board feet, it is evident that we have in these verdant hills by which we are surrounded an above-surface mine of green gold awaiting only efficient development. Every fire which bites into that great resource means a substantial loss in man hours of employment, a reduction in potential industrial operation, a loss of tax revenue, a burnt sacrifice of business activity and profit.

From an entirely selfish and mercenary standpoint it pays us to be careful with fire in the woods and along our highways. Every individual suffers a financial loss, either directly or indirectly, in every fire which destroys merchantable timber. The amount of loss to the individual may be minute, but, when considered collectively, the sum may be quite large.

We have trained ourselves in habits of caution. We have demonstrated our ability to prevent fire. Now let's continue the good habits we have formed, bring increasing public sentiment against those who are criminally inclined towards incendiarism, and extend every possible measure of cooperation to those agencies working to preserve our forest resource intact.

KODAK DIAL-LOG

All the boys who had their skins down on Louis are still beaming this morning. Guess that 4-to-1 quotation at ringside was right on the nose (chin). Ole Joe's pretty terrific. He just shuffles around till the guy leaves an opening and zowie! It's all over but scarpin' off the resin. Betcha a small amount that there were more listeners on the Louis-Cohn fight Wednesday night than the President had had in his last two radio addresses.

Been waitin' for some enterprising urchin to put a west-out outfit on his dog. We've seen everything else this week. Aggie Pitchford's high lace shoes snagged more attention on Jackson street than some of the tight-fitting slacks.

Betty Grable's husband toots his trumpet on Spotlight Bands tonight at 6:30. You guessed it son—Harry James, that is. And say, if you haven't heard Melody Tours (Fridays 8 to 8:30 P. M.) you're missin' a good show.

Got a big bang out of Time and Life recently with their propaganda about radio's bad commercials. Those guys claim that radio is too much commercial and in poor taste. This week's Life has 27 of the first 30 pages in almost solid advertising. One picture shows a guy belching, another shows a gal and two guys on a train in night clothes; a toothpaste ad showing how brushing your molars with their paste gets more kissin', and a guy in jockey shorts.
