

Jobless Pay Not Allowed Vets in Schooling Period

Veterans who are drawing subsistence payments in training under the G. I. Bill of Rights were cautioned today by representatives of the Veterans Administration, that it is illegal to draw unemployment compensation at the same time.

A few cases have been discovered recently where veterans continued to draw readjustment allowances until they received their first subsistence under the vocational rehabilitation program. This constituted a violation of the law, since subsistence is paid on the first of each month to cover the previous month and the veterans actually were drawing both unemployment compensation and subsistence allowance during one month.

The visiting representative pointed out that Section 1300 of the G. I. Bill of Rights provides that "any claimant who knowingly accepts an allowance to which he is not entitled shall be ineligible to receive any further allowance under this title."

Readjustment allowances are paid by the State Unemployment Commission and subsistence allowances are paid by the federal government. As a result, several weeks may elapse before the two lists can be checked, but eventually any veteran who appears on both lists for the same period of time will be discovered. Also, employers are required to turn in the trainee's Social Security number and again his name will be checked.
