have a ham and egg sandwich if we had an egg. Well, that's the fix we're in now. Only CONTINUED PRODUCTION can get us both the ham and the egg we need to make the sandwich we all want.

INCIDENTALLY, we must always guard against the tendency to think the picture is darker than it really is. We must remember that BAD news always makes the headlines.

ALSO— We must remember that we READ the bad news, all the way through, whereas we often skip the constructive. GOOD news that really fills three-fourths of all the space in all the newspapers of America practically every day.

FOR example: We read of strikes and work stoppages. We read how OPA rules are hampering normal production and distribution. We jump to the conclusion that the country is going to hell in a hand basket FAST.

But if you read this and other newspapers discriminatingly the other day you found a Washington dispatch announcing that at the present moment fewer than 150,000 workers are idle because of strikes.

That is the lowest figure since just after V-J Day. THE peak of idleness because of labor disputes, by the way, came on Friday, January 25, when 1,680,000 workers were off the job. The figure now is less than ten per cent of that rather staggering total.

It looks as this is written as if the conference OPA bill, referred to in this column yesterday, will be approved by both houses of congress and will go to the President—who may or may not veto it. (It is at least a fair guess that he won't, as the time limit on OPA is getting extremely short.)

The house has already approved it. Senator Lucas (Democrat, of Illinois) says he thinks the overwhelming house vote (265 to 105) foreshadows a senate OK for the bill—even though, he added, "nobody likes it."

To keep the picture straight in your own mind, you must remember that this ruckus over OPA is as full of politics as a dog is of fleas. More or less ALL the politicians have been using OPA to put their opponents on the spot.

Hence the hullabaloo. All reasonable thinkers have known from the beginning that we will have to put up with price control until such a time as production reaches a moderately stable balance with demand and COMPETITION comes back into the picture.

Just Practicing

SPOKANE, Wash., June 27.—(AP)—Police arrived at the scene of a traffic accident and found a young woman enthusiastically administering "first aid" to the hale victim. "I've got the pressure points," she declared, pointing to the man's clothing, well ripped up to reveal spots where pressure would halt any bleeding.

Rushed to emergency hospital, the victim was found to have suffered only a slight bump on his head and a scratch on his nose.

A FRIEND GOES FISHING

By CHARLES V. STANTON

One of our good friends has announced he is going fishing. He plans to put a sleeping bag and air mattress into his car, add a box of groceries, an axe, shovel, and water bucket, a few cooking utensils and his fishing tackle, whereupon he will be on his way for two days of the Great Outdoors.

He will go where he pleases, fish where he pleases and camp where he pleases.

He will spread out his sleeping bag under a giant fir, close to the banks of the river, where the roaring rapids will sing a lullaby. Or, he will sleep beside the shores of a lake, where the waves hum their soothing slumber song upon soft sands. He will waken in the early morning and brew a pot of coffee over a wood fire, not omitting (we hope) a few ashes. He will toss a few small trout into a pan, perhaps to be followed by two or three eggs, which he probably will end up by scrambling, and, after gulping down a hurried repast—hurried because trout will be jumping nearby—he will rig up his tackle and spend the rest of the day, until weary, aching, probably sunburned and bitten by mosquitoes, endeavoring to fill a creel with fish.

You perhaps are asking, "what's unusual about that? We've done that hundreds of times!"

Such a trip is commonplace to great numbers of Oregonians, but can you imagine what a fairy tale it would seem to a guy living in New York, or Chicago, or Washington, or other of our large cities in the more densely populated sections of our country?

It is so commonplace to those of us who are in the habit of jumping into our cars at almost a moment's notice and striking off for a fishing stream, a lake, the seashore or mountain retreat, that we seldom stop to think of what a priceless privilege we enjoy. We do not stop to realize that millions upon millions of people live in crowded cities and that their outdoor recreation usually consists of sharing with thousands of people a small section of seacoast or lakeshore beach.

Because we accept as commonplace the great privilege which is ours, we grow careless of its preservation. We allow our streams to become depleted of fish life. We permit our scenic resources to be destroyed. We permit recreational spots to be bought up by private interests, which deny public access, and do not awaken to our loss until it is too late.

Recall, if you will, the names of streams, once abundant in fish life, which have been abandoned by commercial fishermen because salmon migration has been destroyed. Look more closely at home to see one of Oregon's largest rivers, once the queen of the sports field, now almost destitute of fish because we have too long neglected our natural heritage.

Our friend is going fishing. He has a reasonable chance to fill his basket with the limit of fish, because he is a good fisherman and will work hard at his sport. But will his son and his grandson be able to enjoy the privilege which is his today? Are you interested in preserving for your son and your grandson and your great-grandson and those to follow, bearing your name, the great heritage which is yours today? Will tomorrow's young man be able to toss his sleeping bag in his atomic-powered car or plane and find restoration of energy in primitive association with Nature? He will not unless we arouse ourselves to the necessity of preserving those privileges for him; unless we are willing to cooperate in programs of conservation and preservation.

The Pled Piper of Swing gets his award on tonight's edition of Spotlight Bands. "The Horn" has been playing trumpet since he made his professional debut with a circus band at the age of eight when his ma and pa were part of the troupe. He's tops in his chosen field all right... but he's envied most of all because he's married to the gorgeous Grable.

Melody Tours at 8:00 o'clock tonight is pleasant listening... nothing sensational but very soothing and easy on the ears. Two vocalists, plus Felix Mills all-attire group offer sweet pop tunes for a half-hour. Remember your request time on Saturday A. M. ... Vic Rice at the studio grand to play your favorites.

Note to "Leave It to the Girls" fans: Your favorite show will not be heard this Saturday night. There's a special "Eye of the Atom Bomb" six-way broadcast with all of the generals, admirals and so on participating... including Vice Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, commander of the Joint Army-Navy task force assembled at "Operations Crossroads" for the tests the following day.

No dope on the Sunday broadcast... stay tuned to 1490 and you won't miss it.

Food Crisis Not Over, Truman Says

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(AP)—President Truman said today the world food crisis "is not over," although the United States is abreast of its goal in the shipment of grain. The President said in a statement that the country must continue to share its food "during the coming months of hunger abroad." He released this statement to a conference, asserting that the United States will fully meet its half-year goal of 6,000,000 tons of food grains, but that final shipments to complete the total will not leave American ports until after the first of July. In asserting that "the crisis is not over," Mr. Truman said that the loaf of bread that the housewife does not buy means "that much more for hungry children abroad." "The very fact that housewives today often find it hard to buy a loaf of bread is evidence of the success of our famine emergency program," the Presidential statement continued. An accompanying report, prepared by retiring Reconversion Director John W. Snyder, now treasury secretary, said the shipment of over five and a half million tons of bread grains in the first half of this year is a record "of which the government and the people can be proud."
