

Trash Fire Rules Still Effective

The burning of quantities of trash or slabwood within the western Oregon area without a permit is violation of a proclamation made by the state governor, Roseburg Fire Chief Glen H. Taylor stressed Saturday.

The proclamation, issued in February, 1943, is still in effect and reads (in part):

"... do hereby proclaim that the unregulated use of fire in the burning of slash or debris within that part of Oregon west of the summit of the Cascade Mountains is unlawful and shall be subject to the following regulations:

"No burning without first securing a permit from the State Forestry Service or a regularly appointed state fire warden; provided, however, that no permit shall be required for the burning of debris in small quantities not within one-eighth of one mile from forest land."

Oral fire permits for this vicinity may be obtained by phoning the Forestry Service at 98 for suburban, and residents within Roseburg city limits may phone the city fire hall at 163.

Much expense is saved, Taylor said, by knowing the addresses of all controlled trash fires and the exact time of burning, through the elimination of false alarms.

the FEED BAG

Vol. VIII Published Weekly by the Douglas County Flour Mill, Mfrs. of Umpqua No. 23 and Sunrise Poultry and Dairy Feeds. July 1, 1946.

Customer Criticism.

In those good old days when there was just as much stuff to sell as there were buyers to buy it, some business firms who were eager to please their customers were beginning to invite criticism from their customers. The idea was to improve the quality of merchandise and establish better understanding between seller and buyer.

It was a good idea, too. Here at the Douglas Flour Mill we used to say: "If you don't like it, tell us, but if you do like it, tell everybody." It did you good to get a gripe off your chest, and most every time we could explain everything to your satisfaction. And we are thankful that so many of you told your friends all the good things you knew about us. (At least, we were until we ran out of anything to sell.)

Of course, in these modern times of planned economy, nobody criticizes anybody who will sell anything. Used to be that when we bought something the merchant or his clerk would bow and scrape and say "Thank YOU!" Now we go in and say "Don't suppose you have anything to sell?" The merchant maybe says: "Why yes, we have some glass elephants." We say: "Would you sell one?" He might answer: "Yes, one to a customer."

Well, of course, we don't need a glass elephant right now, but we have that spending habit, and the money, so we buy it and say "Thank YOU!"

Well, the time may come again when the law of supply and demand will be in effect. But in the meantime, if your chickens and turkeys are not doing or growing as well as you think they should, don't jump to the conclusion too quick that "it's the feed." Or even that "it's the lack of feed."

The quality of what feed you get is very good. In fact, it is nothing short of a miracle that feed companies can do as well as they are doing. We have seen lots of birds that are doing swell, both in growth and production. So if yours are not, let's get together and see if we can't find some reason other than Washington, D. C.

In other words, let's criticize the feed between ourselves, but let's get the best growth and production we can from our flocks and herds.

D. D. T. Is Dangerous. So Are Flies.
Every paper and magazine these days is bulging with advertisements of D. D. T. in some form or other. Many wild claims are made for it, some entirely without foundation. Still a merchant can't be blamed for wanting to sell. That's his business. And D. D. T. is one of the few items that are not on the "hard to get" list.

D. D. T. kills many kinds of insects. Against many others it is entirely harmless. It kills honey bees, and if all the honey bees were liquidated the resulting food shortages would make OPA and CCC hang their heads in shame at their own ineffectiveness.

But D. D. T. will kill flies, and flies are carriers of many diseases among livestock and poultry as well as humans. Whenever D. D. T. is used at all, it should be used exactly according to directions, and in places where it will not be harmful.

At the Mill we have D. D. T. in several forms. We also have a large sprayer we will let you use for big jobs. Use it around the house, barns and poultry and brooder houses. Follow directions. For a better job, use our big sprayer.

Just Luck.
Friend: "Who introduced you to your wife?"

Pal: "We just happened to meet. I don't blame anybody."

Uh, oh! That's probably a mistake.

Note from teacher: "Mary is a good scholar, intelligent, but talks too much."

Answer from Mary's Pop: "Yeah, but you should know her mother!"

Cull All the Time.
The feed shortage may do a little good. We see very few bum looking birds in most flocks. Indicating that growers are disposing of these profit spoilers this season more than ever before.

There probably never was a time when scrubs paid off for feed consumed and labor spent. Scrubs are kept through sentiment and pity, neither of which pays off in cash. Besides, the scrub probably doesn't enjoy life too abundantly.

Turning on the Heat.
We hate to continue using our advertising space to advertise the bureaucrats down Washington way. But we have little to sell, and we think they may know why. And we get tired of reading the lies they are getting into the public press day after day.

So we would like to build a little fire under a few of them, and would like you to help fan it into a good blaze. You can start a balky mule that way, and it might, JUST MIGHT, work on a bureaucrat.

Please, all our poultry and livestock producing friends; hammer away on your city friends this one theme: DON'T BUY ANY CONFIDENCE IN PRESS REPORTS UNTIL THEY HAVE BEEN COMPLETELY INVESTIGATED. There will be NO improvement in the bread and flour situation until wheat gets out of the newspapers and into the flour mills. Usage will be held at 75% of last year's usage, and as time passes and reserves are depleted we will realize how little 75% can be.

Tell your city friends that of the 500 cars of hominy feed and 500 cars of grain that the Government PROMISED US, a total of 18 have been received or are rolling as of this date. When your city friends get hungry for bread and flour, make them realize it isn't because your chickens or cows got any wheat. Flocks are still being liquidated.

Tell them that Ervin L. Peterson, Oregon Sec'y. of Agriculture says: "All we have had so far is promises which the facts clearly indicated could not be fulfilled, when made. * * * The sad part is the government has wheat which could be used without jeopardizing the famine relief program. Mr. (Clinton) Anderson, Mr. (N. E.) Dodd and THE PRESIDENT have the full facts concerning this matter."

Now, who calls who what. Do you believe the Douglas Flour Mill now? Why not write the above gentlemen?

Nor will food shortages be confined to bread and flour. Compared to 1919, following World War I, we have in the U. S. per 1,000 of population: 143 fewer hogs, 101 fewer sheep and lambs, 12 fewer milk cows, and 98 fewer other cattle and calves.

Black markets will thrive. Prices will rise. Regardless of OPA, we MUST have production. We must have it at any cost—or else. As an example of one kind of black market, from Nebraska comes an authentic report that corn is getting scarce; now it's one automobile for three cars of corn, where it has been running four or five. Yes, prices will be high, but it will be worth a lot to get back to sanity again.
