Liquor Seizure Hit By Court's Ruling

SALEM, Ore., July 2.—(AP)—The state Supreme Court ruled today that the Oregon Liquor Commission must return to the Merchants Wholesale Co. of Los Angeles $11,010 worth of whiskey which the commission seized last year.

The court's opinion, by Chief Justice Bell, upheld Circuit Judge Latourette of Clackamas County, who found that while the commission acted in good faith, it had no right to seize the liquor. The liquor was stolen in Los Angeles by two men, who brought the liquor into Oregon by truck. State police, stopping the truck near Canby for a minor traffic violation, discovered the liquor, and turned it over to the liquor commission.

The commission contended it had a right to seize the liquor on grounds that the commission has a liquor monopoly. But the high court ruled that the liquor still belongs to the company, and that the company should take it back to California as quickly as possible.

Dr. P. G. Trueblood, Family Here For Summer Vacation

Dr. and Mrs. Paul G. Trueblood and their two daughters, Anne and Susan, have arrived in Roseburg for their summer vacation. Dr. Trueblood, professor of English at Stockton Junior College for the past six years, has accepted an appointment as assistant professor of English in Rollins College, Winter Park, Fla., and will move with his family to Florida in September.

Dr. Trueblood is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Trueblood, Roseburg, and his wife, the former Helen Churchill, is the daughter of Mrs. F. H. Churchill, Roseburg. Dr. Trueblood, who has spent recent summer vacations employed as a lookout with the Umpqua National Forest Service, will be stationed during the coming season on Cinnamon Butte lookout, near Diamond Lake.

Author of the historical narrative, "The Flowering of Byron's Genius," recently published, Dr. Trueblood reports completion of an historical romance, dealing with the Applegate Trail, which is receiving its 100th anniversary celebration this year. The author hopes to have his novel published this year as a part of the centennial observance.

A graduate of Roseburg High School, Willamette and Columbia Universities, Dr. Trueblood taught in University of Idaho, prior to joining the staff of Stockton Junior College in 1940.

Salmon Run Over Bonneville Dam Heaviest Thus Far

PORTLAND, Ore., July 2.—(AP)—Chinook salmon and Steelhead trout—the migrants who return to the waters of their birth to spawn and thus keep alive the silvery runs—have gone over Bonneville Dam in greater numbers this year than in any since the dam was built.

Army engineers, who operate Bonneville's power-producing facilities on the Columbia River, reported today that the count of fish fighting their way up the "ladders" showed 97,571 Chinook and 22,239 Steelhead passed the barrier to their upstream destinations in the first six months of this year.

The totals are roughly double those of 1942—when most of the fish headed toward the sea as fingerlings.

Despite this increased upstream count, the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service continues its policy of refusing to say that dams do or do not threaten the salmon runs.

"We have hope," is as far as Leo L. Laythe, regional director, would go. "There was a strike of fishermen on the lower river this year and that increased the escapement. It is still too early to predict the effect of dams on the salmon run."

The question has aroused long controversy between fishing and power interests. Only yesterday, Oregon commercial and recreational fishing groups appeared before Rep. Richard Welch (R-Calif.) to protest "lack of protection" to fish resources in building Columbia River dams. Welch conducted a hearing for the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Bonneville Dam was completed in 1938. The engineers' count for the first six months of the year since then—the big run is in the spring—show, for Chinook salmon, $2,340 in 1939 as the high prior to this year and $5,228 in 1944 the low. They began counting in 1939.

Salmon have varying cycles, returning from the sea to their streams two to six years after entering it, but most Columbia River salmon are believed to run on a four-year cycle.

If they do not return to fresh water, there are no young salmon to perpetuate the runs.

The drowned body of Donald Laverne Miller, 14, Pine Grove, was found on the banks of the Hood River after a two-day search launched when the youth failed to return from fishing.

Questionnaire on Legislation Given Small Response

Of the 163 local members of the National Federation of Small Business, Inc., only 20 per cent respond to the monthly questionnaires which seek the opinion of small businessmen on legislation currently before Congress, H. T. Carstens, local chairman, said today.

A monthly bulletin is sent to all members summarizing vital legislation introduced in Congress, with a detachable ballot for members to return to the local chairman, who summarizes the information and passes it along to Harry Ellsworth, congressional representative for the district.

Carstens said he could not understand why local businessmen should subscribe to the service, pay their $9 fee, and yet "never send in the ballots."

The current questionnaire seeks opinion on legislation dealing with the re-employment of veterans, federal contributions to state and local governments in lieu of real estate taxes, government guarantees of payments of foreign debtors owed small businessmen participating in foreign trade, and of military PX's and government stores conducting tax-free business in competition with private business, and labor boycotts of small business.

Members are privileged to write in remarks on their ballots in addition to their "for" or "against" answers to questions on legislation. Up to now, Carstens said, the write-in remarks have almost exclusively been "against the OPA."
