tine project MIGHT have worked. The Jews have what Arab Palestine needs—organizing and business ability. Time might have demonstrated the value of these qualities even to the Palestine Arabs.

IN China, it looks very much as if Chiang Kai-Shek has rocked the boat.

It is hard to draw intelligent conclusions from what is happening in China, for the truth there is obscured by clouds of propaganda and hampered by censorship on all sides. But even Chiang's sister-in-law, Madame Sun Yat-Sen, who is also a member of the Kuomintang (the party headed by Chiang) accuses him of reactionary ambitions and thirst for power.

His rocking of the boat has embarrassed us greatly, for it seems probable that he is using lend lease war material with which WE supplied him to carry on the civil war in China. He seems to figure that because of possession of this material, plus the troops we helped him train, NOW is the time to crush the Chinese communists and leave him and his crowd supreme in China.

JOHN M. HIGHTOWER, a competent reporter, says in a recent dispatch that the U. S. government now faces a foreign policy decision along these lines:

1. Shall the U. S. government continue to give its full support to Chiang Kai-Shek, if worst comes to worst, or;

2. Shall we adopt some other attitude, possibly involving recognition of the Chinese communists as legitimate belligerents (which would amount to standing off to one side and letting the two factions fight it out without either help or hinderance from us.)

RUSSIA, of course, is the explosive factor in the situation. What will Russia do? Will she go in full scale back of the Chinese communists if they seem to be getting the worst of it?

Could that be the spark that would touch off shooting war?

RUSSIA is difficult to get along with. NOTHING we do seems to help.

For example:

Nearly every American heaved a sigh of relief when Lieutenant Redin, the young and personable Russian who was accused of spying on us, was acquitted by an American jury in Seattle.

BUT—

Pravda (Russian government newspaper) calls the whole affair a CRIMINAL CONSPIRACY by J. Edgar Hoover and our FBI. In a signed article by David Zaslavsky, under the headline: "Black Deed of the American Secret Police" Pravda says:

"There is no case of Redin. There IS the case of the American secret police and a known part of the American press which prefers to keep quiet about it.

"The Soviet officer was seized in the streets, rudely pushed into an automobile, humiliatingly searched and kept semi-naked in a cold cell. He was treated shockingly, in a way not permissible in any country, certainly not in a country pretending to be democratic.

"If it had not happened in 1946 in the United States, Comrade Redin would have had every reason to believe he was under the paws of the Gestapo."

HOW are we to get along with a government like that?

We know we MUST get along, somehow, for the penalty of failure is almost too terrible to contemplate.

But it's a tough job.

IT WORKS TWO WAYS

By CHARLES V. STANTON

Price control works two ways. We have formed the mental habit of thinking that OPA regulations mean lower prices than we would have had in the normal course of events. This habit of thinking results from our exposure to expert propaganda over a long period of time. Actually price controls, in many instances, succeed in keeping prices higher than they would normally be.

Controls, in particular, sustain higher prices through a lowering of quality. No one can say that a $2 shirt (if obtainable) is today the equivalent of a shirt purchased for $2 in prewar days. Although the price is the same, thus permitting OPA to claim it has "held the line," quality is about equivalent to a prewar 89-cent shirt. Thus, again, American people are being fooled.

Restoration of price controls, in our opinion, will serve only one purpose, that being to keep hundreds of thousands of unneeded employes on the federal payroll at taxpayers' expense until after the next election—and possibly future elections.

And while the OPA, battered, mutilated, and patched up, is permitted to remain in existence, it doubtless will continue, as in the past, to interfere with reconversion, muddle distribution by unrealistic pricing, while spending thousands of dollars in employment of expert propagandists to sing its praises and kid the American public into believing it is well served.

What happens when the OPA sets a price ceiling? The established price acts upon the consumer's mind as a guarantee that the price is fair and reasonable.

But the consumer does not know all the ramifications of OPA regulations, which permit all sorts of tricky practices to be carried on legitimately, in addition to those used by the black market.

We are all familiar with the practice of manufacturers in discontinuing an old, established line of merchandise, which, under OPA could not be manufactured profitably, and substituting an inferior brand, under a new name, at a much higher price than the quality item. There is, too, the practice of manufacturing a woman's dress in the $5 price range. The manufacturer sells it to a wholesaler who, in turn, replaces the original buttons, puts on a couple of embroidered doo-dads, and a new belt, probably at a total cost of 75 cents or $1, and the dress then can qualify in the $10 to $12 retail price division. And the OPA calls that "holding the line"! As long as the garment bears an OPA ceiling price tag, the consumer buys with no questions asked.

But what happens when the garment or other article being purchased does not bear an OPA ceiling label?

Without an OPA tag to lend false assurance he is not being gypped, the buyer compares his knowledge of prewar quality with present day quality and prices. Unless in dire necessity he is forced to buy, he waits for pricing more to his liking.

Butter and meat furnish good examples. Under OPA we couldn't get meat, even at ceiling or black market prices. But when ceilings went off, markets quickly became well supplied. Prices went up, it is true. Higher prices were justified by removal of subsidies. But meat dealers report a decided slump in retail sales, particularly on the higher priced cuts.

Butter, previously short in supply, went begging when the price soared above a level purchasers thought to be justified. Buyers' resistance forced butter prices down, in some localities, from 90 to 63 cents. If 90 cents had been the OPA ceiling price on butter, it would have been purchased without hesitation, simply because of the assurance that the price was OPA-controlled.

Thus it is quite evident, we believe, that price controls serve to keep prices UP more effectively than they hold them DOWN.

If the emasculated OPA is returned into a position of authority it would be well, we believe, to realize that a ceiling price is not always a fair or honest price.

IWA, Employers Discuss Vacation With Pay Plans

Negotiations with the fir employers' committee to allow vacations with pay for ex-service men, based on time spent in the armed forces, were opened in Portland recently by the IWA-CIO international negotiating committee, Ray Lea, local delegate to the committee, stated today.

Vacations with pay are allowed, at present, on a scale with the number of hours worked, to a maximum of 1,400 hours, during the "work year." The negotiating committee sought to count service with the armed forces as "hours of work" credited for vacation periods.

The IWA request was turned down by the employers' group, representing the Lumbermen's Industrial Relations Council, the Willamette Valley Operators' Council, and the Oregon Coast Operators Council, Lea said.

Contracts between the union and the employers are open to negotiation for wage increases twice a year, Lea said, and notice has been served that the IWA will seek a wage increase to offset the rising cost living, September 1, when the contracts are again open for negotiation.

The IWA negotiating committee also has concurred in a statement issued by the executive board of the CIO at Washington, D. C., recently, which deplores the end of OPA and declares that "a 25 per cent price rise in two weeks has wiped out all wage increases of this year. A 40 per cent price rise in two months has instituted a nationwide cut in wages, salaries, pensions and social security benefits."

Larceny Fine Imposed On Yank Legion's Chief

SEATTLE, July 26.—(AP)—Roland C. Bartlett, 36, national commander of Yank Legion, a veterans' organization, was convicted Wednesday of three charges of petty larceny and embezzlement and fined $600 in justice court. Bartlett's attorney told Justice William Hoar that the defendant had paid back the money received for advertising, and added he would appeal the conviction. Bartlett lives in Portland, Ore.

Pheasants Being Freed By State Game Farm

PORTLAND, July 26.—(AP)—Liberation of the first of 60,000 pheasants raised this year at the State Game Commission's four game farms is under way, the commission reports.

The birds are being released in areas selected by game biologists and the commission reported that Willamette Valley seed stock refuges, established by agreement with farmers, on which hunting is closed for five years, will "receive a liberal stocking."

A poor upland bird crop in most Oregon counties is reported, attributed to June and July storms.

Brother what a weekend of radio this is turning out to be. There's so much baseball scheduled that listeners may get the dates confused with the world series. Junior Legion play-offs, Central Point in a league game, House of David on Sunday afternoon, too, and the Associated Dealers just lined up for sponsorship, but all times completely changed. We'll have announcements for you later, we hope!

Pardun me, Seepyore, for talking in your face, but Ceesco is rampant again tonight with the sheriff of Nevin City hot on his trail and the countryside strewn with swooning Senoritas. Bet the writer on that show took his format after being exposed to a Frank Sinatra Broadcast.

Pullorum Testing School Set at OSC in August

The third annual pullorum testing and flock selecting school will be held at Oregon State College August 8 and 9 with the 10th devoted to the annual meeting of the Oregon Poultry Improvement association, Noel L. Bennion, extension poultryman, has just announced.

Persons who were authorized pullorum testing agents last year and who have done official testing that has been reported to the supervisor, will not be required to take this instruction for reauthorization as pullorum testers, Bennion explains.

If they wish to become authorized flock selecting agents in addition, they will need to attend this course of instruction, as will those wishing to become pullorum testers for the first time.

Those planning to attend must make application in advance to Dr. E. M. Dickenson, department of veterinary medicine, at Corvallis.

Teacher Lack May Ban Opening of 34 Schools

OREGON CITY, Ore., July 26. (AP)—Unless the teacher shortage becomes less acute, 34 Clackamas County elementary schools may not be able to open this fall, E. A. Woodworth, superintendent, warned.

There are 10 teacher vacancies in larger schools, as well as 30 one-room schools and four two-room schools, he said. Seven two-room schools also face the possibility of opening with one instructor.
