AND yet — The automobile, in itself, would have been useless in 1846, for there would have been no roads for it to travel on, and no gasoline stations at which it could refuel.

The plane, by and of itself, would have been equally useless because of the lack of landing fields and fueling stations.

THAT is to say, SUFFICIENT UNTO ITSELF is the progress of 1846 didn't miss the automobile and the plane, because they didn't know about them.

WE have the written record of 1846. We have personal knowledge of 1946.

What of 2046? Well, it seems probable that LONG before 2046 we shall be flying to the moon—perhaps to other planets. Men whose word is authoritative are already saying that within 30 YEARS interplanetary travel will be a reality.

But that doesn't need to upset us. Inter-planetary travel is as far out of OUR ken as were the automobile and the airplane to the pioneers of 1846.

AS these words are written, a flash has just come over the wire that the Yugoslavs have released the American fliers who had been held captive and incommunicado since being shot down by Yugoslav planes over Yugoslav territory.

Our government had just issued an ultimatum demanding that this be done within the 48 hours that would have expired about 7 o'clock Pacific time Friday evening. The ultimatum was sternly phrased—more so, perhaps, the dispatches state, than any we have ever issued.

The alternative—if Yugoslavia had refused or ignored our ultimatum—was an appeal to the Security Council of the United Nations to take appropriate action in cases such as this when peace is threatened and the use of force impends.

THIS is the point to keep in mind: In the Security Council of U. N., RUSSIA, along with Britain, France, China and the United States, has the POWER OF VETO. If our demand for action had got into the Security Council and if Russia (say) had vetoed it, the next move would have been UP TO US.

We would, in all probability, have been too far out on the limb to have receded. Thus war COULD have followed and the whole structure of United Nations could have fallen.

THE flash is brief and announces only that Yugoslavia has released the Americans who were held captive. What will follow that action can not as yet be more than guessed.

But it seems likely that a crisis has been passed—at least for the moment. We acted firmly and decisively, and may have got away with it.

THIS much is clear: A showdown is impending in the Balkans. It is a showdown between Russia and the western world, of which we and the British are the leaders.

Yugoslavia was (and is) a mere pawn. Back of Yugoslavia, in all of these diplomatic moves, is RUSSIA. The showdown is apparently in-

WON'T THEY EVER LEARN?

By CHARLES V. STANTON

Our federal controllers it seems have no ability to learn from experience. Having deprived this nation of hundreds of thousands of tons of poultry and poultry products because of a silly, stubborn and senseless stand on grain for feed, they are repeating identically the same performance in the current sugar controversy.

Northwest poultrymen were forced to liquidate more than 50 per cent of their flocks when, under the guise of shipping wheat to starving, war-ravaged nations, the federal government clamped an embargo on wheat for livestock and poultry feed.

During the process, the government accumulated vast stores of grain; stores so vast that it would have required many months to find cargo space to transport them. While tonnage accumulated at seaports, awaiting shipment scheduled far in the future, Northwest poultry and livestock producers appealed for feed to save an important segment of this nation's food supply. They urged that wheat be diverted from storage—wheat which could not be shipped because of lack of cargo space—with replacement to be furnished from the oncoming crop, a crop which now is being piled on the ground throughout the nation because it cannot be transported and properly stored.

But our bureaucratic planners arbitrarily refused all pleas and we were forced to liquidate more than 50 per cent of our poultry flocks while the wheat we so urgently needed remained packed in elevators and warehouses at our seaports.

It will require several years to restore poultry production to national requirements and shortages in poultry and poultry products will be keenly felt by the nation for many, many months, simply because our stubborn bureaucrats refused to adopt a realistic, sensible policy.

It would be expected that such an experience would have taught our administrative functionaries a lesson. But, instead, we find them repeating the same silly procedure in the case of sugar.

Here in the Pacific Northwest we have a bumper fruit crop. Admittedly the food situation in the United States and elsewhere would justify every possible effort to utilize this food resource to the greatest extent. Not one particle should be wasted. Housewives should can fruit for home use. Our canneries should be operated at full capacity. Any of this canned fruit which might be surplus on domestic markets would find ready use abroad.

In the midst of all this great abundance of fruit are warehouses bulging with sugar. There are not enough freight cars to distribute the sugar equally throughout the country. In fact, there is some evidence that there is a national surplus of sugar and there is no need for distribution. The OPA claimed some sections lacked sufficient supplies of sugar to meet unused ration stamps, but searching press associations have failed to find such conditions in the areas named by the OPA.

The transportation emergency is so acute that surplus fruit in the Pacific Northwest cannot be moved in fresh state to other markets. Fruit must either be used locally or must rot on the ground.

It would seem that any 10-year-old child could see the necessity for removing sugar from refinery warehouses, to make room for the incoming crop and permit housewives and canneries to conserve our record fruit crop.

But just as foolishly as they forced liquidation of poultry flocks by their arbitrary stand on feeds, our bureaucrats are refusing to permit an extra sugar allotment in the Pacific Northwest to allow us to save at least a portion of our fruit crop.

Fruit will not wait for the unwinding of red tape. Already our losses are enormous. And, in the meantime, swivel chair bureaucrats continue to say "No."

Won't they ever learn?

evitable. It might as well be now.

THOUGHT in closing:

Crises are nothing new. In 1846, known to the historians as the Year of Decision, crises hovered all around us. We were pushing our flag to the Pacific. Two years later, we were at war with Mexico. The seeds from which sprang the Civil War had been planted, had sprouted and the inevitability of the crop was already apparent. Fourteen years later, the North and the South were locked in what up to then was the most savage war ever waged.

Our nation came through all these crises.

If we live up to our responsibilities, we shall come through the crises that cluster about us now.

Hirsch Powers All-Stars to Win Over Rams, 16 to 0

CHICAGO, Aug. 24. — (AP) — Elroy "Crazy Legs" Hirsch was set for a brilliant professional football career today after powering the college all-stars to a 16-0 conquest of the favored Los Angeles Rams.

Hirsch scored two touchdowns on a record-breaking 68-yard gallop and a 62-yard pass play. He is a former Wisconsin star of 1942, who also romped to touchdowns for Michigan as a marine trainee.

A rock-ribbed, fast charging line and the high-stepping Hirsch made up the victory formula over the National Football League champions last night in floodlit Soldier Field before a crowd of 97,380, second largest in the all-star series' 13-year history.

The win was the fourth by the collegians in the series, inaugurated in 1934 by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc. and their first since 1943. It also was the second time Head Coach Bo McMillin of Indiana had tutored the all-stars to victory — the only coach to boast such a feat. McMillin, who used 44 players out of his squad of 66 last night — expertly selecting them to strengthen his defensive and offensive pattern as the game progressed — guided the all-stars to a 28-16 trimming of the Washington Redskins in 1938.

The all-stars counted a safety late in the final quarter then Paul Walker, former Yale end, tackled Kenny Washington, the Rams' Negro halfback, behind the goal while he was attempting a desperation pass.

Six Grapplers To Vie for Trophy

The first Umpqua Tourney Trophy event will make up tonight's wrestling show at the Roseburg Armory. Six of Matchmaker Don Owen's best men will compete in an elimination tournament for a trophy which has been set up by the Roseburg Wrestling Commission.

The six men will be Ike Cazell, Indian badman from Montana; Joe Wolf, blond sensation from Dallas, Texas; Bulldog Jackson, Jack Kiser, Joe Lynam and Karl Gray, two-time victor over popular Jack Pinto.

The six men will draw for opponents and compete in one-half 20-minute bouts in the tournament, which will be completed in one evening. This type event has proved popular with fans all over the Northwest. The Umpqua Trophy is a completely new one and the battlers will be going all out for the honor of having the first play on the list of names.

An added incentive will be a promise by Owen to match the winner against the loser of the Tex Hager-Georges Dusette junior heavyweight title match at Eugene. Then the winner of that match will bet a shot at the title.

U. S. Accuses Yugoslavia Of Allied Zone Entry

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19. — (AP) — The United States charged publicly today that on July 12 Yugoslav troops illegally entered the allied zone around Trieste and fired "without provocation" upon American forces investigating their presence.

The American view of the clash was made known with the release by the state department of a note delivered to the Yugoslav foreign office last Thursday. The note emphatically rejected the "distortion of evidence" alleged in Yugoslavias earlier complaint about the incident.

Erautt, Hollywood Hurler, on Way to Strikeout Title

(By the Associated Press) Eddie Erautt, 22-year-old right-hander recently of the armed forces, is well along the way to become Hollywood's first strikeout king of the Pacific Coast baseball league.

His whiffing delivery and even pitching three-hit ball, however, failed to win in his latest mound performance. Last night Brooks Holder of the Oakland Acorns blasted one of Erautt's offerings over the fence for three runs and a 3-2 triumph.

The youthful Hollywood hurler, who averaged 15 strikeouts per game when he started pitching for Lincoln high school at Portland, Ore., fanned six last night to boost his total to 189. His closest rival is Cliff Chambers of Los Angeles, with 175 strikeouts.

Oakland's victory brought the Acorns within four games of the leading San Francisco Seals, who were humiliated, 8-1, by the third-place Los Angeles Angels. The Sacramento Solons squeeze-ed out a 3-2 victory over the Portland Beavers on Liska's balk in the last half of the ninth stanza. Freitas, who allowed the Beavers 10 hits and walked six men, notched his 16th win of the campaign. Manager White sparked Seattle rallies that overcame San Diego 6-4.
