gust 23 that $17.50 was the limit under the present wage-price policy.

"Bryan said the seamen agree to forego 60 other demands. He added that in many other cases, granting a single one of these demands would mean an increase of more than the $5 representing what the board turned down." He said the $5 was a small fraction of one per cent of the total labor costs.

(In other words, he indicated that the seamen had been reasonable.)

THE dispatch concludes: "Government officials close to the situation take the view that if important new facts were presented the board might be able to reverse its ruling without wrecking its prestige or revamping the whole policy of price and wage control."

That is to say, if a way could be found to save the board's face something might be done about it.

HERE is another one: Assistant Secretary of Labor Hannah tells reporters in Washington that a COMPLICATING factor in the strike is the movement of the CIO Committee for Maritime Unity to put out pickets in SUPPORT of the AFL strike. The AFL Sailors Union of the Pacific, Hannah adds, is OPPOSING this move, and says in a letter to him: "We are faced here (in San Francisco) with an immediate situation whereby OUTSIDE POLITICAL FORCES are injecting themselves into the strike picture."

(Thus indicating resentment at the CIO picketing move in SUPPORT of the AFL strike.)

LET'S leave the puzzling maritime strike for the moment and get on with the screwball picture presented by the rest of the news. Another dispatch says:

"Butcher shops in most cities (of the U. S.) were running out of meat today, as OPA ceilings went on again."

"Week-end BUYING SPREES, in anticipation of short supplies, had left shops in most cities with little except poultry, smoked meats and cold cuts. Sharply reduced receipts of livestock at packing centers gave no hope for immediate relief."

"Retail shops were closing for lack of business, and packing houses were laying off workers."

(MEANING that with the situation obscure and uncertain and no clear leadership toward something better in sight people are reverting to primeval instinct and are HOARDING MEAT.)

IN view of all this, the condensed report of transactions on the New York stock market on the day this is written isn't particularly surprising. It says:

"Stocks dropped, then rallied smartly, then FLOPPED AGAIN today in another of the most active sessions of the year."

(The stock market has been slipping off for some time, with a particularly sharp break last week.)

THIS writer doesn't even pretend to know why the stock market is acting as it is. But as a general rule prices rise when there are more buyers than sellers and fall when there are more sellers than buyers.

When people are optimistic, they buy in the hope of making a profit. When they are pessimistic, they sell in the hope of escaping losses.

In the present screwball state of our economy (as reflected in the news) optimists sometimes

The Boat Has Sailed

By S. BURTON HEATH

The American economy, industrial and financial, has missed the reconversion boat. No people ever had so wonderful an opportunity to pull themselves up by their own bootstraps. But more than a year has passed since the fighting stopped, and today we're in worse straits than at the height of war production.

Theoretically it is possible now to buy an automobile, a tire, a refrigerator, a range, a suit of clothes, a shirt, some underwear. A few such items appear on sale here and there, and most of us know somebody who has been able to buy one of them at a price.

But meanwhile wear and tear has gone on. Our prewar stockpiles of consumer goods, held together with pins and baling wire during the war, now is falling completely to pieces. The meager supply of new goods is far from enough to replace depreciation.

As a people our usable cars are fewer and more decrepit, our tires thinner and smoother, our refrigerators and ranges and fans and radios more crotchety and less dependable than in 1943 or 1944 or 1945. Though we have tried paying $3.95 for $1 shirts and $49.50 for $25 suits, we are getting where we are ashamed to display our wardrobes in public.

For some, wages have gone up. For a few, salaries have risen a little. For all, living costs have sky-rocketed. We remain somewhat solvent because we have been living off our financial fat—spending, on inflated prices, what we saved to pay for capital goods that haven't reached the market place.

Hundreds of thousands are without decent homes, and the best we can provide for them are converted barracks, trailers, Quonset huts, or over-priced houses built from lumber so knotty, so light, so poorly finished, so green that it shouldn't be used for pig pens in a cool climate.

We faced reconversion with everything. We had a surfeit of plant capacity, an all-time high of relatively skilled labor, the world's greatest collection of production know-how, an almost unbelievable reservoir of fluid savings with which to buy, and a soul-consuming desire for everything from houses through automobiles to camera film.

We couldn't miss. Yet we have. There isn't a single important consumer item today, unless it be cigarettes, that an eager buyer with plenty of money in hand can count on finding on store shelves. Meanwhile a big part of the reservoir of savings, with which the economic pump was to be primed, has been dissipated on nothing.

Blame whom you will, or nobody. You can't dodge the fact. We have missed the boat, and it is getting harder to catch every day that it sails further from shore.

Brooklyn, Cincy Battle 19 Innings To Scoreless Tie

(By the Associated Press)
Like the 1938 Pittsburgh Pirates, the Brooklyn Dodgers could lose the National League pennant because of inability to play their full schedule.

The Pirates of '38, who finished in second place, 13 percentage points behind the champion Chicago Cubs, went to the four games that year, but the Dodgers situation came from yesterday's record-breaking 19-inning scoreless tie with the Cincinnati Reds.

The scoreless deadlock, coupled with the St. Louis Cardinals' Phil in Philadelphia, cut the Cardinals' first place margin to a game and a half. Both teams are all even on the losing side of the ledger but the Cards have won three more games.

Yesterday's marathon game, called because of darkness, featured by one the previous longest scoreless tie game, played July 16, 1909, between Detroit and Washington.

Vander Meer pitched the first 15 innings, gave up only seven hits and struck out 14 while walking only two. Gumbert pitched the last four innings for the Reds allowing only one hit. The Dodgers used four pitchers, starter Hal Gregg going 10 innings, Hugh Casey, five; Art Herring, three; and Hank Behrman, one. They gave up 10 hits.

Twice the Reds missed scoring by a split second when Dodger Outfielders Reiser and Walker threw out runners at the plate. Walker's game-saving throw came in the 19th inning.

Judd, 36-year-old southpaw, pitched the Phils to a 9-4 victory over the Cards.

Boxing Still One Short
For the second straight day, the Tigers forced postponement of Boston's pennant celebration by handing the American League leading Red Sox a 7-3 setback.

Greenberg highlighted a five-run first inning against Fenwick, with his 33rd homerun with two on.

The Cubs and Braves battled through 17 innings before darkness halted their game with the score tied at 3-3. Kish and Borowy held the Braves to one hit in the last 12 1/3 innings.

The Indians hammered four New York Yankee pitchers for 16 hits as Reynolds went the route for his 11th win with an 11-2 triumph. The Chicago White Sox climbed on Newsom for five runs in the sixth inning to defeat the Senators 6-1, and the St. Louis Browns shut out the Philadelphia Athletics 4-0.

The Pirates went into seventh place in the National League and dumped the New York Giants into the cellar by beating the New Yorkers twice, 7-6 and 7-5.

Barney Ross Seeks To Cure Himself Of Drug Addiction

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Barney Ross, 37, hero of Guadalcanal and former holder of two world boxing titles, started out today on the toughest battle of his life—to cure himself of a drug habit.

Because I have been a champion, I suppose I am an idol of a large number of kids and I don't want to disillusion them by winding up a drug addict," the former Marine corporal said yesterday as he voluntarily surrendered to federal authorities in order to take a drug addiction cure.

Ross will take the cure at the U. S. Public Health Hospital at Lexington, Ky. John F. X. McGohey, United States attorney, explained that because the hospital is crowded, voluntary submission to arrest was the only way Ross could get in.

The former ring champion was placed under technical arrest on a charge of illegal possession of drugs, but McGohey said Ross would not be arraigned and no bail would be asked.

Formed in Wartime
Ross said that "through no fault of mine," he began taking drugs after he was hospitalized for shock and malaria at Guadalcanal.

"A couple of friends of mine," he added, "carped in the service, who meant only good, began giving me treatments for the shock I suffered."

"About a year after I was discharged from the Marines in April, 1944, the awful migraine headaches came back and I had a return of malaria. I resorted to the old treatment (begun by his comrades in the service), but, not being a doctor, I soon began to feel ill. I was getting into deep water. For that reason I want to be cured."

Ross won the world's lightweight championship in 1933 and the welterweight crown in 1934. He won numerous military honors for his service on Guadalcanal, where one of his acts was to stand over the helpless forms

4-Game Lead Kept By Seals as Jansen Shuts Out Rainiers

(By the Associated Press)
The San Francisco Seals are pushing ahead toward the pennant and their ace hurler toward the modern Pacific Coast League mound record. The Seals maintained their four-game lead last night as the pitching star, Larry Jansen, turned in a four-hit masterpiece for a 3-0 shutout of the Seattle Rainiers.

It was his 28th win of the campaign against six defeats and gave him a chance in the last week and a half of the season to equal the 24-year loop record of 31 victories turned in last season by Bob Joyce for San Francisco. The shutout was Jansen's fourth of the year.

Little Pete Jonas, up from Vancouver of the Western International Circuit, held on stubbornly after the Seals scored an unearned run in the first inning but was nicked for three hits, including a home run by Fain, in the sixth.

Down Padres
The Oakland A's, hoping yet to challenge the Seals down the stretch, pounced on the Padres at San Diego for a 6-3 decision and Hurler Shea's 14th win. The A's slapped out five singles off Al Olson for three runs in the first frame and drove him to the showers in the two-run fourth.

Hollywood's Stars in third place gained a game and a half edge over Los Angeles by a double trimming of the doormat Portland Beavers, 4-3 and 10-2. The Movie City Club turned an impending shutout into victory on a rally for four tallies in the last inning of the opener.

Erault, top moundsman of the Stars, yielded only two hits in winning his 15th game in the nine-inning nightcap.
At Sacramento the home town Solons subdued the Los Angeles Angels 8-3 as Fletcher recorded his 18th victory. The Solons came from behind in a seven-run attack which chased Osborn in the fifth stanza.

Negroes Ask Grid Ban, Charging Discrimination

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Four Negro sports writers have petitioned the Superior Court for an injunction to bar Friday night's pro football game between the Los Angeles Dons and the Brooklyn Dodgers, alleging that Negro candidates for the Dons' team were discriminated against. Judge Henry Willis, refusing to grant a temporary restraining order, ordered the defendants to appear tomorrow to show cause why the injunction should not be granted.

The plaintiffs allege that failure to consider the Negro candidates is a violation of an agreement with the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission under which the Dons were granted playing dates in the big stadium.

Out of $4,000,000,000 spent annually on sports in the United States, anglers spend about one-fourth.
