take Chicago market at an all-time high of $35 per hundred weight. Friday's dispatches told us: "An avalanche of meat—the biggest in ten months—jammed the nation's livestock markets."

THIS is the point: If the controls go completely off, supply and demand will rule the markets and determine the prices.

HERE is a good thing NOT to do: In Iowa City, the dispatches tell us, two University of Iowa students sat down at a window table in a restaurant and started eating steaks in a contest celebrating the end of price controls on meat.

WHAT we need to learn in these days when supply and demand are getting readjusted is to eat fewer steaks and more neck meat.

THE Duke of Windsor is worried by exaggerated reports of the value of the jewelry stolen from his Duchess (Wally) the other day. He says that at most it wasn't worth more than $80,000 instead of the million dollars or more mentioned in the stories going around.

IN Berlin, the Allied group control council rejects, after a long and bitter argument, a plan to study scientifically the brains of the ten executed Nazi leaders.

THE Duke is learning the lesson that it doesn't pay to be looked upon as too prosperous in these days. It's bad public relations.

Could scientific study of these madmen's brains tell us how to produce brains that wouldn't act that way?

THE TOWNSEND BILL

By CHARLES V. STANTON

Perhaps the most controversial measure to appear on the Nov. 5 ballot is the Old-Age and Disability Pension Fund bill, commonly known as the Little Townsend Bill.

This measure would authorize a tax of 3 per cent upon all GROSS income exceeding $100 per month. Proceeds would be used to pay pensions to all persons 60 years of age or older who retired from productive labor and to persons 48 years of age or more if totally or permanently disabled.

The measure is very similar to the one presented in four states at the 1944 election. Oregon was selected for a second test because the proposal came so near passage. In 1944 Washington beat the plan 29.6 per cent; California 32.7 per cent; Arizona 22.6 per cent; but in Oregon the vote was 180,691 yes to 219,981 no, or 45.09 per cent, making the sponsors hopeful that a second attempt might succeed, if given concentrated pressure.

The chief argument by Townsend supporters is that this tax on gross income, distributed to thousands of elderly people, who would be required to spend the money within 30 days, while refraining from gainful employment, would create a large volume of buying power and thus promote prosperity for business and industry and less danger of depression.

The opposing answer to this claim of the Townsendsites is that the major portion of the money which would be taxed away from earners ALREADY is being spent and kept in circulation, and that the tax, therefore, would NOT create NEW business, but would simply take money away from workers to be spent by idle pensioners, regardless of whether they needed the pension, for the measure contains no provision for paying pensions only to those actually in need, but makes the monthly pension payments available to ANY person over 60 years of age.

Townsendsites deny that this tax is a pyramiding or transactions tax, claiming it to be a flat tax on gross income. The opposition, however, points out that tax costs are figured in all transactions. When goods are sold by one person to another and a tax is included, the seller in ordinary business practice adds that tax to his selling price.

These additional taxes, the opposition claims, would so increase prices on the retail market, that Oregon grown or manufactured products would be unable to compete against the products from neighboring states. Agricultural products from Washington, California, or Idaho, for instance, could be sold in grocery stores at a much lower rate than products grown and processed at home.

The principal argument in favor of this bill is a sympathy argument based upon understanding of the financial problems of thousands of destitute and dependent elderly people. Increasing longevity, due to better understanding and practice in health and medicine, has resulted in a larger proportion of population in the upper age brackets. At the same time, the use of machinery and improved production methods has reduced the demand for workers in industrial fields. Thus persons of advancing age are finding it increasingly difficult to obtain gainful employment.

Our present pension system is woefully inadequate. Actual suffering and hardship is to be found on every hand, and the situation is particularly aggravated by current inflationary conditions. The bill is sure to receive the support of great numbers of persons who would benefit from its pension provisions. It also will receive support from persons who would rid themselves of responsibility for giving financial support to aging parents or close relatives.

U. C. L. A. Defeats Bruins But Loses Two Top Players

By RUSS NEWLAND SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 21—(AP)—After last week's rugged football sessions, involving an upset or two, the West coast gridiron story today remains the same—the best team until beaten is the University of California at Los Angeles.

The UCLA Bruins, perched atop the Coast Conference standings and four times winners over stout opposition, improved their position in the dash to the Rose Bowl with a 13-6 win over a surprisingly strong University of California eleven.

In some respects, the Bruins lost while winning. Their leading ground gainer and ace right halfback, Cal Rossi, suffered a broken right leg, above the ankle. And their clever field general, Quarterback Ernie Case, went out of the contest with a broken nose.

Nonetheless, U.C.L.A. is setting the championship pace, unbeaten, and may have hurdled the toughest rivals, namely Oregon State, Washington, Stanford and California. Unless University of Southern California, preseason conference favorite, has finally hit its stride.

Washington State played undefeated Oregon to a 0-0 tie. Idaho has yet to win in or out of the circuit, its latest being a 26-14 setback by San Jose (Calif.) State College.

Mat Tourney for Titular Bout Won By Sammy Cohen

Second and final installment of elimination wrestling contests, held at the Roseburg Armory Saturday night to select an opponent for the 'Grey Mask' in a bout to determine the Pacific Coast light heavyweight championship, saw 'Satanic' Sammy Cohen emerge as top winner.

In the last bout on the program, witnessed by a throng of about 700, Sammy pinned Frankie Hart, a newcomer from Ontario, Canada, with a Boston crab hold, in 13 minutes 40 seconds after disposing of 'Bulldog' Jackson in the semi-final in 7:50.

Cohen started his night of triumphs as one of the principals in the first preliminary in which he subdued Billy McEuin in 15 minutes with a reverse surboard hold. The second preliminary, also lasting 15 minutes, saw the aging Jackson, tough and rough as ever, put Buck Davidson out of action with his punishing combination of a hammerlock and log stomp. Jackson's customary cavernous frown aided him materially in defeating Buck, but he was beaten at his own game when he tried it on Cohen.

Hart reached the final bout after gaining Referee Owen's decision over Jack Kiser in the 20-minute, no-fall third preliminary. Hart not only matched his opponent in speed and cleverness, but introduced the crowd to some new tactics on the mat. The bout was on the orthodox order from start to finish and won a big hand.

The titular match between Cohen and the 'Grey Mask' will headline next Saturday night's card. The Cottage Grove Lions, also undefeated in season play, squeezed by Sweet Home, 14-13, Friday.
