the head that dropped the buck in its tracks.

Presumably the carcass is now in the locker and Bud is thumbing his nose at the high price of meat.

THIS one has just drifted in from out in the Strawberry Flat country, where Harlan Bosworth, Marshall Cornett, Barney Barnhisel and a few other kindred souls have been doing their bit to ease the meat shortage.

Bos, less than a year back from the late unpleasantness in Europe, was not in a killing mood. He sat around camp for days and meditated, and drank in the beauties of the autumn woods. His companions hunted with commendable fervor but negligible results.

Eventually, Bos was touched by their misfortunes. Rising to the emergency about 10 o'clock one morning, he grasped his rifle, pulled in his belt a couple of holes, laced his boots tight and said to his companions in a firm and resolute tone: "I see I'll have to go out and get you a deer."

Without further ado, he disappeared into the underbrush and about a half hour later his comrades heard a shot. Not too long thereafter, Bos walked into camp with a four-pointer hanging from his shoulders, wriggled out of the harness he had fashioned from the creature's legs, dropped the carcass to the ground, dusted off his hands and said in a calm voice: "There's your deer."

THIS is alleged to be a stenographic report of the ensuing comment:

THAT recalls an incident of this writer's younger and bloodthirstier years. A group of rugged souls was out in the high country with a saddle and pack outfit. Five of us were conscientious hunters. We rolled back our blankets long before dawn, caught up the horses from the frosty meadow and ranged far and wide in search of venison—fruitlessly, it must be here recorded. Each mid-morning, we came in fagged and empty-handed.

The sixth was a dilettante. He slept late, breakfasted in luxury, took an after-breakfast nap and by the time we came in limp and winded he was disgustingly full of pep and high spirits. That went on for a week.

There came eventually a morning when human flesh would no longer stand the strain and the five starry-eyed hunters stayed in bed until noon and then arose grumpy and out of sorts. About mid-afternoon, the dilettante stood erect, stretched, reached for his gun and announced in a bored voice that he reckoned he'd better go out and get some meat or this outfit would be starved out.

A couple of hours later a shot rang out in the middle distance, and in about 15 minutes the camp-hound paced in with a forked-horn on his back. It seems he'd been overcome by lethargy a couple of hundred yards from camp, had sat down, leaned his back against a windfall and had drifted off into gentle slumber. When he awoke, there was the forked-horn staring him in the face. He yawned, picked up his rifle, shot it in the neck, severing the jugular with the bullet and thus saving even the effort of bleeding it out.

There are times when this hunting racket just isn't on the level.

The cash savings accumulated by U.S. consumers during World War II were as large as the total amount they actually spent for goods and services in 1945.

DON'T BE MISLED

By CHARLES V. STANTON

The Oregon Fisheries Committee (in other words the commercial fish packers) have at long last come into the open with their arguments in opposition to the Coastal Fishing Bill, generally known as Bill 312.

As in past years when a fish conservation measure was on the ballot, the packers have delayed until the last moment before appearing with an extensive campaign of misrepresentation and falsehood. They time opening of their program until too late to permit organized rebuttal of their untruths and count upon superficiality of their appeal to register with voters who do not take time to studiously inform themselves upon the issues involved.

In the current campaign, as in their scurrilous fight against the Steelhead Bill in the election of 1942, they raise the issue of diminishing Oregon's food supply. The 1942 election came at a time when Oregonians were food conscious. It was immediately after Pearl Harbor and voters were taken in by the campaign which pictured sports fishermen with daggers at the backs of American soldiers.

Now the packers are appealing to voters with the slogan: "Don't Endanger Oregon's Food Supply."

This is the most foolish argument that could be presented, if voters would take time to reason out the facts.

If packers are continued to have their way, we will have NO food fish left within a few years. Bill 312, on the other hand, by forcing the industry to allow at least a minor escapement of fish, will preserve a food supply.

Let's settle this food question!

At the last session of the state legislature the State Fish Commission reluctantly produced a statistical report. This report was withheld until the Governor demanded of the commission that the figures be furnished the legislature. They cover catches in all streams from 1929 to 1943. Thus 1943 is the last year for which the commission's comparative figures are available and, therefore, are used for our computations.

In that year the Columbia River yielded 11,561,913 pounds of food fish, while 392,255 pounds of troll caught fish (taken in the ocean outside the river) came into Columbia fisheries, or a total of 11,954,168 pounds for the Columbia, which DOES NOT come under the provisions of Bill 312. At the same time, trawlers working south of the Columbia produced 783,327 pounds of food fish, for a grand total of 12,737,495 pounds of food fish, none of which would be affected by Bill 312.

Net fishermen in the Nehalem, Tillamook Bay, Siletz, Yaquina, Alsea, Siuslaw, Umpqua, Coos Bay and Coquille, in 1943, caught 2,233,887 pounds of fish.

Note this fact: Columbia and troll fish amounted to 12,737,495 pounds, while net-caught fish in waters to which Bill 312 would apply yielded only 2,233,887 pounds. Thus, if we discontinued net fishing COMPLETELY, outside the Columbia River, it would take away only about ONE-SIXTH of our total supply of food fish.

But Bill 312 does NOT stop net fishing. It shortens the season, abolishes some set nets and provides other minor adjustments.

Applying the shortened seasons against the 1943 catch of fish in the above-mentioned streams, we get the following results:

Stream	1943 Catch Lbs.	Loss Through 312 Lbs.
Nehalem	173,247	5,568
Tillamook	861,013	53,085
Siletz	42,480	14,137
Yaquina	92,757	85*
Alsea	142,548	32,473
Siuslaw	131,287	279
Umpqua	382,132	12,866
Coos Bay	249,483	35,726
Coquille	158,940	10,418
Total	2,233,887	164,637

* Includes 22 pounds sturgeon and smelt.

Now take another look at those figures. Net fishermen in 1943 took 2,233,887 pounds of fish. Had Bill 312 been in operation in 1943, they would have lost 164,637 pounds of fish—chiefly Steelheads.

Now then, how much would Bill 312 reduce our total fish food supply? The catch in 1943 was 12,737,495 pounds in the Columbia and on outside troll. The net-caught fish south of the Columbia amounted to 2,233,887 pounds, or 14,971,382 pounds in all. Bill 312 operating in 1943 would have reduced this catch by 164,637 pounds — 1 1/6 per cent. IS THAT ENDANGERING OREGON'S FOOD SUPPLY?

Bear this further fact in mind: 1943 was a big year compared with 1945. The fish supply has been rapidly diminishing and is threatened with extinction.

Bill 312 is little enough protection for our fish life.

The packers would have you believe they are protecting your food supply. But what are the fish they catch during the period Bill 312 would force them to refrain from commercial fishing? These fish are Steelheads and overripe Silverside and Chinook salmon. They are NOT choice food fish. But you pay choice prices for them in the market. That's why the greedy packers don't want to let them go.

Don't be fooled—Vote 312, Yes.

Absentee Ballot Deadline Cited

Wednesday, October 30, is the deadline for voting in the coming general election by absentee ballot, County Clerk Roy Agee reminded today. The ballots must be in the hands of the clerk's office five days before the election, November 5.

Twenty-six absentee voters thus far have cast their ballots, and "quite a few" others have taken ballots but not yet returned them.

Absentee ballots will be issued upon any written application, to voters who expect to be out of town the day of the election, or to those who may be confined due to illness. There is no specified form for such applications, except for a designation of the voter's residence and precinct.

If absentee voters are at a distance from home application for the ballots should be made without delay, as they will not be counted if received after Wednesday next, Agee warned.

Douglas Fir Cones Will be Set Out in Diamond Rock Burn

Thirty bushels of Douglas fir cones, which have been collected this past month in the vicinity of Tiller, eventually will be set out in the old Diamond Rock burn as two-year-old seedlings in a reforestation plan for the Umpqua National Forest.

The cones will be sent to the Wind River Nursery at Carson, Wash., for their start as seedlings, said M. M. Nelson, forest supervisor. The burn in which they will be transplanted is 10 miles south of Tiller.

For the seedlings to grow successfully, the cones must have been collected in the same area as the young trees are to be set out, Nelson explained. For instance, seedling trees developed from cones collected at sea level would not grow in the mountain elevations of the Umpqua National Forest.

In charge of the reforestation project at Tiller is Melvin Andrews, assistant ranger for the South Umpqua district. Andrews has had much experience in forest nursery work in the Great Lakes states, where the Forest Service developed such projects in cooperation with the CCC.

The 30 bushels of cones were collected under Andrews' supervision and he will also direct the planting of the young trees, Nelson said.

It is expected that some seedlings will be transplanted in the Diamond Rock burn next spring. These young trees, however, will not have been developed from the shipment of cones now on its way to the Forest Service nursery at Wind River, but from an earlier shipment.

Marshall Holmes Buys Cafe From Frank Moore

Change in ownership of Sullivan's Cafe at 209 W. Cass street took place last week when Marshall Holmes purchased the business concern from Frank Moore.

Holmes, a resident of this city for the past eight years, and formerly Eagles Club manager, said, with the exception of two new employes, the old personnel will remain at the restaurant. Remodeling of the interior is expected to begin November 1, he said, with a new floor to be laid and a modernized kitchen to be installed. New booths and further remodeling will take place upon the obtaining of materials. The restaurant will be closed all day Sundays for the present.

Former owner Moore recently purchased the Geizer Club and Grand Hotel at Baker, Oregon, Holmes said.

Roseburg Chiefs Will Battle JVs Of Portland U.

The Roseburg Chiefs, local commercial football club, journeys to Portland next Sunday to meet the Portland University junior-varsity. The locals' next scheduled home tilt is with Willamette University JV's on Armistice day.

Twenty-two players were on hand for last night's workout at Finlay Field, following a general discussion as to whether the organization should continue. The response among players was enthusiastic toward contining the club through the present season in preparation for a strong 1947 team.

Frank Flood, manager of the Roseburg Veterans Lounge, agreed to accept managership of the club for the remainder of the present season, and Kenny Lee, fullback on the team was chosen coach.

The practice session following the meeting consisted mainly of conditioning exercises and backfield work.

Flood urges local men with previous gridiron experience to report at Fanlay Field each night this week at 7 o'clock. All members of the team are being insured against game and practice fatalities, he added, and they can still use more players.

Local Trades Program to Have Jaycees' Support

Full cooperation of aiding in the Roseburg Local Trades program by the local Junior Chamber of Commerce was endorsed and added to its program for a better community at their meeting last night at Carl's Haven.

Speaker for the evening was Frank L. France, Roseburg local trades and veterans' aid director, who outlined to the J. C.'s the great part they could play in furthering local trade activities by aiding pre-college students and returning veterans in their job selections for life occupations.

James Stoop, Junior Chamber president, reported that the entire chapter assured France it would do everything in its power to promote this program and that the organization would add this project to its program for local community betterment and benefit. This proposal was wholeheartedly accepted by France.

Let's Face the Facts!

Your living costs are going UP and UP
Your taxes are going UP and UP but...
Your income is going DOWN
Your take-home pay is going DOWN
SO
Look at the Price Tag Before You Vote!

Living costs ARE going up!
...as your own bills prove every day. Inflation isn't THEORY, it's FACT! Here's ANOTHER FACT: It would be a serious mistake for Oregonians to assume crushing tax obligations at this critical time.

Taxes ARE going up!
...right along with the cost of living. Home-owners and ALL property-owners know their tax burdens are already big...and getting BIGGER, as valuations are increased.

Incomes ARE going down!
...with war-time wages a thing of the past. Today's incomes lag behind rising prices...catching YOU in an economic squeeze-play. HARD-PRESSED BUDGETS HAVE NO ROOM FOR ADDITIONAL TAXES!

Take-home pay IS going down!
...because of constantly increasing demands on the pay-check. Let's not vote for higher taxes...and HIDDEN PAY-CUTS!

Before you buy a suit, you ask "How much?" It's plain common sense to ask "how much?" when it's a matter of millions of dollars in increased taxes. Look at the price tag before you vote! It's YOUR pocketbook! VOTE NO on all TAX measures!
