Winter Logging
Lull Reduces Job
Openings Here

Job openings at the Oregon State Employment Service office in Roseburg dropped from 172 to 46 during November, as the approach of winter results in the closing of logging camps and operations.

One of the larger logging camps is "Wright's" for the winter, the monthly labor market report states. A good number of smaller and medium logging operations are down until spring.
Most of the larger mills have logs to use until spring, but several small mills will close as soon as their present cold decks are sawed.

During November, a total of 81 men were placed in employment in the lumbering industry, 49 in construction, and 96 men and women in various other jobs.
As the report was issued, December 3, the employment office had the lowest number of orders on file for local jobs in several years. Conditions are not expected to change "for the better" until after the Christmas holidays.

All logging operations are running full handed. With very few exceptions, the mills also have full crews.

Jobless Pay Load Up
The local unemployment claim load has increased 20 per cent during the past month. It is still considerably lower than last year at this time. Forestry processing plants have "plethora" of help and this has caused the unemployment caused by the closing of the cannery.

Most job openings now are in right-of-way clearing, construction, civil engineering and various office jobs.

Notices of the discharge of 28 Douglas County veterans were received during the month. This is nearly three times as many as were received during October.
Sixty-four veterans were placed in employment during November.

be obtained from the Forest Supervisor, Roseburg, Oregon, or the Regional Forester, Portland, Oregon.

CONSERVATION PROPOSALS

By CHARLES V. STANTON

During campaigns relating to fish conservation, fish packers have consistently portrayed sports fishermen as a greedy lot, attempting to wreck an industry to provide themselves with more facilities for recreational angling. This portrayal, however, fails to square with conservation measures now being recommended by sportsmen's groups throughout the state.

While the Roseburg Rod and Gun Club is suggesting several changes in regulations on the Umpqua River, the Oregon Coast Council is urging elimination of trout angling in tidewater areas between April 1 and June 15, and Lane County groups are making recommendations for restrictions on the McKenzie River. Numerous other conservation measures, which would further regulate sports angling, are being proposed by various groups.

Rules proposed by the Roseburg Rod and Gun Club for the Umpqua River are in keeping with the theory of fishing for larger but fewer fish.

It is suggested that all tributaries of the North Umpqua and Little rivers be closed at all times to all types of angling.
Thus the small trout in those streams would be protected until they dropped down to the main river.

As nearly all species of fish in the Umpqua River system are anadromous—fish which migrate to and from the ocean —those escaping to salt water will return in their normal cycle as adult fish and will furnish much better sport and food than if caught when only five or six inches in length.
The small fish commonly referred to as trout are actually small steelheads, silverside salmon, etc., or cutthroat trout, all of which migrate to the ocean after a year or more in fresh water.

The Rod and Gun Club also proposes a reduction in spring-run Chinook salmon bag limit to three fish in any one week.
This proposal will handicap only those fishermen who spend day after day on the river. As the daily limit would remain at three fish, the occasional fisherman would not be restricted. The club, however, feels that in view of the critical depletion of the spring Chinook run, drastic measures for protection must be taken.

Another conservation proposal is that the season for spring-run Chinooks be closed above tidewater after July 1.
This proposal, if adopted, will cause some inconvenience to fishermen during the Silverside salmon run in the fall months. Frequently upriver fishermen hook fall-run Chinooks while fishing for Silver salmon. During the two or more weeks, however, the Chinooks have been traveling in the warm water of the lower river, they have deteriorated rapidly and are not a choice food fish. Being ripe for spawning, their flesh is soft, and, during their upstream travels, they lose their fat. Caught immediately after leaving salt water they are still prime food, but only a few days in fresh water causes a marked change in condition. The principal handicap would be imposed upon fishermen in the area between Kellogg and Scottsburg, where fall-run Chinooks would still be fairly good food fish.

On the other hand, limiting the sports take of fall Chinooks to tidewater assures that only prime fish will be taken.
At the same time, the regulations will serve to concentrate more sports fishing in the tidewater area, providing income which will more than offset any financial losses coastal communities may have suffered by season and gear limitations contained in Bill 312, approved at the recent election.

Vet's Home Town
Medical Program
Explained by VA

The Veterans Administration's new "home town" medical program, under which the free care by private physicians and dentists and free drugs from private pharmacies may be authorized for veterans with service-connected disabilities, only supplements the VA's own facilities, the agency's representative visiting Roseburg today, pointed out.

To clarify some misunderstanding as to the scope of the "home town" treatment plan, the representative emphasized that under the law the VA must use its own clinics and hospitals to the fullest extent for examination and out-patient treatment of veterans.

In Oregon, the VA's own medical facilities are limited to Roseburg and Portland, hence in most areas private "home town" treatment will be heavily utilized. Final decision as to whether the veteran patient will receive treatment at the VA's out-patient clinics or from private practitioners rests with the regional chief medical officer.

For in-patient treatment of service-connected disabilities, veterans may be admitted to private hospitals for care by private physicians under VA contract only in emergencies which a VA hospital cannot meet because of lack of beds or the patient's inability to travel. Hospitals under contract with the VA are preferred.

For women war veterans, this emergency privilege extends to non-service as well as service-connected disabilities.

Prior authorization for the veteran's hospitalization is required.

Floral Design Suggested
As Suitable Yule Gift

Homemakers may solve a part of their Christmas gift shopping by designing a fabric picture from a colorful floral print, suggests Wanda Matson, home demonstration agent of Douglas County.

Use an interesting floral design from a bit of old over size cover material, she says, or a colorful piece of chintz, or other material you have on hand. It is best not to use a material that frays easily.

Select a part of the design that will make an interesting composition when framed. Cut out the design using sharp scissors or a razor blade, paste or glue on any desired picture matting and frame. Inexpensive frames may be purchased or a frame can be made to order.

If your floral design is a small one, a group of 3 pictures made from different sections of your design will make an interesting gift, or a twin picture set framed from a larger design is a welcomed gift for any home.
