Russian iron curtain, so we don't know what is going on there. Earlier dispatches have been telling us that Japan's food prospects for next year are BETTER.

WHY the difference? The answer is quite simple. German industry, already badly destroyed by war, has been still further wrecked by our policy of making Germany helpless in the future.

Realizing that if they aren't allowed to work and feed themselves we'll have to feed them, we have tried harder to keep the Japanese at work.

Another lesson we are slowly learning is that work is the only road to progress.

SPEAKING of roads, the state of Washington is planning two big four-lane highways as a major part of its first post-war highway building program.

It is sound planning. More four-lane highways will have to be built as traffic increases—not merely to handle the traffic but to save lives.

We can make highways safer. But we can't seem to make human beings safer. Human beings are too prone to take a change, regardless of the risk.

HERE'S one for the book: Supersonic planes (meaning planes flying faster than the speed of sound, which is about 750 miles per hour) may need built-in refrigeration to keep the pilots from ROASTING.

This is the reason: Supersonic speed may generate so much heat from air friction against the skin of the plane that cockpit temperatures will rise to as much as 300 degrees—

New achievements bring new problems.

RECALL PROPOSAL

By CHARLES V. STANTON

Many times in the past, when referring to sustained yield forest management, we have made the prediction that strong pressure would be applied to break the program.

To widen the scope of the recall effort, instigators are playing upon dissatisfaction concerning road and bridge maintenance as a means of securing sufficient signatures to make an election possible.

There is a wide diversity of opinion concerning sustained yield forest policies. Even experts are not in full agreement as to technical details, although general principles are fairly well settled.

It goes against our instincts to see a few large operators gain a virtual monopoly of an industry, while little operators, struggling to maintain small plantations are forced to close because of a lack of raw material.

But we are face-to-face with a decision. Is it better to furnish raw materials to every operator as long as these resources last, cut as long as there is any timber to be cut, and then become an anemic community—a ghost of a once thriving industrial center, or set up a plan for perpetual sustained operations on a balanced basis, maintaining continuous industry, albeit semi-monopolistic?

The recall effort is directed against the county judge and commissioner because the county court has favored operators who were able to set up sustained yield operating units.

The court has, it reports, made efforts to protect all of the older mills. Several small mills which had exhausted their timber resources were permitted to buy county-owned lands that they might remain in operation.

The court contends that the county's timber should be utilized to provide the greatest possible benefits to the largest number of people for the greatest length of time, and that this formula prescribes grouping with sustained yield units wherever possible.

It is the issue of sustained yield rather than poor road maintenance upon which the recall attempt is based.

It should be obvious that with handicaps of machinery and labor shortages the county cannot do a perfect job of road maintenance, particularly when heavy logging traffic on a few principal roads, greatly multiplies the maintenance requirements for those most important routes.

It is only natural that every farmer would give the county court a sound "cussing" for being forced to bring his product to market over a washboard road.

But our personal opinion is that the court is to be commended rather than criticized for its policies and work, particularly in view of the numerous handicaps under which it has operated.

Pictured above are some of the buzzards that roost daily on roof of Washington's swank Kennedy-Warren Apartments. Neither tenants or authorities can do anything about it as District of Columbia law forbids killing the birds of ill omen.

'Draft Ike'

"Draft Ike for 1948" buttons are popping up all over the country. Above, Martha Tremel, of Arlington, Va., holds magnifying glass to show off one she wears. "Ike" referred to is, of course, General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Silly Season Here; Cast Your Eyes On These Nominations!

NEW YORK (AP)—This is the silly season when asserted experts draw a bead on the waning year and nominate the ten best-dressed seed catalogs or pick the twelve and a half prettiest firehorses they would like to sit on a flapole with.

Not to be outdone in any intellectual salad-tossing race, I have gone to considerable expense—time is money—and much hectic brain waving to compile an all-time list of nominations to end nominations.

The best book to throw at a cat—"Smithsonian Physical Tables," be sure you get the eighth revised edition.

The thing I hate most to walk behind—short fat ladies in long thick fur coats.

The woman who best keeps her beauty—the lady on the White Rock bottles.

The man in public life with the finest character—Gen. Omar Bradley.

The most outstanding figure of the year—the still Mae West, boys.

The most outstanding man in the public eye—the guy who sits in front of me at football games.

The thing I could do least without—some people I know.

The thing my wife says she would rather have me smoke than stinky old cigars—opium.

What I would hate worse than having sextuplets—seven tuplets.

DAILY DEVOTIONS

DR. CHARLES A. EDWARDS

The Psalmist David served his own generation and incidentally he served all time. Faulty he was at times, but he served God and his own times well, failing and rising again and ever singing his minor notes of repentance and the golden songs of victory.

share a steak with—George Bernard Shaw, the vegetarian.

The things I would most like to send to Adolf Hitler (if he's still alive) are a broken electric fan, a box of melted ice cubes, a glass of warm acid and a copy of "Mein Kampf" printed in Hebrew.

The people who I hope most will never get a new automobile—the four horsemen of the Apocalypse. They cause enough trouble without putting them on wheels.

The woman best likely to succeed in 1947—Mother Goose, Elsie Dinsmore and Lydia Pinkham (three-way tie).
