newest aircraft carrier, the Franklin D. Roosevelt, to be troubled Mediterranean in order to give the Roosevelt-admiring Greeks an opportunity to gaze upon the great warship that bears his name, when everybody knew that for reasons of diplomacy we were making a display of our military might.)

The time must come when diplomacy will be FRANKER. When that time comes, people will have more confidence in what diplomats say—won't be tempted to mutter "Oh, yeah?" when it is announced that an American secretary of state is resigning because of the state of his health.

BURNES has been a good man—one of the best in our history. He has done a good job in a time of great stress.

Fortunately, Marshall is a good man also. We get that reaction from all sides.

GENERAL MARSHALL, as secretary of state, would become PRESIDENT if Truman should die or become incapacitated. (Until the next election, we will have no vice-president. Truman was vice-president, and left the office vacant when he became President.)

Military men recognize this principle: "If it is the RIGHT thing to do, DO IT." In this critical period, we need greatly to do the RIGHT thing, regardless of political considerations. So, you see, Marshall's military training could be useful.

RECENT dispatches tell us of the discovery, near Salmon, Idaho, of gold deposits averaging $1145.20 per ton. That brings an odd thought into our minds.

It is quite likely that with the aid of nuclear fission (which made the atom bomb possible) our scientists could transmute baser metals into gold IF THEY REALLY WANTED TO.

Why wouldn't they want to? Well, the first thing that would be accomplished by making gold as plentiful and as cheap as lead would be a complete upset in international finance—an upset that would be temporarily disastrous.

We must remember that foreign trade is TRADE. When we deal with foreign peoples, we trade goods for goods. When this trade gets temporarily out of balance, we settle the differences with gold—which, because of its relative scarcity and the remarkable stability of its rate of production, has an established international value.

Making gold as cheap as lead would upset that long-established and familiar situation. We should then have to find some other standard of international value.

CONSERVATION TRENDS

By CHARLES V. STANTON

The South Umpqua Rod and Gun Club is asking plantings of bass and channel "cats" in the South Umpqua River to provide sports fishing in summer months. The Umpqua Valley Rod and Gun Club at Reedsport is proposing limitation of steelhead in Smith River, trapping striped bass, prohibition of angling from boats above tidewater on Smith River, and other changes in angling and commercial practice.

From the foregoing summary of activities it is evident that the fish and game conservation program is receiving widespread attention throughout the entire State of Oregon. We speak of "sports" fishing and "commercial" fishing, one being the recreational fishery and the other the industrial fishery. Actually, both are commercial.

Recreation has become business—big business. When we stop to realize that tourist revenue amounts to around $100 million annually and will soon be much larger, and that 70 per cent of our tourist travel is influenced by fishing—sports fishing—it becomes obvious that our fish and game must be placed in the same category with our forests, mining resources, agricultural assets, etc.—resources to be conserved and used to promote the greatest benefit to the greatest number of people.

As we adopt this theory it is evident that we must change much of our thinking with regard to fish and game management. We no longer go to the river to catch fish simply as food. Many years ago few people went fishing for fun only. In fact, there isn't a great deal of pleasure in catching fish, except as we are forced to work for them. There would be little sport in yanking fish out of a pond where they bit as rapidly as bait could be tossed in. It would be no pleasure to walk into a stockade and shoot as many deer, pheasants or ducks as we pleased. The sport is in the chase.

But with more people and fewer fish, more hunters and fewer birds and deer, it becomes necessary to distribute our diminished fish and game to a greater number of people, while, at the same time, pursuing a management policy designed to increase wildlife populations. Thus we face extensive curtailments in seasons and bag limits.

With regard to fishing, a new theory is developing rapidly, a theory of catching fewer but larger fish. Regulations are being designed to permit escape of migratory species from spawning waters to the ocean, to return in their normal cycle as adult, mature fish weighing pounds instead of ounces.

As nearly all species of fish in our coastal streams are migratory, or anadromous, as the scientists refer to them, the small fish we catch, referred to as trout, are, in large part, small salmon or steelheads, which, if permitted to reach the ocean, will return as much larger fish providing better sport. Regulations planned in connection with the new conservation program are largely governed by this theory.

As we consider our recreational fishing from its commercial viewpoint, we can realize that the better sport we can provide, the greater will be the revenue derived from tourist and local participation. Thus the program of fewer but bigger fish fits into the plan for long-range management.

Australian Mat Champ Billed On Roseburg Card

Douglas county wrestling fans will see Australia's No. 1 light-heavyweight matman Saturday night when Matchmaker Don Owen presents his weekly mat show at the Roseburg Armory.

Although the show features a Pacific coast championship match the debut of Tommy Nilan is attracting considerable attention among local railbirds. Nilan held the Australian title before the war, but relinquished it when he joined the Army. During his absence the title was won by Joe Lynam who in turn relinquished the crown when shipped back to the states. Since that time Nilan won a tournament to regain his lost laurels.

from Tennessee. Cohen claimed that the speed merchant won on a foul and demanded that the Roseburg commission order a return bout—with a referee of his choice.

Prevailing southerly winds during December brought Roseburg a total rainfall of 2.76 inches, the Weather Bureau reported today. Greatest rainfall during the month was December 13, with one inch.

The heavy rain of December 13 and lighter rains of the next few days were followed by an extreme cold spell, with the thermometer dropping to 18 degrees December 18.

Insurance Plan For High School Athletes Spreads

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Jan. 10.—(AP)—The practice of accident insurance for high school athletes through benefit plans sponsored by State Athletic Associations is growing rapidly.

C. E. Forsythe of Lansing, Mich., director of high school athletics for the State of Michigan, in an interview expanded on a report he presented to the annual meeting of the National Federation of High School Athletics Associations here.

More than 20 states now have some form of the accident protection plan for school athletes. Michigan has 600 of its 700 high schools enrolled in the plan, with 25,000 students covered and last year paid out approximately $100,000 in 6,200 claims, Forsythe said.

"It is one of the best public relations programs we have ever had," Forsythe said. "It helps Mom and Dad if their boy is hurt and lets them know they won't have to stand the cost if he engages in some sport."

"Best of all it insures that a boy who is insured is going to have at least the minimum care he needs."

Forsythe said that 70 per cent of claims are for football, 15 per cent for basketball, and about 7 or 8 per cent each for baseball and physical training.

The most serious injuries in football result in open play, especially to pass and punt receivers, Forsythe reported. Line play, regardless of how smashing, even in the goal line stands, rarely results in severe injury, he said.

There are more injuries proportionately in six-man football than in the regulation games, because of more open play, and most of all in touch football, because of lack of protection, he observed.

Papoose Quintet, Medford Juniors Battle Tonight

Coach H. H. "Hod" Turner's fast-developing Papooses square off tonight at the Roseburg Junior High School basketball court with Medford's juniors at 8:30. In the preliminary, slated for 7 P. M., Roseburg's eighth graders meet Medford's underclass squad.

Winning their opening conference against Grants Pass on a field goal by Larry Irvin in a sudden-death overtime, Medford has been a major rival of the local Gold and Blues for many years and invariably floors a scrappy quintet of high caliber.

The Papooses, although still ragged in practice scrimmages, show great potentialities and court talent, and feature a well-balanced crew playing good basketball, albeit rated a hot and cold club in season play.

Leading their first junior circuit contest against a close margin against Woodrow Wilson, the Papooses rallied in the final half to outplay the Eugeneans and almost put the game on ice. Woodrow Wilson is rated as one of the classiest clubs in the junior prep league of the state.

Employing a fast break, Medford has considerable trouble with the height of the Cave kids of Grants Pass, who used a strong zone defense. Roseburg and Medford, both using a fast break, should provide an interesting contest throughout.

Tonight's probable lineups include: Roseburg Pos. Medford Ingram F. Wendt Gary F. Holzgang Blank C. Goodman Rodgers G. Yarnell Matthews G. Smith

Timber Owners Urged to Avert 'Onerous' Rules

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 10.—(AP)—The chairman of an agency once known as one of the New Deal's most controversial social experiments—the TVA urged private enterprise yesterday to avoid "onerous and restrictive" timber regulations by practicing conservation.

Gordon R. Clapp, new chairman of the TVA, told the Lumbermen's Club here that "the growing clamor for some system of timber conservation by federal law" can be countered by private initiative.

But if owners of timberlands fail to use their resources wisely, he said, the day of regulation will be hastened and "another area of private enterprise will have lost its chance to bring private initiative and the public interest into a working partnership."

Clapp asserted that whatever the economic result of government supervision of forest lands, it will exact a high price in loss of freedom. "We should not embrace that alternative, unless all other methods fail."

The lumber industry in the Tennessee Valley, Clapp said, now accounts for more than $100,000,000 of the region's annual income. Wise management and full utilization of forest lands, he added, could "in a reasonably short time" raise the figure to more than $500,000,000.

RHS Basketeers Off to Battle Two Lane County Fives

Ten members of the Roseburg High School basketball team left today on a two-day jaunt to Lane county, where they'll meet St. Mary's tonight and Elmira Saturday night in their second and third tri-county conference tilts.

Last Saturday the Indians squeezed by the St. Mary's Gaels on the local court, 36-33, in a hot contest throughout. Tonight the Indians hope to have polished their offense well enough to overwhelm the Gael's zone defense, which gave them considerable trouble last week.

Tomorrow night at Elmira, the Roseburg club will attempt to extend the Gaels' long-term lease on the basement of the tri-county circuit in knocking Elmira over for its fourth straight loss of the season.

Elmira, along with St. Mary's, are two new additions to a school where competition this year, and while Elmira has not as yet displayed any threats to other members, St. Mary's has given both Roseburg and Eugene trouble with their tight defense.

The Falcons of Elmira fell, 41-30, to Cottage Grove Tuesday night for their third time in league play. The Gaels also have yet to taste victory, but are a decided threat.

Winter Paper Drive of Hy-Y Club Is Postponed

The Hy-Y Club's winter paper drive, originally slated to begin January 10, has been postponed until January 25, when an all-out effort will be set off by the youths' organization.

Part of the group's activities for raising funds for sending two local boys to the annual national convention in June in the mid-west, previous paper drives have proven very successful and the local chapter has received superb cooperation from local merchants and residents, as well as receiving commendations on their help in ridding residents of trash.

Art Croucher, member of the drive committee, yesterday announced that paper of all types, including cardboard, boxes, news, papers, magazines, etc., are wanted. Residents are asked to tie the material in tight bundles and place in sight of the street on the morning of the opening day of the drive.
