and entrances. As recently as a dozen or 15 years ago, that would have brought howls of protest from the back districts, which wanted at least roads adequate to carry their traffic before going on to SUPER-projects.

So far no such protests have been heard, at least in any considerable volume — which must mean that even the remoter districts (now partially taken care of) are becoming aware of the need for safer, faster main highways.

(By faster, of course, is meant a better sustained AVERAGE flow of traffic, with fewer interruptions and slowdowns. We don't need race courses for speed demons. We are beginning to need, gravely, to get more traffic over our main roads in a given length of time, with more safety.)

BETWEEN Southern Oregon and the Bay region, there are two shining examples of what narrow, curving roads can do in the way of slowing up traffic and increasing hazards to life and limb. One is the Sacramento canyon below Dunsmuir and the other is the congested area from about Dixon to the general neighborhood of Vallejo. In both of these sections of Highway 99, you can see, with one eye and it half-shut, what Governor Warren means when he speaks of "bottlenecks and death traps."

HERE is how it works:

A truck — or maybe several trucks — hits an upgrade on a curve. The truck slows down. Cars pile up behind it. Soon there is a long line, running bumper to bumper. On a two-lane pavement, with visibility limited to a hundred yards or so, there is no SAFE way to get around the slow vehicle.

The time comes inevitably when some impatient driver takes a chance and pulls out to pass, come hell or high water. Often enough, he gets away with it. But TOO OFTEN he doesn't. When he doesn't, it is just too bad. Much too often, it is too bad for some innocent party approaching from the other direction.

BELOW Dunsmuir yesterday, a brewery truck got caught behind a couple of log trucks—along with perhaps a hundred automobiles. The driver stood it as long as he could and then went berserk and pulled out to pass on a narrow, curving upgrade, with less than a block of visibility. He may have figured that in a collision his heavy vehicle could take care of itself.

The guardian angels were on the job. He met a line of cars approaching around the curve, but they were moving slowly. Everybody stopped. There was a lovely snarl-up. There was plenty of profanity. But nobody died. No bones were broken. As a matter of fact, no paint was even scratched. That was because the guardian angels were on the alert. Otherwise, the devil would have been to pay and no pitch hot.

All because one driver didn't have the sense God gave to lice.

EXPERIENCE is teaching us that making PEOPLE safer is a long, slow, perhaps impossible job. But we can make ROADS safer. Four-laning them on critical curves and grades is one way. Slow traffic can then take the right-hand lane, leaving the left-hand lane for the faster vehicles. It all works out very nicely.

INNOCENT BYSTANDERS

By CHARLES V. STANTON

Offer of a women's group in Los Angeles to provide clerks in some 1700 food stores closed by a strike reportedly resulted in strong denunciation from labor leaders.

The union charged "strike-breaking tactics," but, on the other hand, a moral question was raised. If unions persist in aiming their attacks at public interest, does not the public have a right of active resistance?

The use of the strike weapon involves many moral issues.

A strike is an attempt to procure certain benefits through use of force.

If a man holds up another at the point of a gun and takes money from his victim it is considered an act of highway robbery, punishable by long prison sentence.

If one man, or a group of men, by force, threats or intimidation take money or property from another, the act is one of extortion, recognized and accepted as a serious offense and punishable by heavy penalties.

If an individual or group of individuals seize another person and hold him for ransom it becomes a case of kidnapping, or if they seize and hold property belonging to another, the act becomes a serious crime.

Yet all of these principles of law are violated by a strike, which is the use of force to procure money, property or benefits from another person, firm or corporation against his or its will. But the courts uphold the right of organized labor to engage in strikes.

But the law recognizes the right of a man to defend his property, his happiness and his welfare. His job can be interpreted as being his property as long as he fulfills the contract involved in performance of that work. He has a right to a rate of pay sufficient to provide a decent standard of living, the right to protection of health, safety from accidents, and as convenient and comfortable working conditions as his occupation will permit. These rights cannot and should not be invaded, yet frequently are withheld by unscrupulous, selfish and greedy employers.

The only weapon with which organized labor may defend its rights lies in the use of the strike weapon, despite the fact that the strike violates principles of moral and ethical conduct in many respects.

The great difficulty, particularly in many recent strikes, is that it is the general public rather than the specific employer or management which suffers. Numerous strikes are of a strictly jurisdictional nature in which neither the public nor management are held at fault, the issues being posed by two rival unions, each trying to seize control.

The frequency and extent of strikes against public interest is creating increasing sentiment for legislation which, unless extreme care is used, will be inimical to organized labor, canceling out many of the important gains and benefits obtained through long, hard struggle.

We do not believe the right of labor to strike should be too drastically curtailed. Despite its evils, it is labor's only weapon.

However, organized labor should so conduct its affairs that the strike be used only as the last rather than the first resort. No strikes based on racketeering, jurisdictional disputes, or without sanction of controlling councils should be permitted, nor should any strike be called until every possible means of avoidance is definitely eliminated. The most extreme methods should be used to avoid strikes involving public interest. These rules should be self-imposed. If labor does not place a check rein upon radical leadership, public demand for restrictive legislation will unquestionably result in loss of benefits and privileges gained through continued struggle over many years.

A feud is recognized as such, but when feudists start shooting innocent bystanders, those bystanders will either obtain protection from the law or will take matters into their own hands.

OSC Quint Gains Conference Lead

SEATTLE, Jan. 18. — (AP) — The 13th game proved Washington's jinx — and Oregon State, at the top of the Northern Division Pacific Coast Conference standings, looked more than ever today like the team to beat in the conference race.

Ten missed free shots from the foul line, compared with only four by Washington State, gave the Cougars a 51-to-48 victory over Washington at Pullman last night. It was the Huskies' first loss in 13 games this season, and gave them a four won, one lost standing in conference play.

At Eugene, Ore., Oregon State finished strong to win its 16th victory in 17 games, defeating Oregon, 58 to 45, for the second time this season. Oregon State has won four and lost none in the conference.

Alex Petersen, Oregon State forward, helped control the backboards and was high scorer with 17 points as the Beavers humbled Oregon. At one time in the first half Oregon held a seven-point lead, 20-13, and was in front 21

Axemen Hoopsters Trounce Roseburg Indians, 41 to 27

By ROYAL S. DENTON

Roseburg's Indians bowed to the Axemen of Eugene last night on the local court to the count of 41-27 for their worst durbbing in 12 starts. It was Eugene's sixth straight league victory.

Coach Duane Mellem's B squad scored a win of 47-28 over the Roseburg Junior-varsity Warriors in the preliminary. It was the Warriors' first defeat of the season.

The Indian-Axemen fracas was more of a contest than the final score indicates, in that the first quarter appeared much like a championship playoff, with both teams checking each other closely and the packed house of fans going wild on practically every play.

Trailing throughout the contest, Roseburg played spirited ball, never letting upon their aggressiveness in gaining control of the ball, but failing considerably in the point-making department.

Greatest factors in the Eugene win were the driving and ball-handling of Gene Miner and the ball-hawking and shooting-eye of Ernie Wilde. Both of these guards were All-State selections last year at the tournament in Salem.

Roseburg played basket for basket with the visitors through the opening six minutes of play as each team raced at whirlwind speed from one end of the maples to the other in attempts to keep each other in close check, for a low scoring initial stanza which ended with Eugene in the lead 10-7. Piper performed all the Roseburg scoring for Roseburg in that period.

Tide Turns in 2nd Period

Miner and Smith each connected to take a larger lead shortly after the second period opened, but successive hits by Benson and Piper and a gift-shot by Piper sustained a slim marginal 19-12 lead at halftime.

Roseburg failed to connect regularly on field goals in the third quarter as the Axemen were checked to only eight points.

Garrett opened with a tip-in on the first play of the latter half, followed by Wilde's left-handed push-shot. Benson then pushed one in from the key, and Pope furthered a momentary Indian threat. Wilde, dribbling the length of the court, scored, and Roseburg's Blanck retaliated with a goal and a free-throw. Miner closed the third period scoring with a push-shot from the side-lines.

As the final quarter opened, the game became exceedingly rough with Blanck leading the many trips to the foul lines that followed to score. Benson swished a two-pointer prior to the four-minute officials' rest-period for the last Indian scoring until the final minute of play. As Harvey was ejected on five fouls, Eugene surged ahead out of threatening reach of the fighting Indians with consecutive fast-breaks and clean set shots. Benson connected in the final minute and Taylor potted two gift-shots.

Evenly matched in height, both clubs proved themselves well-drilled in court tactics and never once let the ball go free onto the floor or into the air without immediate response which several times resulted in body contact and trips to the free-throw line.

The Axemen hit five of 18 gift-shots while Roseburg connected with 11 of 20 tries.

A colorful streamer drill was staged at halftime by 18 members of the High School Girls Pep Club and members of the High School Band. Throngs of students of both schols maintained ear-piercing cheering throughout the major part of the game, fairly rocking the building.

Roseburg Indians, Springfield Five To Clash Tonight

By ROYAL S. DENTON

Coach Jack Newby's Indians will be after a win from the Springfield Millers tonight in retaliation for the drubbing they took last night from Eugene's strong Axemen.

Game time for this main event has been set for 7:15 o'clock, with the junior varsity teams of the two schools vying at 8:30, thus enabling sports fans to attend both the basketball contest and later the wrestling matches at the Armory.

Seeking a much-needed victory to get back into the Tri-circuit race, Roseburg holds an edge of one game over the Millers, Springfield having won only over Elmira and losing to Eugene and University High.

Coach Paul Johnston's Millers are reported as small, but clever in court tactics and employing a zone defense. The Indians, to date, have proven themselves strong in the scoring department against zones, but have run into trouble against the fast-breaking offense of their own type.

Considered Tough Foe

Considered the hot-and-cold club of the league, Springfield fell to Salem, 42-26, Wednesday night, but, led by Don Barge, center, they are said to be capable of giving any club they meet a tough contest.

At Bend the Millers were laced 61-46, holding the Lava Bears to a 36-36 tie at the end of the third quarter as the Bears dipped in 15 points in the final three minutes and a half of play. Roseburg defeated Bend in a twin series, 43-35 and 31-30.

Roseburg's Warriors will also be out to regain their previous standing of no losses, having lost to Eugene's B squad last night, 47-28. The Springfield seconds lost to Salem's junior varsity 45-37.

A featured halftime stunt of tonight's main game will be an exhibition by the Springfield prepper's tumbling team.

Probable starting lineups:

Roseburg	Pos.	Springfield
Benson	F	Chapman
Piper	F	Clingman
Blanck	C	Barge
Harvey	G	Nordling
Pope	G	Woods
