billion, eight hundred millions, not three billions. Not any agreed-upon and stakes-set-to-finish sum. That, he explains, is the business of the legislature.

All he is proposing, he says, is that California shall levy and expend enough money to bring her roads system from where it is to where it will have to be if it is to handle the traffic of the future expeditiously, economically and safely.

THE levy, he says, should be in the form of an addition to the gasoline tax, which now stands at three cents per gallon. He doesn't name any definite addition, but somehow he leaves you with the idea that he thinks the gas tax could go as high as six cents without producing more money than will be needed to finish the job.

(In California, incidentally, the gas tax is now raising about $25,000,000 per year for each cent.)

BY way of bringing to his hearers some understanding of what future traffic will amount to in this state, he repeats his prediction that within the easily measurable future the population of California will reach 20 millions. (The present guess is around nine millions, some two and a half millions of which have been added since the war began.)

He doesn't set the date when these 20 millions will be counted and proved by the census. But he gives the statistically-minded something to work on.

The best figures available, he says, indicate that California is gaining some 20,000 new residents each MONTH by immigration from other states. She is gaining another 10,000 by excess of births over deaths—or a total excess of 30,000 persons per month.

You don't even need a pencil and paper to figure that up. You can do it in your head. A gain of 30,000 per month amounts to 360,000 per year, or, allowing for minor miscalculations, another million every three years.

That is to say, if the governor's estimates are not too far off, California will have her 20 millions in something like 30 years.

IT isn't too improbable. In fact, it isn't improbable at all. When you see how the southern part of the state is already bursting at the seams, you doubt if it will take 30 years.

HERE is a thought for Southern Oregon:

When California gets a population of 20 millions, our markets will be TREMENDOUSLY expanded.

ACCIDENT PREVENTION

By CHARLES V. STANTON

Nearly every day we read in our newspapers of accidental deaths of industrial and farm workers. The accident toll is extremely high, yet many fatalities and injuries are preventable. Many result from carelessness and others from improper safeguards or installations.

The State Industrial Accident Commission is engaged in a campaign to lower the accident rate. Inspectors from the commission seek out improperly shielded machinery, dangerous installations, etc. Representatives of the accident prevention division endeavor to correct dangerous practices, organize accident prevention committees in industrial plants and operations. Instructors conduct classes in first aid.

The campaign doubtless has resulted in saving many lives, but accidents still continue.

In its publication Safer Oregon, a small magazine devoted to its safety campaign, the commission lists some of the many accidents which were unnecessary.

Two workmen, while pushing a hand truck out of a cold storage locker, struck a partially opened door. The door swung violently against a pipe containing ammonia. The pipe was broken. One workman dove to the floor and crawled out of the fumes, but the other died. The cause of the accident involved both carelessness and improper location of the pipe.

A cannery mechanic was electrocuted when he attached a 110-volt electric drill to a 440-volt circuit. As a further temptation to fate he stood on a wet concrete floor while attempting to operate the drill.

A driver of a gravel truck stood on the running board of his truck because he couldn't see through a cracked and dirty windshield while engaged on a dusty road job. Another truck came out of the dust cloud and crushed him.

A mill worker lost part of one hand while trying to adjust a water cooling system on a resaw, while the machine was in motion.

Two roofers were laying out a roll of felt paper. They failed to notice that they had a spliced section. They attempted to stretch the roll, which parted in the center, causing one workman to fall over the fire wall, through a court skylight and into a shoe store. He died from his injuries.

Recently, a small crane mounted on a truck was being run through the gate of a plant. Its boom became fouled in some power lines and the driver was electrocuted when he stepped from the machine to the ground.

The list of accidents recited in Safer Oregon is a long one, yet the magazine tells of only a small fraction of the accidents occurring daily in Oregon's industries.

It is a human tendency to become careless while working around machinery or in the logging woods. The old saying that familiarity breeds contempt has no better application than in the field of accidents.

The State Accident Commission is endeavoring to "do something about it," but the mere printed or spoken word accomplishes little unless backed up by "on the ground" action. Greater vigilance can save many lives and reduce injuries. By pointing out the dangers of carelessness the commission is endeavoring to promote safety, but it can succeed only if its words of caution are heeded.

'Open House' Set At Methodists' New Parsonage

An "open house" Sunday afternoon at the new Methodist parsonage was announced today by the Rev. Walter A. MacArthur, pastor of the First Methodist Church. The parsonage, at 124 S. Kane street, will be open from 2 o'clock to 5 o'clock.

This unique house is one of the most "functional" in Roseburg. It is one of the most modern and adequate Methodist parsonages in the State of Oregon.

Confronted with the knowledge that most parsonages must "endure" for long periods of time—certainly true of the "late" Methodist parsonage in Roseburg the parsonage committee sought to develop a home that would be modern and up-to-date now, yet would not be out of style 10 or 20 years from now, MacArthur said.

The problem of situating a large enough house to serve as a church parsonage on the narrow lot that was available, was solved by deviating from conventoinal design and placing a portion of the house on a radical angle from the main section. This afforded larger rooms throughout than would have been possible otherwise.

To make the home as cheerful as possible at all hours, a great amount of glass—either as windows or glass brick—has been used in the wall areas. This makes for ample light in most of the rooms, as long as there is any light out of doors, MacArthur said.

Another feature included is the incorporation of a "rumpus room" or social room at the rear of the dwelling on a lower floor level. Employing a natural fall in grade, the house has two floors, both of which are on ground level. Social functions, both out-of-doors in the summer and indoors will be made possible by this feature.

The public is cordially invited to visit this commodious dwelling as the guests of the First Methodist Church, the pastor said.

Olympic Games Barred To Germany and Japan

LONDON, Jan. 23. —(AP)— The organizing committee for the fourteenth Olympiad closed the door to Germany and Japan today with an announcement that the two countries "would not be invited to compete."

Invitations for the Olympics, scheduled for London from July 29 to Aug. 14, 1948, will be mailed soon. Other former enemy countries, including Italy, are expected to be invited.

Belloise Knocks Out Hostak in Fourth Round

HOUSTON, Texas, Jan. 23. —(AP)— Al Hostak, two-time middleweight boxing champion of the world, found his comeback string cut in the middle today.

The 159-pound Seattle slugger last night dropped a four-round knockout verdict to Steve Belloise, New York middleweight.

Hostak floored the No. 7 contender for division laurels for a nine-count in the first round but a steady diet of left hooks dished up by Belloise set him up for the knockout punch.

Al Capone Now Given Chance for Recovery

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 23. —(AP)— Al Capone continued to show such improvement today that his physician said it was "no longer an emergency" and the family could leave if it desired.

After a morning visit to the ex-mobster's Palm Island villa where Capone suffered an apoplettic stroke Tuesday, the physician said barring unforeseen complications Capone should recover.

He added, however, that it would be two or three days "before I can tell conclusively about his condition. He's going just about the same and it looks like he's out of danger if there are no unforeseen complications."

Internal Revenue Aides Set Dates in Douglas

Deputy collectors of internal revenue will visit several Douglas County communities soon to assist taxpayers in preparing their federal income tax returns for 1946, it was announced by J. W. Maloney, collector of internal revenue at Portland.

The schedule includes: Myrtle Creek, Feb. 10 to 12, inclusive; Drain, Feb. 12; Oakland, Feb. 13; Sutherlin, Feb. 14; Glendale, Feb. 13 and 14; Roseburg, Feb. 17 to 21, inclusive; Reedsport, Feb. 26.

In addition to these places, the same assistance to taxpayers will be given at the internal revenue offices in Portland, Maloney said.

None Seriously Hurt as School Bus, Auto Collide

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore., Jan. 23. —(AP)— A Klamath Union high school bus and an automobile collided on an icy curve on Lakeshore Drive near here this morning, resulting in injuries to the driver of the car.

J. L. West, a carpenter, said he was unable to control his car as it approached the slow-moving bus on the curve. It crashed into the front end of the bus and was virtually demolished.

West suffered a blow on the head that rendered him momentarily unconscious, but he was not believed seriously injured. School officials said a high school girl and a grade school boy were slightly hurt.

There were 172,883 Caucasians in the Hawaiian Islands in 1945 and 163,000 people of Japanese ancestry. Other groups represented in smaller proportions were Hawaiians, part Hawaiians, Puerto Ricans, Chinese, Koreans and Filipinos, with 1,228 listed as "others."

Credit Assn. Will Meet at Roseburg On January 29th

Three sectional meetings of the stockholders of the Southern Oregon Production Credit Association will be held during the coming week, to elect one director and hear association progress reports, it was announced by Arthur M. Boner, secretary-treasurer.

The first meeting will be held Tuesday, January 28, at the Coquille Hotel, at Coquille. The second at Carl's Haven, Wednesday, January 29, at 11:30 A. M., at Roseburg. The third at Medford, Thursday, January 30, at the Holland Hotel.

Election of one director will take place to fill the expired term of president, Elmer R. Hull, of Central Point.

Record Year Enjoyed

Progress reports showing the association has enjoyed the most successful year since it was founded, 13 years ago, will be presented and A. B. Robertson, vice-president of the Production Credit Corporation of Spokane will speak.

The secretary said that the association, one of 505 over the nation, has 334 stockholders, who own more than $60,000 of capital stock. The area covered by the association includes five counties in Southwestern Oregon. Central office is in Medford with branch offices at Roseburg and Coquille. Other directors include: Raymond Lathrop of Grants Pass; Lawrence Luy of Medford; J. E. Young of Roseburg, and J. P. Johnson of Coquille.

Roseburg Meeting Dated by AAA For Southern Oregon

AAA committeemen currently are holding a series of district meetings to work out methods of concentrating the funds on practices shown by the conservation needs survey to be most necessary. The next meeting is set at Roseburg January 28-29 for Southern Oregon.

Funds available to Oregon counties for soil and water conservation work under the 1947 agricultural conservation program will be about the same as last year, according to E. H. Miller, chairman of the state PMA committee.

The state's share of the funds provided by Congress for conservation and use of land resources has been set at $3,000,000, slightly more than in 1946, Miller reported. The increase will be used in most counties to provide additional technical services to farmers in connection with practices requiring engineering and other specialized aid.

Miller explained that the funds allocated to the state are used to help farmers carry out approved measures to combat soil erosion and depletion, and to conserve water resources. County AAA committees, which have control over expenditure of the funds, now are selecting from a state list of 43 the practcies to be offered in each county.

Vet's Lost Eyesight Restored by Blast

CHICAGO, Jan. 22—(AP)—Richard Hebert, 22, today credited a finger of flame from a coal gas explosion with restoring sight to an eye that was blinded two years ago during a war blast in Germany.

Hebert lost all vision after a combat explosion in Germany two years ago. Medical treatment restored the use of his right eye, but offered no hope for complete sight. Physicians told Hebert that neither of his eyes had been physically damaged by the explosion, but that the blindness had been caused by shock. The doctors added that he might someday regain full vision, or that he might be completely blind in 10 years.

Hebert said that Saturday night he was firing the boiler in his father's tavern and "suddenly an explosion occurred. A ball of fire shot out of the boiler door and burned me on the arm and on the lid of my left eye, the one that has been blind two years.

"I didn't realize anything had happened until I started back upstairs. When I reached the top, I put my hand to my right eye to close out the light, and found I could still see. Then I realized why."

Farm Labor Head Reports Big Year With Minor Loss

Oregon farmers succeeded in harvesting a record volume of crops last year with comparatively little loss caused by labor shortages, according to a year-end summary of the activities of the O.S.C. Extension Service farm labor work just isued by J. R. Beck, state supervisor. The federal estimate of 4,658,000 tons of all field crops, exclusive of animal products, constitutes a new high for the state, 7 per cent above 1945 and 5 per cent above the previous record in 1943.

With the elimination of large wartime labor groups such as German prisoners of war and Mexican nationals, continued success this year will depend to a great extent on farmers providing housing either on the farm or in community labor camps, Beck believes. Major effort of the farm labor services throughout the West will be in recruiting and directing transient help from state to state and within the states to provide them with ample work and farmers with adequate labor at the peak seasons.

Last year 15,739 different farms, or more than 25 per cent of the state's total, obtained workers through the farm labor service. Total placements reached 186,912 for the year despite far fewer Mexicans and prisoners of war as compared with recent years.

Of the total placements, 26,983 were of women and 51,629 of youth. These averaged about three placements per individual, Beck explained. The balance, made up of men, included 7,483 placements of veterans.

Farm labor work last year was handled through 41 placement offices, nearly half of which are now on a year-round operating basis, Beck added.

A survey among out-of-state migrant workers last year revealed workers in Oregon from 36 different states. An estimated 15,000 total helped with Oregon's various harvests such as berry, tree fruits, vegetables, hops, potatoes and nuts. Only 2550 Mexican nationals were used and only 750 P.O.W.'s for six weeks in the Malheur beet fields early in the season.
