WILLIAM PRIMROSE TO PLAY HERE ON THIRD ANNIVERSARY OF ASSN.

Celebrating the third anniversary of the first concert of the Roseburg Community Concert Association, William Primrose, considered to be the world's most famous violinist, will be presented in concert Friday night, January 31st, at eight-fifteen o'clock at the Junior High School auditorium.

Primrose has been considered as a great musician by critics since he was a very young boy. He first mastered the violin, but his love for the viola was so great, that he took up its study to become the greatest of all violinists.

Everywhere that Primrose has appeared, his audiences have been most enthusiastic in his wonderful performances. His concert tours are always sold out early in the season.

Prior to making solo concert tours, Primrose played first violin in the most distinguished quartets and symphony organizations known today. He has been one of the most popular to be presented in radio and his fine recordings are treasured by many music lovers throughout the world.

Officers of the Roseburg Association feel that by bringing Primrose to this city in concert, that the very finest available in the music world today, will be heard and will also be a most fitting observance of the third anniversary of the organization.

Lounge Rooms for Solons of Oregon Dreams in Green

SALEM, Ore., Jan. 30.—(AP)—If you want to know what the latest is in decoration for the "Lounge of tomorrow," just ask your state senator or representative.

The two lounge rooms requested by the assembly to be used by House and Senate members in their leisure minutes are ready for opening.

The secretary of state was asked by each chamber to set up a lounge, and he did his duty promptly—and with color, definitely with color.

Both rooms are an interior decorator's dream of how to use green—there's apple green, lime, chartreuse, and just plain green, anyway, a great deal of green. Davenport in about the brightest scarlet you could find set off the senate lounge, the smaller of the two rooms, and offer a striking contrast to all the green effect about. Huge low coffee tables in dark green as well as smaller bleached wood end tables and the latest in floor lamps finish off the Senate lounge, as well as a nice thick carpet.

A rosier hue was chosen for the House lounge davenport, but the lime, chartreuse, and green are there, too, in all the large restful arm chairs. More of the bleached wood effect is used in the house room for the coffee and end tables.

If the green becomes too concentrated in both rooms, the weary legislators may look out the windows to the restful colors of nature, both rooms facing out over the statehouse grounds. But nature's colors are green, too, because of the green grass and trees on the grounds.

Secretary of State Farrell, said it cost less than $4,000 to furnish each room. The bills have not arrived yet.

Once-Great Mining Town Promoted As Sports Center

By HAL BOYLE
Aspen, Colo., (AP)—This mountaining mining community which once poured out wealth in a flood of silver is making a million dollar gamble to become the winter sports center of America.

Old timers and newcomers alike hope that a surface commodity—snow—will yield more returns in tourist dollars than ever was taken from the lead, zinc and silver mines which once made Aspen famous.

How much the Mollie Gibson and other great mines produced in the famous years from 1880 to 1891 is uncertain, some town historians put it as low as $40,000,000. Others set the figure as high as $105,000,000.

But after silver was demoted and gold strikes were reported in the Cripple Creek area nearer Denver, Aspen dropped from Colorado's second largest city to a hamlet of fewer than a thousand people.

"Some said this was a ghost town," complained one longtime resident, "but how could Aspen be a 'ghost town' with more than seven hundred folks here?"

Million-Dollar Fund Raised

Behind the new move to restore Aspen to a semblance of its old glory are a fifty-year-old Chicago industrialist, Walter Paepcke, board chairman of the Container Corporation of America, and a young Austrian ski expert—Friedl Pfeiffer, instructor at Sun Valley.

Paepcke was interested in rebuilding Aspen along idealized Victorian lines. Pfeiffer, who became interested in the region's possibilities while serving near here with the Tenth mountain division, wanted to develop it as

DAILY DEVOTIONS

DR. CHARLES A. EDWARDS

"Did not our hearts glow within us?" There are several significant things about a glowing heart that might be worth our consideration. First, a glowing heart, like a glowing ember is constant. It is not a burst of flame that dies away into ashes, but it has an even steady glow. Second, a glowing heart is capable of producing the same glow in others. It shares itself. Third, a glowing heart is pure, for by the burning, all dross is consumed. Two disciples on the way to Emmaus discovered the glow in their hearts after they had talked with Jesus The Master of Glowing hearts. The whole plan of evangelism is to set hearts aglow by bringing them into contact with the Master. If darkness is ever to be driven from the earth it must be accomplished by the light and warmth that comes from one who said "I am the light of the world." We need the brilliant mind. We need the glowing heart.

"Dark the Night of Sin has settled,
Loud the angry billows roll.
Eager eyes are watching,
longing,
For the Lights upon the shore."

ed their efforts and raised a million-dollar fund to carry out their ideas.

For almost a year a small army of workmen has been busily patching up abandoned frame houses, restoring the opera house and building the "longest ski chair lift in the world"—a 15,000-foot cable line with metal seats that can carry 275 skiers an hour to the top of Mount Ajax.

Aspen is cupped in a small valley protected from bitter winds by the backbone of the great Continental Divide. Pfeiffer believes this natural advantage will quickly make the area one of the nation's most popular ski centers.

"The snow is dry and powdery and lasts from November until the middle of May," he said, "so we will have a long season."

Paepcke hopes the well-stocked trout streams will help make Aspen a year-round retreat for sportsmen.

A gala three-day opening drew hundreds of sports lovers from Denver and the East and West coasts, and left the natives a little dazed from the weird and wonderful costumes they wore.

King Darius of ancient Persia is credited with establishing the first carefully organized provincial governments as an aid to the administration of his empire.
