some limp and shoddy discards from a speculator's back door. They gave him the bum's rush and told him if he ever came back they'd make dog food of him and sell him over the counter. That ended that.

If you'll track back 100 real American successes in business, you'll find about 99 of them founded upon dependable high quality of product.

KNOTTY'S Berry Farm isn't so far and his descendants got to the Forty-Niners.

The original Knott and his family crossed the plains with an ox train. He won through to the gold fields, and washed a moderate amount of dust out of the rifles.

But he was no hog. When he got enough to make a comfortable weight when he hefted it, he quit mining and went after a piece of land.

The site of the present Berry Farm is a part of that original holding.

At first he just farmed. Then he and his descendants got to growing berries. When the Boysenberry was developed, they specialized on it.

They have various restaurants scattered over the place, each distinct and characteristic in its atmosphere, and in its food. You look at the crowds that come out to be fed and wonder where all the people come from.

THESE Knotts, from the great-grandfather down, have indulged a hobby. Their hobby is and has been the re-creation, in so far as it has been possible within their means to do so, of the romantic past of gold-bearing California.

They have assembled and set up a ghost town of the early mining days, complete down to the saloons and the jail and even to the hawdy-house that was an inevitable part of the rough life of that day.

At the other end of the moral scale, they have a simple and impressive little chapel, beside a lovely little lake, in which by the legend of modern lighting the transfiguration of Jesus is re-enacted realistically before your eyes.

On the way West, the original Knott and his family were caught on a waterless desert, drove all night and during the night stood off an Indian attack. They have made a diorama of this—and it is a real work of art.

Your hair stands on end when, again by the magic of modern lighting, the redskins leap to the attack.

All this is free. If you wish, you can wander and look at the folding money scene. Here and there are museum-piece old music boxes, and if you are so moved you can drop in a nickel and listen to their tinkling melodies. But that is between you and your God. There is no urge to do so.

They make their money out of their eating houses and their stores where the products of the farm are sold. The rest is background—and you sense that its creation has been as much labor of love as shrewd money-wangling.

It is certainly worth seeing.

THE RIVER GLIDES ALONG

By CHARLES V. STANTON

Popular songs have had much influence upon our American life, as evidenced today by the fact that no one named Richard will open a door.

In our search for lore concerning pioneer post offices in Douglas County, we have learned that the community of Glide and the post office of the same name received their title from a song quite popular in the late 80's.

Mrs. John Laird, who had been appointed postmistress of a new post office to replace the station previously known as Mt. Scott, was puzzling her mind for a name for her new office.

Her young son was striving valiantly to master the then popular song, "When the River Goes Gliding Along." Mrs. Laird could look out upon the waters of the North Umpqua as they slid swift and deep through the rocky channel and her mind suddenly linked the tuneless efforts of her young offspring with the beautiful scene before her and the name "Glide" was born.

From unpublished historical manuscripts in the possession of Mrs. Anna Alexander, retired postmistress at Glide, Mrs. Lester Blakely has compiled much interesting information.

The first mail route along the North Umpqua River was established in 1877 between Roseburg and what was then known as Patterson Mill, now the Lon Smith property. Mail was carried once a week on pack horses a distance of 25 miles.

In May, 1897, the Mt. Scott post office was established on the Samuel Blakely place, with Mrs. Matilda Blakely as postmistress.

After a few years the Patterson Mill post office was moved across the river to the present DeBernardi farm, and later was transferred up the river to the Livingston place. Still later it was switched to Little River, being located on the Shrum place at the mouth of Buckhorn creek, with Miss Averilla Shrum as postmistress.

Another route was established Jan. 1, 1888. The post office at Oak Creek was revived with James Cox as postmaster, and H. L. Engels opened an office at Peel.

Peel was named for Senator Peel of Arkansas, a personal friend of H. L. Engels and a schoolmate of Mr. Engels' father, A. A. Engels.

Service by way of packhorse was maintained weekly for a number of months, then was stepped up to twice weekly, and finally advanced to alternate days.

The Glide post office was established April 3, 1890, in the Alexander grove, near the spot where the John Casebeer home now is located. Mrs. Laird, who named the station, was first postmistress. Later the office was moved to the present site, near which the North Umpqua and Little River merge—the only known place where two rivers meet head-on, a fact featured in Ripley's Believe-It-Or-Not column.

Other postmasters at Glide have been John Thomason, John Wright, Clifford Lilly, John Alexander and Anna Alexander. Agnes Moore, granddaughter of Mrs. Matilda Blakely and a niece of Mrs. Alexander, is serving as postmistress at present.

Interesting data concerning two post offices in the northern part of the county comes from Mrs. Fred Lee of Yonalla, following her interview with Mrs. Bertha Stock, a daughter of the late Mrs. Laura Applegate.

Mrs. Lee identifies Calvert post office in Scotts Valley. Originally known as Stacy and located on the E. J. Stacy place, about a mile northwest of Scotts Valley schoolhouse, he office was moved to the John Applegate place, with Mrs. Laura Applegate as postmistress. Mrs. Applegate desired a name the station Kelly post office, because it was located on the original R. M. Kelly donation land claim; but due to the fact that there were other post offices of the same or similar names in the state, the title was rejected, and the name Calvert was substituted.

Origin of the name is obscure, but Calvert is believed to have been a family name. A son born to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Applegate was named Calvert. The Applegate property adjoined the land claim of the Scott family from whom the valley derived its name. The Scotts Valley schoolhouse is on the Scott Donation land claim, and the Calvert post office was located one mile north of the schoolhouse and four miles east of Yonalla.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee now own the Stacy place, site of the first post office, and Mr. and Mrs. Minor Applegate own the Kelly place where Calvert post office was located.

Convicts 'Strike' for More Food and Less Toil

SAN QUENTIN, Calif., Feb. 20.—(AP)—Warden Clinton Duffy promised further investigation today of the latest stop-work demonstration at San Quentin prison after dispatching one convoy of 80 suspected ringleaders 110 miles away to Folsom prison under heavy guard last night.

Demanding more food and less work, jute mill workers sullenly refused to go back on the job after their noonday meal yesterday. They were joined by null and quarry workers. There was no violence. In all, 265 convicts participated.

Duffy asserted that San Quentin's 4,200 inmates eat "a great deal better than many American families—and they are not overworked." He blamed a "gang of young hoodlums."

About 200,000 people are engaged full time in the U. S. fishing industry.
