Truman Asks Funds for Relief Needs Overseas

come too late."

While the aid was asked for "liberated" countries suffering from the "ravages of war," Mr. Truman did not mention any specific nations.

Hope Instead of Despair

The President said that in some liberated countries, "UNRRA will have achieved its objective fully" when UNRRA's supply operations cease. He explained that means they will be again "self-supporting so far as the basic essentials of life are concerned."

But in other liberated countries, Mr. Truman said this is not yet the case and what remains to be done, while relatively small and limited in time and scope, is "none-the-less vitally important."

To leave the task unfinished, he said, would be to "replace hope with despair in the hearts of these peoples and thus to undermine the spiritual and economic stability upon which our own hopes for a better world must rest."

Scheduled Pay Hikes for State Officials O. K.'d

from Western Oregon.

The bill originally provided for one member from each of the four congressional districts, and one from the state at large.

Since Eastern Oregon is a single congressional district, members from that section protested it might have been possible for Eastern Oregon to have only one of the five commissioners, and thus be forgotten in road construction.

The same committee recommended passage of a bill to permit the State Board of Control to spend $2,000,000 for the new state office building to be erected across the street from the front of the capitol.

The building originally was to have cost $1,000,000, but higher labor and materials costs forced the estimate to be doubled.

Roy Mills, secretary of the Board of Control, said construction of the five-story structure would be started soon.

The money would be borrowed from the school fund, and would be repaid by rentals charged departments using the building. The maximum interest would be 3½ per cent, and would be repaid in 30 years.

The committee also recommended passage of a Senate bill to permit state employes to have group life insurance, and to permit deductions from their salaries to pay for it.

The committee tabled a bill to provide that prevailing wages be paid on all contracts let by the state, but the committee indicated it would consider it again in a few days.

The House Food and Livestock Committee decided to introduce a bill to tighten and clarify the 1945 bangs disease control law.

The law would permit county courts to order testing programs for beef cattle or calf vaccination programs in beef herds. It also would prohibit keeping untested beef cattle on land adjoining a dairy herd pasture.

Scheme Gets Results

Rep. Lieuallen, Pendleton, is convinced that a bill in the legislature can accomplish its purpose before it is even passed.

He said he requested the Game Commission to care for the bands of Elk which raid cattle food each winter. Having no luck, he introduced a bill to make the Game Commission pay for the damages to the cattle food and resulting from the elk raids.

But yesterday Lieuallen got the House to send the bill back to the committee, asserting it wasn't needed any more.

"I brought this bill out just to put a fire under the Game Commission," Lieuallen said. "Somebody stuck a fork in them this morning and found out they were done."

He said the commission is doing something about the elk.

The bill to include first class school districts under the rural school district law, which was passed at the November general election, will be the second big job of the House Education Committee, which has finished its work on the basic school fund apportionment.
