TOUGHT to have the Pacific islands, since we'd done all the fighting for them.

We're pretty sure she does mean to dominate Europe and Asia. Even that not necessarily mean war. We may be able to get along amicably with her.

HERE is a bit of good news: In a little town in Illinois the other day, a man was cited for a parking violation. He took his ticket and made haste to the police judge's office. The police judge said: "Why, you were only a few minutes over time, and you've hurried up here as fast as you could. Nobody is hurt. If you'll put up the nickel you're overdue, everything will be square."

The man was so surprised he gave $10 to the police benefit fund, shook hands with the judge and went away shaking his head, but happy.

THAT is good news because it shows that people CAN deal decently and reasonably and sensibly with each other and wind up relaxed and good-humored. It's a great pity it doesn't happen oftener.

HERE is a bit of the absurd news mentioned at the start of this column:

An Indian woman back in Michigan took her six-foot pet snake Nakomis shopping with her. That is out of the ordinary, which we don't tolerate readily, so the police arrested her for disturbing the peace.

Shortly after the trial, Nakomis died. The ordeal was just too much for her. "Strangers staring at her, camera bulbs flashing in her face, and so on, made her a different snake in one day's time," her owner explained to a sympathetic reporter.

IT often works that way. With people, as well as snakes. Staring crowds, flashing camera bulbs, autograph hunters, etc. Some can take it and some can't. Poor Nakomis was killed by too much publicity. People don't usually die under the treatment, but many, many of them are badly spotted.

THEN there is the New York "socialite" who was asked by Jose Iturbi to attend a dinner she gave in his honor at Miami Beach.

Illness, Iturbi explained, kept him from the dinner, but the "socialite" was asked, nevertheless. She told a friend that if the great pianist undertook to give a concert anywhere in her near vicinity she would "bust it up."

Over-ripe tomatoes seem to have been mentioned in connection with the busting up technique. Just what is a socialite, anyway, according to modern standards? One has the nebulous feeling that in the olden days aplomb in the handling of a lognette had something to do with it. Now a good arm with a tomato appears to be one of the qualifications.

Surplus Bed Linen Goes To Roseburg VFW Post

Roseburg Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 1154 has been allotted 1000 yards of surplus bed linen as a cooperative buying group. Commodore Harrison R. Winston announced today.

Approximately $50,000 worth of unused surplus sheets and pillow cases are being sold to Oregon and Southwestern Washington veterans' groups by the War Assets Administration. The articles then are distributed to members. They are part of a supply turned over to WAA by the Maritime Commission. Winston reported that the materials are expected to be ready for sale to local post members at tomorrow night's meeting at the Armory. He also stated that the annual nomination of officers

BORN 50 YEARS TOO SOON

By CHARLES V. STANTON

Nap Rice, whose passing brings sorrow to his great host of friends, was a man born 50 years too soon.

How Nap would have gloried in being a part of Roseburg's current expansion boom! He was one of those rare individuals willing to place civic welfare above personal gain. His city came first in his thoughts and his private business affairs often were noticeably neglected during the 14 years he spent as councilman and mayor that he might give of his time and energy to civic improvement.

He was of the venturesome, progressive type of citizen, contributing so much to Roseburg's business improvement. When he and his cousin, Mose Rose, built the structure to house their new furniture store, they were subjected to ridicule. They were at that time far from the center of the business district. A north wind wafted into their store from across the street the odors of a livery stable. Their store building was erected in the center of a block containing only residences. Certainly, it seemed the most unlikely spot for a store.

But Nap Rice's vision and confidence in Roseburg's future was fully confirmed within a comparatively few years. The livery stable was destroyed by fire and in its place was erected a bank building. Soon the intersection adjoining the Rice & Rice store was the busiest corner in town.

Merchandising methods in the Rice & Rice store were far ahead of the times. Their animated Christmas displays, in which they used waterfalls and ingeniously motivated figures (those were days before electrically-operated displays were common) not only drew attention from local residents, but even attracted visitors from out of the county.

Nap and Mose Rice were considered "crackpots" by some of their fellow merchants, for dabbling in such expensive, new-fangled ideas. They were 50 years ahead of their time.

As mayor, Nap Rice's great hobby was city beautification. Roseburg's muddy streets were a constant source of worry. He set street department employees at the task of keeping crosswalks clean.

He was a great lover of flowers and encouraged residents of the city to beautify yards surrounding their homes.

During his last term of office he commissioned the late Corinne C. Alley, then city treasurer, to plan and plant flower gardens around the city hall, and paid the cost from his own pocket. The beautiful hedge of roses and the brilliant display of flowers surrounding Roseburg's antique city hall will remain as an everlasting monument to his love of natural beauty.

Napoleon Rice saw the first railroad train to arrive in Douglas County upon newly-laid rails. He witnessed Roseburg's first electric lights. He talked on the first telephones to be installed in the village. In those early days of community growth, he could envision the future. He was constantly pushing against the restraints to progress, impatient with delay.

Men of his calibre are all too rare. But they are the builders; men who are not afraid to back their visions by taking chances; men who are impelled into positions of leadership because of their impatience with retarded progress.

They are the type of men we need in connection with today's problems. Nap Rice in his vigorous days would have gloried in tackling the many troublesome affairs with which we now are faced. He would have been one of the aggressive leaders. And his vision still would be far in the future, for he never dreamed of today but always of tomorrow.

will be made at the Tuesday night meeting.

Sale of Beaver Pelts Brings State Good Sum

The season's first sale of beaver pelts accumulated by the Oregon State Game Commission under its damage control program was held March 6 and $65,722.20 was paid by fur dealers for a total of 2,172 pelts.

The number of beaver taken was limited to those doing damage to private and other property. Landowners who had signed beaver management contracts with the Commission will receive one-third of the proceeds from beaver taken on their lands. The remainder of the receipts will go toward payment of the trappers and other beaver administrative and management expenses, such as the taking care of damage complaints in the summer when pelts are not prime by live-trapping and transplanting beaver.
