

Poultry Industry Views to be Aired At Oregon Session

Representatives of all part of Oregon's poultry industry will give their views on production adjustments and government price supports at a state meeting in Portland Thursday, March 20.

Individual producers, hatcherymen, and representatives of poultry associations, farm organizations and public agencies have been invited to attend, according to E. H. Miller, chairman of the state PMA committee, who called the meeting at the request of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Miller said that those attending will be asked for recommendations on government price support programs and how they can be used to help bring about post-war adjustments in egg production. He pointed out that egg production for the past two years has been one-sixth greater than domestic consumption, with the extra production absorbed largely by exports. The USDA, he said, wants to find out what poultrymen want to do to prepare for the time when the export market will be cut down or eliminated.

Culling Needs Cited

Poultry culling is practically a year-around process that begins with the selection of eggs for incubation and ends with the selection of new breeding hens for the following year, points out Noel L. Bennison, extension poultryman at Oregon State college, in a new extension bulletin, No. 673 on this subject.

While trap-netting is the only exact method of checking production as a basis for culling, it is not practical for the general farmer or commercial poultryman, Bennison says. The next way is to study and apply the principles of culling to avoid keeping at a loss the low producing and unprofitable hens in the flock.

Culling is profitable only when the flock is given uniform and sensible care, he adds. A daily egg record is a valuable asset in intelligent, accurate culling. Copies of the illustrated bulletin are available from any county extension office.

Eugene May Face Washington High For Hoop Crown

EUGENE, Ore., March 13—(AP)—The fans were talking today of a Eugene-Washington finish in the annual State High School Basketball Tournament, just like last year, when Eugene nosed out the Portlanders for the title.

There are, however, six other teams—Hood River, Marshfield, Sandy, Salem, Newberg and Klamath Falls—who survived the first round of play, and many of the 5500 on hand last night liked Klamath Falls and Salem, both in Eugene's bracket.

Klamath Falls, in fact, will give the acid test to the defending champions tonight. The high-geared Pelicans ran into a stubborn Lebanon team last night, but pulled out with three quick baskets in the closing minutes for a 63-57 win.

Salem, winner of the Big Six League, and victor over Eugene in an earlier meeting, walloped Roosevelt of Portland, 63-35, and qualified for a game against Newberg tonight. Roosevelt, a highly regarded team, gave Salem scarcely any trouble.

Newberg came from behind an 11-9 first-quarter score to defeat Hillsboro, 48-29.

Eugene defeated La Grande, 44 to 36.

In other games Marshfield High of Coos Bay romped past Molalla, 52-33, and Sandy eliminated Rainier, 50-40. Marshfield meets Sandy today, the winner to play the victor of the Washington-Hood River contest.

Pre-War Goods Back in Roseburg For Spring Debut

Close resemblance to pre-war window displays of spring merchandise will be unveiled tomorrow night by Roseburg merchants, with women's wear, particularly, holding a number of surprises for shoppers.

In general, all stores' shelves will have an unusual "fullness" lacking during the war years, because of governmental restrictions on the use of materials.

Local women's style shops report the new ready-to-wear designs are characterized also by a new "softness" to which an abundance of fashionable-spring accessories has been keyed.

Men's stores and department managers report interesting new materials ready for display at the spring opening in accessories and three-piece suits again, although the "two pairs of trousers" feature is yet a casualty of war.

Women's millinery, along with novelty jewelry, holds the spotlight in something entirely revolutionary with both featuring the latest "fantastic" designs.

Special displays that will add definite color to the opening in the women's spring and Easter apparel and fashions are shoes and moccasins of all types, shapes and colors, and Hollywood's latest fad, plaid slacks and belted dresses. All wool dresses will be available, along with boxy coats, rayon gabardine slacks, and dresses and other formerly out-of-stock goods of newest creations of American designers.

Masculine attention may center on newly-received shipments of nationally known brands of shirts, topcoats, hats, and colorful arrays of ties equal in fantasy design of the women's hats.
