Ample Supply of Legume and Grass Seeds Indicated

Present indications point to a reasonably adequate supply of legume and grass seeds in 1947. Compared with recent years, there'll be more alfalfa, lespedeza, orchard grass, meadow fescue, and redtop; somewhat less sweet clover, bromegrass, sudan, bluegrass, and crested wheatgrass; and about the same slightly more timothy, red clover, alsike, ladino and white clover.

Here's the 1947 supply picture indicated at present for the various hay and pasture seeds:

ALFALFA: Around 86 million pounds, larger than the 64 million of recent years, primarily because of a record 1946 crop. The northern variety will be relatively short; central and southern, plentiful.

RED CLOVER: 60 million lbs. about the same as last year. Record 1946 crop of almost 104 million will keep high, in spite of exports of 8.5 million pounds to Europe, mostly to the United Kingdom.

ALSIKE CLOVER: 17 million pounds, compared with 16.4 million last year. Outlook for the plenty of this seed unless demand increases more than expected.

SWEET CLOVER: Around 37 million pounds, compared with 41.5 million last year.

LADINO: 800,000 pounds, about 100,000 more than last year. Farmers would probably like to get more than will be available—the crop did well last year.

WHITE CLOVER: 2.5 million pounds, a little more than in recent years. 1946 crop of 2.9 million was a record, but good demand for the seed makes supply appear short.

ORCHARD GRASS: 6 million pounds, almost twice the 1946 figure. Biggest crop ever in 1946. Can be used instead of the comparatively short bromegrass and bluegrass in pasture mixtures, although not really a substitute.

SUDAN: 35 million pounds, compared with about 45 million in 1946. Crop of 208 million was about 500,000 shorter than in 1945. Looks as though supply will be sufficient unless we have an early dry summer, when sudan would be especially valuable and in increased demand.

Listen!

You don't have to wear that garment if it doesn't fit. There's no one behind you with a whip. Of course I'm just gambling that you have that kind of a garment. Maybe you haven't; but let me tell you of a few misfits I see on the street every day. First there's the coat with the deflected, ready-made droop to its shoulders. A little padding would perk it up and make it look much better. Next come the pants with the Dutch seat. A Dutch seat is really forlorn-looking indeed. The pants are far too wide in the seat and crotch and the excess cloth must go somewhere, hence it just hangs down and flops with a peculiar empty movement all its own. Of course, it's hardly necessary for me to say that I can remedy these conditions and all others concerning clothes.
