FROM the governors in session at Salt Lake City, Secretary Marshall gets a vote of faith and confidence in him as an individual, but no specific approval for his plan for the rebuilding of Europe.

THE governors are right. This is no time for the hazy generalities on foreign policy that are prescribed by traditional diplomatic usage.

UP in Hood River, the voters have re-approved a $100,000 living memorial for war veterans. The memorial, as this writer recalls it, is to be a recreation center with a swimming pool as its central project.

TO this writer, it seems that this is not the time for mere memorials. What we need is to get back into full production, so that there will be jobs for everybody and cost-of-living prices that people can afford to pay.

IF you are a farmer, and if because of bad weather, etc., the weeds are choking your crops, if because of poor fences the cattle are getting into your grain and trampling it, and so on, you don't spend your time landscaping your grounds and building swimming pools.

YOU FIRST kill the weeds and fix the fences. You work like the devil to get your money-making (which means your living-making) structure back into good running shape and after that you fix up your lawn and do the other things that go to make living pleasant.

It would be good common sense to proceed in the same manner with such things as war memorials.

PUBLIC EDUCATION

By CHARLES V. STANTON

The public hearing to be held in Roseburg Monday concerning creation of six sustained yield master units in Southern Oregon has the educational factor as one of its primary elements.

It is rather unusual, in late years especially, for federal agencies to work in the open. Common bureaucratic practice has been to work secretly, with plotting abetted by misleading propaganda.

The Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management, however, can hardly be called bureaus. They are agencies of long standing and have consistently kept the public informed of all major policies and activities.

Strong pressure is being applied against inauguration of sustained yield practices. One reason for objection lies in normal resistance to change.

A good case in point is the current fight of stockmen, who already have ruined millions of acres of western grazing lands, to force entry into public domain contrary to good conservation practice.

They would continue to overgraze, produce greater erosion and flood damage, destroy water sources, etc., in return for a few dollars in immediate profits.

We have been fighting for years in Oregon to save our fishery from the hands of greedy packers, who have no concern for the future.

The timber industry has left a path of destruction across the continent, yet a strong organization is combatting federal efforts to set up a system of control which promises to maintain a perpetual and stable industry by placing our supply of raw material on a managed basis.

Despite demands for protection of public domain, western stockmen have succeeded through political maneuvering in governing appointment of men charged with enforcement of grazing laws, reducing appropriations to a point precluding efficient surveillance, and otherwise defeating public welfare.

Commercial fish packers maintain highly paid lobbies and use every possible political stratagem to hold for themselves the fishery resource which rightfully belongs to the general public.

In the timber industry, however, many operators have become convinced of the necessity for sustained yield management and are giving their support. Opponents charge that supporters are the large and wealthy owners who propose to gain a virtual monopoly at the expense of the small, independent operator.

But sustained yield, we hope, is here to stay. It will continue to face organized resistance. Political manipulation may be used to combat the new policy. Sustained yield will be continued, therefore, only if it has public support and endorsement.

The president and district superintendent of the "Friendly" Southern Pacific — "Next Time Try the Train" — made a daylight trip through Roseburg this week — travelling by automobile.

Paper Shortage Forces Further Slash in Ads

PORTLAND, July 19. — (AP) — The newspaper shortage will cut the Oregonian to a five-days-a-week schedule for its classified advertising next week.

Presbyterian Unit Levels Volley at Church Federation

TACOMA, July 18. — (AP) — The tenth general synod of the Bible Presbyterian Churches of America today by resolution leveled a blast at the Federal Council of Churches in America, terming it "the voice of modernism, near Communism, and a radical pacifism in America."

The synod is one of America's newer denominations "started in protest to the liberal movement in other Presbyterian denominations."

Convened here in annual session, the group's resolution said the Federal Council, which it admitted represented 25 denominations and had 27,749,967 members — is guilty of the use of unbiblical phrases "in a most subtle and yet effective way to mislead and destroy our free land."

The "biblical phrases" included "the universal brotherhood of man and the Fatherhood of God."

A further target of the criticism was the "council's lobbying before Congress in behalf of legislation such as the so-called full employment bill, the E. P. C., other measures pointing in the way of their controlled system, its close cooperation with the C. I. O. in its legislative program, and its other activities along this line * * * designed to lead America into its new order."

The group elected Dr. Roy Tallman Brumby, pastor of the Tacoma Bible Presbyterian Church, moderator. He succeeds The Rev. Carl McIntire, pastor of the Collingswood, New Jersey, Bible Presbyterian Church.

Commission of 5 Named to Draft Aviation Policy

WASHINGTON, July 19. — (AP) — President Truman yesterday named a five-man commission to make an inquiry into all phases of aviation with a view to drafting "an integrated national aviation policy."

Thomas K. Finletter, New York City attorney and former special assistant to the secretary of state, will be chairman. Other members are: George P. Baker, professor of transportation at the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, vice-chairman; Palmer Hoyt, publisher of the Denver Post; Henry Ford II, Detroit, head of the Ford Motor Company; and Arthur W. Dare Whiteside, president of Dun and Bradstreet, Inc.

In a letter inviting the five to serve, the President said "there exists a danger that our national security may be jeopardized and our economic welfare diminished through a lowered aircraft production and a failure of the aircraft industry to keep abreast of modern methods * * *"

Citizens Submit to Dunking in Scout Benefit

MOUNT VERNON, Wash., July 19. — (AP) — Step right up, only three balls for a quarter! If you want to see the banker dunked, or some other prominent citizen dropped into a tank of water, just hit the bulls-eye.

Buying Spree Reveals Money Theft by Boys

SEATTLE, July 19. — (AP) — A wild buying spree by three teenage boys was over today and police said they had confessed stealing $250 in cash from the father of a 14-year-old girl friend last Saturday. One of the boys, 13, was arrested by juvenile officers after his mother reported he had been missing two days and had been "spending wildly."

Beetles, Aphids Raid Trees in Portland

PORTLAND, July 18. — (AP) — Leaves are dropping from 80,000 Portland trees in the Park Bureau says it can't do a thing about it.

Oregon Growers Guard Safety of Farm Workers

In line with the spirit of National Farm Safety Week coming up July 20-26, a number of Oregon farmers have been using their ingenuity in working out ways to prevent accidents, report officials of the emergency farm labor service at O. S. C.

Particularly is this true among farmers who transport labor to their fields in trucks. A farmer who has his truck loaded with a platoon of boys and girls of school age needs to be especially careful that no accidents happen, they said.

In the Clackamas county community of Boring, Fred Molt, a berry grower, has made a little stairway that can be lowered from the right side of the truck on to the ground.

Fred G. Thorpe of route 3, Corvallis, a hop-grower, also has his truck fixed up for safety. Youthful hop-pickers must enter the truck by stepping first on the right-hand running board, then onto a specially constructed step between running board and truck bed, and so into the truck.

These are Oregon examples of what is being done to cut down accidents on the nation's farms, where in 1946 more than 4500 workers were killed and approximately 300,000 injured, according to National Safety council figures.

The nation's truck fleet is comprised of almost 54 million vehicles.
