"appropriate" time to take over the all-important steel industry.

TO keep the situation clear in our minds, we must remember that the British premier is the rough equivalent of our President.

What happened in London this morning was PARTY business. It was exactly as if President Truman should announce a CHANGE in an established Democratic party policy—such, for example, as asserting that after all, maybe, we'd better have a little tax reduction NOW, instead of waiting until later.

IN such an event, we would KNOW that the Democrats were weakening on their program of continued high taxes and heavy spending. So we are warranted in concluding that the British Labor party is getting a little shaky on its program of socialization of British industry—at least to the extent of masticating a little more completely what they have already bitten off before taking another big bite.

That seems to be about what Attlee told his party members at the caucus, and by the narrow margin of four votes they backed him up.

IN any ordinary period, what the British do in the way of governing themselves would be none of our business. One of the foundation stones of our theory of politics is that any people should have the right to govern themselves as they choose, with out any meddling in by outsiders.

This, however, isn't an ordinary time. We have loaned the British some three and three quarters billions of dollars on security that is admittedly shaky. When the loan was made, there was little hope on our part that it would be repaid at any time soon. What ever hope there may have been then has dimmed considerably since. The money was lent with a fairly realistic understanding on our part that all we could hope to get out of it was strengthening of an ally whose aid we will need in the coming years.

British, under her program of socialization of industry, has been growing weaker instead of stronger. At a time when her imperative need is to increase her production heavily, she has been producing less and less. Meanwhile, she has been using up the money we loaned her at a pace much swifter than was anticipated. Of the original credit of three and three-quarters billions, she has less than a billion left. It is obvious that the remaining billion will be gone almost before we can turn around.

SO, you see, we are warranted in feeling that we have a pants pocket interest in what the British are doing with their economy. When, after producing less and less under their program of moderate socialism they begin to talk of wading deeper still into the socialistic pool, we get worried. The creditor is always worried when the debtor falls behind.

OUR idea of socialism is that it concerns itself too much with dividing up and too little with producing the things to be divided. Our hard-bitten thought is that you can't divide what isn't produced. Under the circumstances, what the British socialists are doing is DIVIDING UP OUR DOLLARS.

THE REASONS WHY

By CHARLES V. STANTON

While visiting at the Coast recently we had an interesting conversation with Albert Arnst, personnel director for the Weyerhaeuser Timber Co. He told us in confidence of his company's plans for installation of a container board plant at Springfield. As news of this installation has since been publicly released, we are able to mention the conversation, in which we particularly appreciated his views pertaining to wood utilization.

The Weyerhaeuser company's Springfield plant will draw much of its log supply from Douglas County. We objected to having our raw materials taken elsewhere for manufacture. Weyerhaeuser's plans are not as good for Douglas County as we would desire. Weyerhaeuser is the largest timber owner in the county. The firm holds a large volume of timber in the Calapooia district and approximately 50,000 acres, including the Pillsbury tract, claimed to be the finest body of merchantable timber in Oregon, located in the Coast Range and extending roughly from the Roseburg-Coos Bay highway on the south to the Drain-Reedsport highway on the north. This vast body of timber, for our benefit, should be processed here in Douglas County. Instead, the Calapooia timber will go to Springfield and the Coast Range timber will go to North Bend.

Why is Weyerhaeuser spending huge sums of money to build a plant at Springfield when Lane County's timber resource is on the road toward exhaustion, instead of in Douglas County where the resource is virtually untouched and even now is barely up to the overall allowable cut? Why should Coast Range timber be taken to North Bend for manufacture?

One of the chief reasons for this situation, in our opinion, lies in transportation facilities. Springfield offers rail competition, while North Bend has both rail and water facilities. Thus the manufacturer has better transportation protection than if his plants were located inland, at the mercy of the "Friendly" Southern Pacific.

Another factor, however, lies in the matter of utilization. Weyerhaeuser's Longview plant has been developed as a pilot laboratory in the utilization field. While meat packers boast that they use every part of a pig except the squeal, Weyerhaeuser officials claim they outdo the meat packers by using every part of the tree, including the bark.

Nothing is wasted at the Longview plant. Every scrap and all the sawdust goes into a commercial product. The company recently started the industry with its announcement concerning its utilization of bark from the Douglas Fir in manufacture of a soil conditioner, plastic filler, base for insecticides, substitute for cork, etc. Specially designed hydraulic barkers are used to peel the logs. A bark conversion plant is planned at Springfield, following the container board development. This latter mill will utilize waste in the manufacture of unbleached pulp, used in making cartons. It will be operated entirely on slabs, edgings, trimmings, undersized trees, chunks and tops from logging operations, etc. It is proposed to collect scrap from independent mills within the area. Mill effluents are to be given a recovery process, thus preventing stream pollution.

As Mr. Arnst pointed out to us in his conversation: Close utilization of this type demands a centralized plant development in which all the processes are closely integrated and mechanized for efficiency reasons, which explains why a number of scattered mills cannot be built to utilize the timber resources in Douglas County.

It further explains to us why a sustained yield policy of forest management is desirable, despite the threat of monopoly. With more than one-half of our timber resource owned by the public, the public should be interested in full utilization. Wealthy concerns, like Weyerhaeuser, can afford the large investment necessary for complete utilization. Thus, the small, wasteful operation is definitely on the way out of the picture.

Small operators, however, need not face a prospect of exclusion if they have the foresight to join in the modern program of timber utilization. By pooling their resources, setting up cooperative remanufacturing units and utilization plants, it is entirely possible that every mill now operating in Douglas County can be continued on a permanent and perpetual basis, while, at the same time, employment would be vastly increased, and the industry would have a diversity of manufacture tending to prevent the traditional financial ups and downs.

If small operators fail to get together, it will not be too long until Weyerhaeuser and a comparatively few other wealthy concerns have the industry to themselves.

When somebody begins to do that with our dollars, we are naturally uneasy. THAT is why we are watching what is going on in Britain with something of a proprietary interest. Before our cousins over there go any more deeply into the business of dividing up, we'd like to see them do a little more PRODUCING.

Cardinals, Brooks Both Muff Chances To Boost Standings

By JOE REICHLER (Associated Press Sports Writer)

It begins to appear more and more every day that the National League pennant race will be settled in the seven games which the Brooklyn Dodgers and St. Louis Cardinals still have to play with each other. Each club frittered away an opportunity to gain on the other as both the Dodgers and Cardinals were beaten yesterday. The Red Birds were the first to bow, losing to the Chicago Cubs in St. Louis, 2-1. The Brooks, with a chance to boost their three-game first place margin, fell before the Boston Braves at Ebbets Field, 9-2.

The schedule is very much in favor of the Cards. Although the Dodgers have two games less to play than St. Louis, 44 in all, half of them are against first division outfits—seven with St. Louis, nine with New York, and six with Boston.

Of the Cards' 46 remaining games, 17 are with the rest of the first division—seven with Brooklyn, five with New York and five with Boston. They have 19 home games left while the Dodgers' have 21. However, in inter-sectional warfare, they finish at home while the Brooks are on the road.

The Cards definitely are the hot club at the moment, having won 11 of their 13 games while the Dodgers have won only three of their last 11.

Other Results. The Giants and Braves, of course aren't out of the fight by any means, but they cannot establish anything like consistency with their meager pitching staffs. Knuckelbust Artist 'Dutch' Leonard won his 13th game against seven defeats when he pitched the lowly Philadelphia Phils to a 5-0 shutout victory over the New York Giants.

Blackwell failed in his fourth straight attempt to gain his 19th victory as the Pittsburgh Pirates topped the Reds, 3-2.

The Boston Red Sox reduced the American League leading Yankees margin to 11 games when they came from behind with two runs in the last half of the ninth to nip the Washington Senators, 2-1.

Gottel, 29-year-old right-hander, pitched a one-hitter as the Cleveland Indians swept a doubleheader from the third place Detroit Tigers, 3-1 and 11-0.

Moulder, who previously had won two games, was 2-1 in relief assignments, losing his first major league game as a starter when the St. Louis Browns defeated the White Sox, 5-3.

The Yankees and Philadelphia Athletics were not scheduled.
