Camp Fire Girls, Bluebirds Work And Play at Park

More than 90 Camp Fire Girls and Bluebirds from Roseburg and Melrose worked and played Thursday at the first Play Day at Umpqua Park, sponsored by the Roseburg Camp Fire Council and Guardians Association. The day was filled with a variety of activities and all started home "happy but tired" at 4 P. M.

Girls upon registering, were divided into five Indian tribes and were identified by Indian name tags. The classes or tribes were given instruction during the day in first aid, games and singing, out-of-doors, nature and handicraft and homecraft.

Mrs. Thella Webber was in charge of first aid assisted by Mrs. Tom Pargeter and Mrs. G. Bullington. Mrs. James Conn instructed the girls in several types of fire building and a flip-flop bed, assisted by Miss Betty Stidham and Mrs. Louis Neuriter. Mrs. Perry Thiele, Mrs. Bob Adams, Mrs. J. M. Boyles and Mrs. Evelyn Kemper were in charge of nature and handicraft. Mrs. Sidney Domenico and Mrs. Evelyn Cyrus instructed the girls in homecraft, at which time the girls made teepee tray favors which will be given to the Roseburg Veterans Hospital. Mrs. Frances Ellison, Mrs. Norman Stefarth and Mrs. Walter Allen led the girls in singing and games.

At the close of the noon hour Mrs. Ellison told an Indian story and singing and other stunts comprised a rest hour. A general assembly climaxed the afternoon, at which time each girl, guardian and volunteer worker were presented a leather honor.

The splendid turnout by the girls and assistance by parents and leaders will make it possible for the program to be broadened during the coming year, according to Mrs. Ellison, president of the Roseburg council. Soda pop was furnished the group by the Roseburg council during the lunch hour.

Roseburg Band to Play At Loon Lake Festival

Roseburg's municipal band will be host to a Lower Umpqua Valley picnic and water festival Sunday at Loon Lake, according to Lemuel Bitner, band director.

Program of the all-day festivities includes boat races, a band concert, and a picnic for all in attendance. This will be the band's next-to-the-last public concert of the summer. It appears at the Sutherlin flower and hobby show Sept. 6.

DANGER IN STRENGTH

By CHARLES V. STANTON

Celebration of Labor Day Monday should be accompanied by sober reflection, for the coming year promises to pose a new crisis in labor affairs. Organized labor has opportunity to improve public respect and confidence, or to lose much of its gain, achieved through long struggle. Labor's position at the close of another year will be determined upon how wisely its leadership uses organizational strength and responsibility.

There is danger in strength, and organized labor is strong. But, conversely, strength applied with wisdom and justice can accomplish unlimited good. Whether strength becomes a factor for good or evil depends entirely upon how it is directed.

Organized labor has been growing progresively stronger and stronger. It has expanded membership, has assumed important politieal position, and has built up reserve funds amounting to millions of dollars.

The fundamental purpose of labor organization is to improve living standards of laboring people. Organized labor may be justly proud of its achievements in that connection and merits appreciation not only from its membership but from the public as a whole, because upgrading economic conditions for one segment of our population means improved welfare for all.

But, while labor's record, taken as a whole, is good, there are some blots that can be erased only by a change in conduct. Present indications, however, are that future conduct will not be worthy of credit nor reflect the dignity and responsibility which labor should assume with its increased stature and improved position.

We have as an example labor's currently exaggerated campaign against recent national legislation. Membership and the public at large would be made to believe that the recent Taft-Hartley Act is a "slave" enactment. Labor is using organizational strength for "revenge" on those who supported the measure. It is using subterfuge and outright defiance to evade the law and, often, has connivance by employers.

Personally, we do not think too highly of the Taft-Hartley Act. It has a few good provisions, particularly in curbing radicalism and requiring union responsibility. Otherwise it is largely a hodgepodge of political fence straddling. But it is not nearly as bad as painted by labor leaders, nor as good as claimed by supporters. It is not of sufficient importance to justify labor leadership in diverting millions of workingmen's dollars from purposes of improving living standards to wage a war of revenge.

Nor is labor's production record perfect. We were given a demonstration during war years of production possibilities when sincerity of effort brought about full cooperation. The wartime record only serves to emphasize chaotic conditions since existing.

We have dissipated billions of dollars from our backlog of potential purchasing power—a backlog which meant more employment and high-level prosperity—because of continued bickering, strikes and slowdowns. Despite costly strife, however, our production record is high. But how much more we could have accomplished had we bent our efforts toward harmonious and cooperative production.

Oregon employers for the first quarter of 1947 paid wages almost on a par with the total amount expended in comparative periods during the peak of the war years. But it is obvious that had the coal and steel mines remained in full production, we would not be having as many workers laid off because mills can't obtain freight cars, for all railroads have large unfilled orders for cars. Had we been able to get automobiles and trucks and machines for industrial purposes, we would have made large increases in number of workers. But production was slowed by labor strife.

We have dwelt critically upon labor's shortcomings. Labor is entitled, however, to much praise. We are too prone to accentuate faults and overlook achievements.

Organized labor has given the American workingman the highest standard of living to be found in the world. Through its political strength it has created benefits such as have never before been enjoyed by any laborers in history. It has developed strength unparalleled in the past. In that strength lies the greatest danger to labor itself and to the nation.

We have dangerously introduced class distinction into our economic and political life. We speak of the laboring class, the farming class, the white-collar class, etc. Thus we create competitive pressure groups, each selfishly endeavoring to advance its own position at the expense of others.

We should have only one class in this nation—Americans. We should strive for harmony and cooperation; not benefits for one group which may be able to seize advantage through power.

Labor has strength. It should use that strength wisely and with a sense of responsibility. Its strength can be so used if the rank and file of membership will lead instead of being led.
