whereas the politicians (who want the people's votes) are preparing to give them the usual three-ring political circus.

CONGRESSMAN MALONEY of Pennsylvania, just back from a seven-weeks tour of Europe, tells a Philadelphia reporter that the Russians are using German and Austrian forced labor in a massive war production program behind the Ural mountains.

He says this Soviet war production campaign is a "tremendous undertaking" and adds that reliable (European) informants told him the Russians are making projectiles and tanks in their Ural factories.

IS that surprising? With what they have in mind, which is a communist peace based upon a world that is all communist, it would be strange if they weren't doing these things.

ON our side of the fence, this terse announcement comes from Morehead City, North Carolina:

"An undisclosed number of U. S. Marines will show off from this port tomorrow FOR SERVICE IN THE MEDITERRANEAN AREA. The laetherecks, according to a brief navy announcement, will be stationed on ships operating in Italian and Greek waters."

The dispatch adds: "The United States is pledged to resist communism in both these countries."

LET'S put it this way: L. GUERRILLA mess. So far, it is a GUERRILLA mess. Back of the guerrillas, over the Greek border in Albania, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria, are RUSSIAN TROOPS. In the waters of the Mediterranean sea, beyond the international limit of Greek sovereignty, are ships of the American navy manned by American in uniform, commanded by American officers.

ARE we doing right, or are we doing wrong? Well, generally speaking, if a big, tough-looking dog threatens to bite you, you'd better stand whatever ground you have taken. If you turn and run, the dog will be PRETTY SURE to bite you. We've taken a stand in Greece.

LETTERS to the Editor

Oregon Tax Situation Seen Getting Worse

SUTHERLIN—The lowering of the tax exemptions on incomes by the State is intolerable. The legislative representatives who planned this injustice should be reprimanded from politics. These jobs for bookkeepers and cost the taxpayers more and more. Everybody figures the take-home pay as wages. The remainder is just another tax on business.

The tax situation is getting worse and worse. Some funny things appear. In the Yoncalla high school the laborer gets more than the principal. Almost as much as the county inder. Our tax levying bodies raise budgets higher and higher without any regard for the taxpayers.

Roseburg has more police than street workers, I'll bet. If the firemen would put a little spare time around the City Library lawn and handstand it would be an improvement.

Apparently a lot of these public jobholders just think all they have to do is turn the spigot and the county treasurer will keep the barrel full.

THE POLIO DRIVE

By CHARLES V. STANTON

The Douglas County Chapter, Infantile Paralysis Foundation, is making preparations for the annual March of Dimes campaign, scheduled to open Jan. 15, and end Jan. 31. A. L. Henninger, county chairman, has named sub-chairman for every community, while Del McKay, city chairman, has perfected a large organization.

Needless to say, the Idaho and Southeastern Oregon epidemic during 1947 have officers of the Douglas County chapter worried. Malheur County, for instance, had 25 cases of polio resulting in paralysis and 50 mild cases in which no permanent crippling effects occurred.

The average cost of hospitalization and treatment, on a national average, is $2,000 per case. Here in Douglas County the Chapter's expense has not reached the national average, five cases during the past year being handled at costs ranging from $10 to $1,500 each.

Some persons, perhaps, do not know that the Infantile Paralysis Foundation, through local chapters, pay costs of hospitalization and treatment for polio victims. Polio strikes people in all walks of life. Expensive treatment often is needed to avoid crippling effects. Consequently, the Foundation program is set up to treat poor and rich alike, with no discrimination as to class, color or creed.

In Douglas County, in fact, the Chapter during the past year paid expenses even in sending suspected cases to hospitals to make definite diagnosis, meeting the cost of diagnosis though the reports, fortunately, were negative.

The county chapter has made detailed plans to meet an epidemic. If cases become too numerous to be transported to hospitals equipped to treat polio, an emergency hospital unit of the army type will be rushed into the community, complete with all treatment equipment, and a staff of specially trained physicians, nurses, and therapists.

The chapter has cooperated in supplying hot pack machines and other needed equipment for hospitals where Douglas County patients have been treated. A trained therapist residing at Dillard, is employed to direct continuing treatment for patients who need nerve and muscle education following paralysis. In one case, which will be reported later in more detail, the Douglas County chapter intervened to help a girl, bedridden for many years, who had been given up as a hopeless paralytic, but who is already regaining at least partial use of arms and legs.

Large sums of money are needed for reserve in the infantile paralysis fund. An epidemic could result in costs amounting to many thousands of dollars. Expense is cumulative. Paralytics need treatment over a period of years. In Douglas County, for instance, the chapter is aiding victims of whom some have been under treatment for five or more years. Eight persons are getting help in addition to those contracting the disease last year. Thus each year adds to the need for money.

But not all funds contributed to the Infantile Paralysis Campaign go into direct aid. One-half of all the money raised in the county is retained locally. The other half goes to the National Foundation. The Foundation, in turn, maintains a large reserve to be used for help in any epidemic area, for few communities can withstand the financial impact of an epidemic. But, in addition, the National Foundation supports numerous centers where physicians, nurses and specialists are given training. Grants are made to medical centers, universities, colleges, etc., for research. Pleading advances have been made in prevention, drugs, serums, and methods of treatment. Some of these are still in the exploratory stage. Others have been definitely proven to have value in preventing permanent paralysis and easing pain. Hope is held that the research program will result in prevention, cure, and elimination of the dread disease.

There is no reason to feel that Douglas County is safe from an infantile paralysis epidemic. We have had two very severe epidemics in the past. Overcrowded conditions, poor sanitation, low standard housing—trailers, shacks, tents, etc.—are conducive to epidemics.

The Douglas County Chapter has made its combat plans, but these plans can be executed only if amply financed. The Chapter needs money both for current expenses and for a large reserve fund—a fund large enough to meet emergency conditions until aid can be procured from the National Foundation, or, preferably, sufficient to carry through an epidemic.

No one who has seen the permanent effects of this disease can deny help to the unfortunate victims. We need to contribute to the Infantile Paralysis Campaign—The March of Dimes—with the thought in mind that our own or our neighbor's child may be the next to need the soothing hands of a specialist to drive away the pain from distorted arms or legs, and give hope that paralyzed nerves and muscles, through long months of sympathetic treatment, will be restored to usefulness. If we gain the personal idea, we will be most generous when it comes our turn to put our insurance premium for some child's future.

Don't Put Frostbites in Warm Water, Warning

CLEVELAND—(AP)—The worst blizzards may be over, but the frostbite weather is still ahead, and whatever you do with the frostbites don't put them in warm water, and don't put them in warm water.

Let them warm up in a room of ordinary temperature. Anything else, including the snow and the water, makes them worse.

These are the findings made on 18 human volunteers who subjected themselves to the most painful frostbites, shown at the scientific exhibition of the mid-winter meeting of the American Medical Association by Doctors Kurt Lange, Linn J. Boyd and David Wether, of New York Medical College.

U. S. Has Superior Navy to Win Any War, Nimitz Says

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—(AP)—Fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz says the United States Navy holds "undisputed control of the sea" and could establish floating air fields off any shore to attack island areas.

The former chief of naval operations, in a report prepared before he relinquished that post last month and made public yesterday, also predicts the Navy of the future will arm its carrier-based planes with atom bombs.

The United States is "relative-ly deficient" in manpower compared to Central Asia, East Asia or Western Europe, but could win a war nevertheless with superior weapons and naval air-sea strength, he said.

If war comes suddenly within the next several years, he adds, at-sea power would be the only way of quickly hitting back at an enemy. While invasion in some form would be necessary to win the war, it might not be necessary to occupy all of an enemy's territory or capital, Nimitz said.

Fading Comments on Effort to Recall Him

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 7.—(AP)—Back in Portland again, President James E. Faddling of the C.I.O. International Woodworkers has commented on the demands of British Columbia members that he be recalled from office. He said those behind the recall movement became dissatisfied when their candidates were beaten in a recent referendum election.

Faddling added that the rank and file members did not support the recall action. Incidentally, in Seattle the union's international organizer George Brown charged that a movement was under way to separate 10,000 Canadian members from their fellow members in the United States. And he severely criticized the reported action of the British Columbia I.W.O. convention last week which condemned the Marshall plan to aid Europe.

Preparedness, Not Cost, Paramount, Defense Head Says

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—(AP)—Secretary of Defense James Forrestal has advised Congress that preparing America's war machine for combat, if necessary, is the paramount issue at present—not how much the job will cost. Demands for economy, the cabinet officer said, must not be permitted, at this time, to compromise the effectiveness of the combat forces.

Forrestal's opinion was sounded in a letter to a House Armed Services subcommittee on purchasing. The committee had suggested the Army, Navy and Air Forces could save money by consolidating such duplicate facilities as storehouses on the West Coast.

But, wrote Forrestal, analysis of world conditions does not justify the consideration of economy as the dominant factor in reorganizing the organization and procedures of the military branches. In effect, the defense secretary said everything within reason was being done to economize during reorganization task. But, he said, the immediate, primary concern is to improve the combat effectiveness of America's armed services.

Lad Gives Savings for Christmas Ship Aid

SEATTLE, Jan. 7.—(AP)—Mayor William F. Devlin received $11 and a letter yesterday from a little fellow who had saved the money originally to buy himself "a super Christmas present."

Now the 9-year-old boy is turning in the $11 for the Pacific Northwest's "Christmas Ship" to Europe fund, and his letter said: "Dear Mr. Mayor: 'Here is a sum of money that I have saved for a long time. I saved this money to by myself a super Christmas present. A little car with a motor so to speak, a jet propell car. A month before Christmas I heard that the poor little babies over seas were deprived in newspaper and that the newspaper froze to their little bodies. So I changed my mind and want to give by $11 to buy real diapers for these babies. 'Alfred Jay Plechner Jr.'"

Alfred had a family inspiration for the urgent European need. He has a four-month-old sister.

Hoek added that the patrons would have to buy 30 glasses of beer each "to just break even." He said the program was not conducive to wise liquor control.
