(Continued from page 1) another pocket by increased prices of what we buy. We've gone through enough of that already to teach us that it gets us nowhere.

FOR that reason, this small-time writer can't work up much enthusiasm for Mr. Truman's election year tax scheme—which seems to be designed to catch votes rather than to cure the ills from which we are all suffering.

It seems to be a law of life that when you get into a bad hole you have to get out the hard way. If your foot slips and you tumble into an old-fashioned quarry (and come off without broken bones) you can lie on your back in the warm, pleasant sunshine and dream about FLYING out until you ultimately die of hunger.

But about the only way you'll get out of the hole (assuming that no Good Samaritan comes along and climbs down and logs you out of his back) is to shilly up the rocks under your own power, meanwhile sweating copiously.

If you've ever faced bankruptcy (as most business people do at one time or another in their careers) you'll know without being told that the only cure for having spent more than you can afford is to turn in and SPEND LESS until you get your business back onto its feet again.

In the long run, that is the only way that we as a nation can get out from under the burden of high taxes, high prices, etc., that we have piled onto our backs by spending more in past years than we could afford.

All the wondrous waving that professional wavers of wands can accomplish in a lifetime won't turn the trick.

BUT, everyone says, we've GOT to spend a lot of money abroad. How are we going to get around that?

Well, if we have to spend more abroad (as apparently we shall have to) we'll be obliged to SPEND LESS AT HOME in the meantime.

That don't be so naive as to expect any politician to propose such a thing as that in an election year. The first rule of professional politics is NEVER to propose doing anything the hard way.

Brazilian Communists Ousted From Office RIO DE JANEIRO, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Police fought today with Communists attempting to publish an edition of their newspaper in the wake of congressional action withdrawing the last vestige of legality from the Brazilian Communist party.

Four Communists were wounded. Pulver broke into the printing plant, using tear gas bombs and machineguns, when workers refused to halt presses printing an edition covering the action by the Chamber of Deputies last night.

Seven Grapplers Slated for Action On Saturday Card Luck of the draw will be a heavy favor in selecting a challenger for Frankie Stofack and the Tacoma grappler's defense of the Pacific Coast junior heavy-weight championship here in his new star. The former WSAC grid star won the title from Jackie Nichols recently.

When seven contenders crawl through the Roseburg, Albany ropes Saturday night and draw for opponents in a single-sumo tournament, one will draw a first-round bye and enter the semi-finals fresh and unscathed. He will have a definite advantage over the other six who must battle through three tough hits before gaining the right to meet Stofack.

Prizepots include Joe Lyons, popular Redmond stylist. Al Williams, battling Chicago pugilist; Tex Hager, talented Oregonian; Jack O'Reilly, champion of Australia; Sammie Cooper, "king of the willies"; Georges Demette, French Canadian, a former coast champ; and George Curtis, newcomer from Mississippi, who claims the southern title.

Stofack's challenger will have been selected in a match between Lynn and Williams, but Harvey protested that he won from Williams on a reversed decision and should have an equal chance. That resulted in Matchmaker Owen drawing in the tournament and giving Douglas County followers an attractive six-hour program.

Besides the right to meet the champion, the tournament winner will receive a $250 purse and a permanent trophy enough to cause most grapplers to commit themselves.

The program is certain to be packed with dynamite, and a crowd of 10,000 is expected to flock to the arena to watch the color exhibition topped anything for the season.

The hostesses get under way at 8:30 P. M., when all contenders enter the ring for the drawing. Elton Owen, who will referee, will be charged with keeping the wrestling within the rules. Three ringside judges will make the decisions if any of the 15-minute matches go without a fall.

Loss Incurred in Lunch Service at Schools Roseburg school pupils consumed 10,514 hot lunches and drank 18,167 half-pints of milk during the 18 school days in the month of December, 1947. Superintendent of Schools Paul S. Elliott reported today.

Total cost of the hot lunch program for the month was given as $4,624.49 with a loss of $180.07 incurred. Cash items were listed as food, $2,688.27; labor, $2,750.00; expenses, equipment, $6,180.10. Total receipts amounted to $4,316.11, including sales to pupils, $2,008.12, and government reimbursements, $2,777.99.

THE ACCESS ROAD JOB

By CHARLES V. STANTON

While considering roads needed by our growing lumber industry, particularly an outlet to a deep water port, we should not overlook other industrial road requirements. We should be giving immediate attention to the matter of access roads into government-owned timber reserves.

The volume of timber responsible for Portland's early growth, and which brought that city to its status as Oregon's metropolis, was not nearly as large as the resource of untouched commercial timber to be found today in the Umpqua Basin. We do not mean to intimate we expect Roseburg or any other Douglas County town to equal Portland in size, but it is a well known fact that Portland grew to 100,000 population almost entirely through the influence of the timber cut in the area it served, and later added other industries to bring about a larger city.

Today Portland's timber industry is almost a thing of the past. One after another the large mills in that area have closed down. Plants have been sold and dismantled, or are idle. Yet, one can stand on a high building, or on one of the beautiful observation points in Portland, and look out to Cascade mountains where there is an abundance of untouched timber. The forests one sees from Portland are national forests. Had federally and privately owned timber in the Portland area been placed under a planned cutting program and removed on a sustained yield basis, Portland today would have an industry as large and important as at any time in its history.

Here in Douglas County, where the industry is just in its beginning, we have opportunity to create and maintain such an operating program, providing we work at it. Our task is to secure construction of access roads into federally-owned timber, then set up a cutting schedule calling for removal of timber from high areas in summer months and from low areas in the winter, when snow blankets the mountains. By balancing our cut we can maintain a year-around industrial operation and, at the same time, keep our cut on a sustained yield basis.

Portland's future cut will be limited to the small amounts the government will release annually from its national forests in that region. The volume of timber so released will maintain only a small industry. But had that amount of timber been available when mills were removing the Columbia and Willamette Valley forests, a far better and more lasting cutting arrangement would have been possible. But it was not done because there were no suitable roads into the national forests, and because conservation of resources was not considered.

Douglas County should seek a full-scale access road program on the part of the federal government, and, in connection with the construction of access roads, should plan timber removal to coordinate cutting on both private and federal lands.

We have as our first task that of educating uninformed congressmen having no conception of the magnitude of our western forests, who know of trees only as they have seen them in parks and on golf courses.

We need a strong local organization, initiated and composed by interested timber operators. The organization should employ engineers having a good professional reputation with Congress and experienced in preparing data for congressional use. This data would show that money spent in construction of access roads is money invested in a financially sound transaction. The federal government owns more than 40 billion feet of timber in the Umpqua Basin. If stumpage values on that timber were to be raised only $1 per thousand board feet, the government would have a potential profit of $40 million. Construction of access roads would add far more than $1 per thousand to stumpage values, but even on that basis, should the government invest $20 million in access roads it would be assured of full return. In fact, its investment would at least be doubled in returning profits over a period of years.

If we can place this story properly before Congress and get an access road program under way, we need not fear that we someday will be like Portland, looking out upon the waste of the resource which built our wealth.

Sale of Season Tickets for Hoop Games Increased

The sale of season tickets for basketball games at the Roseburg high school gym so far this season brought $1,253, which represents 531 per cent of last year's total season ticket sales of $238, or an increase of $1,025.

Last year the money received for season tickets and for general admission tickets for the 1947-48 season was $1,253.43. This year, with only four home games played so far, season tickets and general admission revenue have surpassed last year's total by $1,025.40. The total this year to date is $1,732.40.

The average general admission income for each of the four games already played amounts to $17.35. At this rate, the total income for the '47-'48 season will be $392.25, with the 11 home games on the schedule. This will amount to more than double the amount taken in last season.

These increases were made in spite of the reduction in price of season tickets from $14 to $8, and general admission tickets from $1 to 50 cents, which means that the attendance this season has been much greater.
